Where the amendment is useless and of no substance —As the object of the present rule to enable the real questions in dispute to be raised on the pleadings leave to amend should be refused to the plaintiff where the proposed amendment would not help him in substantiating his claim (s) and to the defendant where the proposed amendment would not help him in supporting his defence (t) Thus where A sued B and finding that the suit against B would fail applied to join C as a defendant the application was refused on the ground that even if the plaint were amended by adding C as a party the nature of the case precluded A from claiming relief even against C In refusing leave to amend Vaughan Williams L J said One good reason for our not doing so is that looking at the case that he [plaintiff] tells us he would wish to present that case if presented by amendment would in my judgment also fail so that there is nothing to be gained by amendment (u) Similarly where A sued B for a libel and B pleaded justification and B afterwards applied to amend his defence by adding a paragraph which virtually contained a plea in mitigation of damages but was no answer to the action the application was refused (v) See notes to r 2 above Matters affecting damages

2 Leave to amend will be refused if the plaintiff s suit would be wholly displaced by the proposed amendment.—In Steward v The North Metropolitan Tramways Co (w) the plaintiff sued a tramway company for damages caused by their negligence in allowing their tramway to be in a defective condition By their defence the company denied negligence It was no part of the defence that the company were not the proper parties to be sued More than six months after the delivery of the defence the company applied for leave to amend the defence by adding an allegation that by a contract between the company and the local authority of the district the liability to maintain the roadway had been transferred to the local authority and that the company had ceased to be responsible for the roadway At the date of the application the plaintiff s remedy against the local authority had become barred by limitation If the agreement had been pleaded earlier the plaintiff could have maintained an action against the board Under these circumstances the application was refused It is clear from the above facts that if the amendment were allowed the plaintiff might fail against the company as they were not the proper defendants and if he brought an action against the local authority it would be too late That would be an injury to the plaintiff such as could not be compensated for by any costs that the Court might order the company to pay to the plaintiff The test as to whether the amendment should be allowed, said Pollock B is whether or not the defendant can amend without placing the plaintiff in such a position that he cannot be recouped as it were by any allowance of costs or otherwise Here the action would be wholly displaced by the proposed amendment and I think it ought not to be allowed.

3 Except in very special cases—Leave to amend will be refused where the effect of the proposed amendment is to take away from the defendant a legal right which has accrued to him by lapse of time (x)—The leading English case on the subject is Weldon v Neal (y) The facts of that case may be stated in the form of an illustration A sues B for damages for slander A afterwards applies for leave to amend the plaint by adding fresh claims in respect of assault and false imprisonment These claims are at the date of the application barred by limitation although they were not barred at the date of the suit The application should be refused for the effect of allowing it would be to take away from B the defence under the law of limitation and therefore unjustly to prejudice him We must act said Lord Esher M P on the settled rule of practice which is that amendments are not admissible when they prejudice the rights of the opposite party as existing at the date of such amendments Under very peculiar circumstances the Court might perhaps have power to allow such an amendment but certainly as a general rule it will not do so In Charan Das v Amir Khan ( ) their Lordships of the Privy Council said Though [the power of a Court to amend the plaint] should not as a rule be exercised where its effect is to take away from a defendant a legal right which has accrued to him by lapse of time yet there are cases where such considerations are out weighed by the special circumstances of a case Charan Das s case was such an exceptional case and their Lordships having regard to special circumstances upheld an amendment of the plaint allowed by the Judicial Commissioner of the North West Frontier Province in second appeal In that case the plaintiffs sued for a declaration of their right of pre emption over certain land but omitted to ask for consequential relief namely possession as required by s 42 of the Specific Relief Act 1877 The trial Judge and the first appellate Court refused to allow the plaint to be amended by claiming possession on pre emption since the time had expired for bringing a suit to enforce that right Upon a second appeal the Court allowed the amendment to be made and this was confirmed by the Privy Council There was no ground for suspecting that the plaintiffs had not acted in good faith all that happened was that the plaintiffs through some blundering attempted to assert rights that they undoubtedly possessed under the statute in a form which the statute did not permit The case of Kisandas v Rachappa (a) decided by the High Court of Bombay is another instance in which such an amendment was allowed on the ground that the circumstances of the case were so peculiar that it should properly be excepted from the general rule The facts of the case may be stated in the form of an illustration A alleging that he had brought in Rs 4 000 as capital under a partnership agreement between him and B sues B for dissolution of partnership and for accounts It is clear from the proceedings before the Court of first instance that though the suit was in form one for dissolution and accounts A intended from the first to sue only for the recovery of his money and B had actually pleaded to the money claim on which an issue had been framed and evidence taken The lower Court finds as a fact that the sum was due but dismisses A s suit on the technical ground that the agreement set up by A did not constitute a partnership between A and B A appeals from the decree and applies for the first time in appeal for leave to amend the plaint by adding a prayer for the recovery of Rs 4 000 At this date the claim for

17 money is barred by limitation. The amendment must however be allowed for the point of limitation could not have been taken if the pleading had not been defective No fresh claim was set up as in Weldon v Neal and B knew all along what A s claim was, though the suit was wrongly framed Similarly where the plaintiff sued in the first instance for possession of the books of accounts of his shop from the defendants who he alleged were his servants and stated in the plaint that he would bring a separate suit for the money due by them but subsequently applied for leave to amend the plaint by adding a further relief namely recovery of money it was held that the amendment should be allowed even though the money claim was barred by limitation between the date of the plaint and the date of the application for amendment (b)

4 Leave to amend will be refused where the amendment would introduce a totally different new and inconsistent case—In Ma Shwe Mya v Moung Mo Hnaung (c) their Lordships of the Privy Council said All rules of Court are nothing but provisions intended to secure the proper administration of justice and it is therefore essential that they should be made to serve and be subordinate to that purpose so that full powers of amendment must be enjoyed and should always be liberally exercised but none the less no power has yet been given to enable one distinct cause of action to be substituted for another nor to change by means of amendment the subject matter of the suit This proposition follows directly from r 17 The object of r 17 is to allow an amendment for the purpose of determining the real questions in dispute between the parties That being the purpose for which an amendment is allowed, no amendment should be allowed which would introduce a totally new and different case (d) Thus where a suit is brought against the members of a joint Hindu family for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of family property alleged to have been made by the karta or for damages namely the earnest money with interest and the karta dies pending the suit and the suit title is amended by adding as his heirs his sons and grandsons who are already parties it is not permissible by amendment to change the suit into one for money had and received or a one to recover a debt (e) The result of the English cases is thus summed up in Bullen and Leake s Precedents of Pleadings (f)

Leave to amend may be refused where at the trial or hearing the party seeks to alter the whole nature of his case by an unexpected amendment which may require further evidence to be adduced by his opponent

The above proposition may be split into two parts —

A Leave to amend a plaint should not be granted if the amendment would convert the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character

B Leave to amend a written statement should not be granted, if the amendment would convert the defence into another of a different and inconsistent character

We shall deal with these propositions in order

A Leave to amend a plaint should not be granted if the amendment would convert the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character—A institutes a suit against B B files his written statement At the hearing of the suit A finds that his case as laid in the plaint must fail and that he can only succeed on a different case He then applies for leave to amend the plaint Should the leave be granted? It has been held under the corresponding English rule that no amendment should be allowed if it would introduce an entirely different case from that which the defendant came to meet (g) or to put it in another form if it would change one action into another of a substantially different character (h) Section 53 of the Code of 1882 which dealt with amendment of plaints expressly provided that a plaint shall not be amended so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character That section has been omitted in this Code and the present rule (which is a reproduction of O 28 r 1 of the English Rules) now takes its place But the decisions under the old section on the point now under consideration are still good law and should be considered

It must be observed at the outset that a plaintiff must in general be limited to the case which he puts forward in his plaint There are however cases in which by some mistake or misapprehension the plaintiff has failed to state his case correctly and properly in the plaint In such cases the Court may allow the plaint to be amended (i) for if the amendment is refused the plaintiff may have to bring another suit and the object of the rule allowing amendment of plaints is to avoid multiplicity of suits (j) But the Court cannot allow an amendment if the suit is premature (k) and ought not to allow an amendment if it would convert the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character We cannot countenance the notion said Straight J that a plaintiff coming into Court with one case and hopelessly failing to prove it should be permitted to succeed upon another and that directly in antagonism with his primary allegation (l) The law prohibits every amendment that would change the fundamental character of the suit (m) It is not however to be supposed that if the fundamental character of the suit is not altered a plaintiff is entitled as of right to amend the plaint As stated by the High Court of Bombay the power to get a plaint amended is subject to the discretion of the judge and is not claimable as a right of the suitor in all circumstances (n)

Rules — The general rule is that any amendment allowed must be such as is either raised in the pleadings or is consistent with the case as originally laid and that the state of facts and the equities and ground of relief originally alleged and pleaded by the plaintiff should not be departed from This is the rule laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Eshen Chunder Singh v Shama Churn Bhutto (o) and this rule has been followed in numerous decisions of our Courts (p)

From the general rule stated above we deduce the following three rules each of which is borne out by the cases cited under it —

Rule I —Where a plaintiff bases his claim upon a specific legal relation alleged to exist between him and the defendant he may not be allowed to amend the plaint so as to base it on a different legal relation.

Note —Even if the legal relation between the plaintiff and the defendant remains unchanged the plaint will not be allowed to be amended if it completely alters the cause of action [ill! (7)]

Rule II —Where a plaintiff bases his claim on a specific title he may not be allowed to amend the plaint so as to base it on a different title But this is subject to Rule I and when the title by which the plaintiff claims remains unaltered the plaint will not be allowed to be amended if it completely alters the cause of action

5 A suit for rent will not be allowed to be converted at the hearing into a suit for use and occupation —A sues B to recover Rs 1 000 alleged to be the rent due under a lease executed by B The Court finds that B was in occupation of the premises during the period for which the rent is claimed but that the alleged lease was not executed by B At this stage A applies to amend his plaint by alleging that though the lease was not executed by B he is entitled to recover the amount for use and occupation of the premises The amendment will not be allowed (r)

B Leave to amend a written statement should not be granted if the amendment would convert the defence into another of a different and inconsistent character —As in the case of a plaint so in the case of a written statement the Court will not allow an amendment that would involve a complete change of front in the defence (s)

The application must be refu ed. To allow A to amend would be to allow him to present a totally distinct new and inconsistent case Clark v Wray (1886) 31 C D 68

5 Leave to amend will be refused where the application for amendment is not made in good faith—Leave to amend will not be given if the party applying is acting mala fide (t) as where there is no substantial ground for the case proposed to be set up by the amendment (u) Want of bona fides may be inferred from a great delay in making the application (v)

Amendment of plaint by adding new reliefs—The amendment of a plaint by adding a new prayer may or may not convert the suit into another of a different and in consistent character If the amendment converts the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character it will not be allowed If the amendment does not convert the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character it may or may not be allowed at the discretion of the Court In the exercise of this discretion the Court will not allow an amendment if the application for amendment is made at such a late stage of the proceedings that if allowed it would necessitate practically trying the case de novo (w) otherwise the amendment may be allowed (x) Thus a mortgagee suing for sale of the mortgaged property may be allowed to amend the plaint by asking merely for a simple money decree against the mortgagor In such a case the character of the suit is not fundamentally altered, nor could the defendant be possibly taken by surprise (y) Similarly a purchaser suing for specific performance may be allowed to amend his plaint by asking in the alternative for a refund of the earnest money (z) Where a plaintiff has framed his suit bona fide believing that consequential relief is not open to him and that he is entitled to a declaration the plaint may be allowed to be amended even in appeal by adding a prayer for possession (a) But leave will be refused if the frame of the plaint was a device to avoid payment of Court Fee (b) See also note above Leave to amend will be refused where the effect of the proposed amendment is to take away from the defendant

Amendment by adding a plea of fraud—It is the universal practice except in the most exceptional circumstances not to allow an amendment for the purpose of adding a plea of fraud where fraud has not been pleaded in the first instance (c). Where facts supporting the charge of fraud were disclosed in the cross examination of the defendant leave was given to amend by adding a plea of fraud (d) Similarly where the plaintiff sued on a mortgage and the defendant in his written statement alleged that he was a minor at the date of the mortgage leave was given to the plaintiff to amend the plaint by raising an alternative case that the loan was obtained by the defendant by the fraudulent representation that he had attained majority at the time (e) See Notes to O 6 r 4 Fraud and coercion that power must be exerci ed most carefully and jealously and with due regard to the position of both the plaintiff and the defendant An amendment should not be allowed when the suit has been pending as one for specific performance for a long period during which the defendant has been prevented by sec 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act 1877 from dealing with the property An amendment which leaves standing an averment that the plaintiff is ready and willing to perform the contract and the claim to specific performance does not make the plaint appropriate to a suit for damages for its breach (f)

AT ANY STAGE OF THE PROCEEDINGS

Leave to amend may be granted at any stage of the proceedings It may be granted on appeal [s 107 sub s (2)] (g) or even on second appeal (s 108) In the under mentioned case (h) the plaintiff was allowed to amend his plaint in appeal before the Privy Council In a later case where the suit was brought upon a mortgage of the property of a joint Hindu family and the suit was dismissed on appeal to the High Court on the ground that necessity was not proved the Privy Council refused to entertain a new contention raised before them for the first time that the plaintiff was at least entitled to a decree against the mortgagor manager upon his personal consent on the ground that it involved a radical amendment of the plaint Gajadhar v Ambika Prasad (1925) 47 All. 459 P C 87 I C 292 (25) A PC 169 The appellate Court may allow an amendment whether leave to amend was asked for in the Court below or not It may al o allow an amendment even if the Court below offered leave to amend but the offer was declined (i)

Mere delay is not a ground for refusing an amendment As a general rule however late the amendment is sought to be made it should be allowed except in the five cases mentioned above (j) Before the hearing there is as a rule little difficulty in ordinary cases in a party obtaining leave to amend on payment of the costs of and occasioned by the amendment and the application (k) Leave to amend may also be given at the hearing on proper terms as to the costs and the postponement of the hearing if necessary except again in the five cases mentioned above Thus leave to amend has been granted at the trial where there was a defect in the parties and it became necessary to amend the proceedings in the suit (l) It would also be granted where both parties knew what the case was and there was no surprise (m) In a recent Rangoon case A sued B on a promissory note for Rs 175 B denied execution of the note but admitted receipt of Rs 100 only No alternative cause of action on the original consideration was pleaded A failed to prove execution of the note It was held that the plaint could be amended at any stage of the proceedings by the addition of the alternative plea and a decree passed for the plaintiff for the Rs 100 after the plaint was amended (n)

ORDER VII

Plaint

Particulars to be contained in plaint

1 [S 50 para 1] The plaint shall contain the following particulars —

(a) the name of the Court in which the suit is brought,

(b) the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff,

(c) the name, description and place of residence of the defendant, so far as they can be ascertained,

(d) where the plaintiff or the defendant is a minor or a person of unsound mind, a statement to that effect,

(e) the facts constituting the cause of action and when it arose,

(f) the facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction,

(g) the relief which the plaintiff claims,

(h) where the plaintiff has allowed a set off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so allowed or relinquished, and

(i) a statement of the value of the subject matter of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction and of Court fees, so far as the case admits

Facts constituting the cause of action —As to the meaning of cause of action, see notes to s 20 Cause of action See also notes to O 6 r 2

Facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction —See ss. 16 19 and 20 and cl 12 of the Charter set forth in Appendix II

Relief which the plaintiff claims —See r 7 below and notes thereto

Relinquished a portion of his claim —See O 2 r 2 sub r (2)

Statement of value —See notes to s 15 Where the subject matter of a suit does not admit of being satisfactorily valued

2 [S 50 paras 2, 3] Where the plaintiff seeks the recovery of money, the plaint shall state the precise amount claimed

In money suits

But where the plaintiff sues for mesne profits, or for an amount which will be found due to him on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant, the plaint shall state approximately the amount sued for

Suit for mesne profits or accounts —See notes to s 6 Pecuniary jurisdiction in passing decrees

3 [New] Where the subject matter of the suit is immovable property, the plaint shall contain a description of the property sufficient to identify it, and, in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, the plaint shall specify such boundaries or numbers

Where the subject matter of the suit is immovable property

4 [S 50, para 4] Where the plaintiff sues in a representative character the plaint shall show not only that he has an actual existing interest in the subject matter, but that he has taken the steps (if any) necessary to enable him to institute a suit concerning it

When plaintiff sues as representative

Where the plaintiff sues in a representative character —Where a person dies leaving a will the executor named in the will may obtain probate of the will Where a person dies intestate his heirs may apply for letters of administration The person to whom letters of administration are granted is called administrator The executor or administrator as the case may be of a deceased person is his legal representative for all purposes and all the property of the deceased vests in him as such A suit by a person as executor or administrator of a deceased person is a suit by him in a representative character There are some cases in which the law requires probate or letters of administration as the case may be to entitle a person suing in a representative character to a decree in respect of the estate of the deceased In a large number of cases however it is not necessary to obtain probate or letters of administration to entitle a plaintiff suing in a representative character to a decree in respect of the estate of the deceased This will appear from the following statement of the law on the subject —

1 Europeans Parsis Jews and Armenians governed by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act 39 of 19[illegible] —In this class of cases no right as executor or legatee can be established in any Court unless probate has been obtained and no right to any part of the property of a person who has died intestate can be established in any Court unless letters of administration have first been granted by a Court of competent jurisdiction (p) See Indian Succession Act 1925 ss 212 and 213

2 Hindu Wills —Probate is necessary in the case of Hindu wills where such wills are of the class specified in s 57 (1) of the Indian Succession Act 1925 These are wills made by Hindus within the territories which on 1st September 1870 were subject to the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal or within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of Madras and Bombay and wills made outside those territories and limits so far as relates to immovable property situate within those territories or limits No probate is necessary in the case of other wills See Indian Succession Act 19 5 s 213 (2)

No letters of administration are necessary where a Hindu dies intestate see Indian Succession Act 1925 s 212 (2) But if a suit is brought to recover a debt due to the estate of a deceased Hindu no decree can be passed against the debtor except on production of a probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate see Indian Succession Act 1925 s 214

3 Mahomedans —Neither a probate nor letters of administration are necessary in the case of Mahomedans see Indian Succession Act 1925 ss 212 213 But if a suit is brought to recover a debt due to the estate of a deceased Mahomedan no decree can be passed against the debtor except on production of a probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate see Indian Succession Act 1925 s 214

4 Indian Christians —Up to the year 1901 Indian Christians were governed by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act 1865 Hence it was necessary where the deceased left a will that the executor should obtain probate before he could establish any right as such to the property of the deceased [Indian Succession Act 1865 s 187], and if the deceased died intestate it was necessary to obtain letters of administration before any right could be established to any part of the property of the deceased in a Court of law [Indian Succession Act 1865 s 190] In 1901 an Act was passed called the Native Christian Administration of Estates Act (VII of 1901) declaring inter alia that the provisions of section 190 of the Succession Act 1865 shall not apply to any part of the property of an Indian Christian who has died intestate with the result that in case of intestacy letters of administration were no longer necessary Those Acts have now been repealed by the Indian Succession Act 1925 but provisions similar to those above are reproduced in ss 212 and 213 Under s 213 a probate is necessary where the deceased has left a will Under s 212 no letters of administration are necessary where the deceased has died intestate But if a suit is brought to recover a debt due to the estate of a deceased Indian Christian, no decree can be passed against the debtor except on production of a probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate see Indian Succession Act 1925 s 214

Has taken the steps —In those cases where a probate is necessary and those are cases specified in s 213 of the Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 it has been held by the Privy Council that the grant of probate is not a condition precedent to the institution of the suit and that the executor or legatee may institute the suit without obtaining a probate but that he will not be entitled to a decree until he obtains a probate (q)

If the deceased has left no will and the case is one governed by s 212 of the Indian Succession Act 1925 so that letters of administration are necessary to establish a right to the property of the deceased in a Court of law the question arises whether it is necessary that letters of administration to the estate of the deceased should be obtained before the institution of the suit or whether it is sufficient if they are obtained before the decree is passed. The High Court of Bombay has held that if letters of administration are not obtained before the institution of the suit and the plaint does not show that the plaintiff has obtained letters of administration the plaint should be rejected on presentation but if the plaint is not rejected and the hearing has been allowed to proceed there is nothing to prevent the Court from passing a decree for the plaintiff if letters of administration are obtained before the decree (r) The English law on the subject may thus be stated in the language of the Judicial Committee in Meyappa v Subramanian (s) An administrator derives title solely under his grant and cannot therefore institute an action as administrator before he gets his grant The law on the point is well settled see Comyn s Digest Administration B 9 and 10 Thompson v Reynolds (t) Woolley v Clark (u)

Title of suit —See Appendix A (2) Description of Parties in Particular Cases the last two forms See also r 9 (2) below

Defendant s interest and liability to be shown

5 [S 50, para 5] The plaint shall show that the defendant is or claims to be interested in the subject-matter, and that he is liable to be called upon to answer the plaintiff's demand

Grounds of exemption from limitation law

6 [S 50 para 6] Where the suit is instituted after the expiration of the period prescribed by the law of limitation, the plaint shall show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed

Grounds of exemption from limitation law —These grounds are set forth in section 12 to 20 of the Limitation Act 1908 If no ground of exemption is shown in the plaint and the suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by limitation, the plaint shall be rejected [see r 11 cl (d) below] But a plaint should not be rejected merely because the exemption is not claimed specifically All that the rule requires is that the plaint shall show the ground of exemption (v) If a plaint does not show any ground of exemption the Court of first instance should allow the plaint to be amended save under very exceptional circumstances (w) But a plaintiff should not be allowed to rely upon a ground of exemption from the law of limitation for the first time in appeal (x) See notes to O 41 r 2 below

The High Court of Bombay has held that when a plaintiff does satisfy the requirements of this rule by stating what is in his opinion the ground upon which he intends to get over the bar of limitation he ought not to be precluded from taking another and not inconsistent ground should he be later advised that the latter is the true ground (y)

According to the Calcutta ( ) and Lahore (a) rulings a plaintiff who has stated one ground of exemption may be allowed to take another and inconsistent ground

Relief to be specifically stated

7 [New R S C, O 20, r 6] Every plaint shall state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims either simply or in the alternative, and it shall not be necessary to ask for general or other relief which may always be given as the Court may think just to the same extent as if it had been asked for And the same rule shall apply to any relief claimed by the defendant in his written statement

Relief —Every plaint must state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims whether it be damages or specific performance or an injunction or a declaration or an account or the appointment of a receiver or possession of land or relief of any other kind A plaintiff who omits except with the leave of the Court to sue for all the reliefs to which he may be entitled in respect of the same cause of action will not afterwards be allowed to sue for any relief so omitted [O 2 r 2 sub r (3)] But it is not necessary to ask for general or other relief

Where a relief is claimed upon a specific ground the Court may grant it upon a ground different from that on which it is claimed in the plaint if the ground is dis closed by the allegations in the plaint and the evidence in the case (b) Thus in a case in which a plaintiff claimed an easement by prescription and it was found that he was not entitled to the easement by prescription their Lordships of the Privy Council deal ing with the case as a special appeal decreed the claim on the presumption of title arising from a grant (c)

Where a plaint asks for more than what the plaintiff is entitled to the Court may give him only as much relief as he is entitled to but the suit must not be dismissed (d) Where a plaint asks for less than what the plaintiff must be entitled to the Court cannot give him relief in excess of the plaint unless the plaint is amended before judg ment Thus if a suit is brought upon a balance of accounts or for mesne profits and the plaintiff instead of claiming whatever may be found due on the taking of accounts and stating an approximate amount [O 7 r 2] states a specific sum as the amount claimed the Court cannot without an amendment of the plaint [O 6 r 17] pass a decree for more than what is claimed (e)

General or other relief —Under the system of pleadings hitherto followed in India it was usual to add in the plaint a prayer for general relief called g neral prayer which ran thus The plaintiff claims such further or other relief as the nature of the case may require Under the present rule it is no longer necessary specifically to ask for such relief Such relief may now always be given to the same extent as if it had been asked for provided it is not inconsistent with that specifically claimed and with the case raised by the pleading (f) In order however to entitle a plaintiff to a relief under the claim for general relief it is necessary that the ground for such relief should be disclosed by the allegations in the plaint (g) A plaintiff cannot be entitled to relief upon facts or documents not stated or referred to by him in his pleadings (h) Thus where a plaintiff sues for a declaration of title to certain property under a deed of sale he cannot be allowed to succeed on the basis of title by adverse possession (i)

With regard to the nature of the general or other relief which a plaintiff may have the rule is that if the plaint contains allegations offering issues on facts that are material the plaintiff is entitled to the relief which those facts will sustain but he cannot desert the specific relief claimed and under the claim for general relief ask for specific relief of another description unless the facts and circumstances alleged on the pleadings will consistently with the rules of the Court maintain that relief (j)

Where a suit is brought by a reversioner against a Hindu widow (1) for an injunction restraining her from waste (2) for appointment of a receiver and (3) for further relief the plaintiff if he fails in the substantial heads of his claim is not entitled under cover of a request for further relief to obtain a declaration that he is the next reversionary heir (k)

In a suit by a mortgagee for sale of the mortgaged property the mortgagee may relinquish his claim for sale and ask for a simple money decree though such relief is not specifically claimed This he may do under the claim for general relief The Court has the power to grant that relief provided the mortgage contains a personal covenant to pay the mortgage debt (l) The Court may also under this rule award interest on a balance of account from the date of the institution of the suit although interest is not specifically asked for in the plaint (m) But the Court has no power under a claim for general relief to grant to a pro forma plaintiff the relief claimed by the active plaintiff if it turns out that the pro forma plaintiff and not the active plaintiff is entitled to the relief claimed This may be explained by an illustration P sells his interest in certain property in the possession of C to A A and B then sue C to recover possession of the property B makes no claim and he is joined merely as a formal party to the suit The Court finds the sale to A void as champertous (Contract Act s 23) On these facts no decree can be passed in favour of A for possession Nor should any decree be passed in favour of B awarding possession of the property to him under the claim for general relief though the Court find that C is in wrongful possession of the property and that the person really entitled to the property is B B must bring a separate suit against C to recover possession (n)

Alternative relief —A plaintiff may rely upon several different rights alternatively although they may be inconsistent (o) provided that his pleading is not thereby rendered embarrassing A pleading is not embarrassing within the meaning of O 6 r 16 because it contains inconsistent sets of facts (p) Thus a plaintiff may in the same suit claim to have a partnership agreement with the defendant cancelled on the ground that he was induced to enter into it by the fraud of the defendant or in the alternative for a dissolution of partnership and accounts (q) Similarly a plaintiff may claim over the same plot of land a right of ownership or in the alternative a right of easement (r) A plaintiff may in a suit for pre emption base his claim in the alternative on contract or on custom or on Mahomedan law (s) He may also in such a suit set up an alternative claim as owner (t)

In Mahomed Buksh v Hosseini Bibi (u) the Judicial Committee observed that where a plaintiff sues alleging that a deed purporting to be executed by herself is a forgery the Court ought not to admit the inconsistent issue whether it was executed under undue influence These observations were explained away in an Allahabad case where it was held that a plaintiff may sue for the cancellation of a bond on the ground that it was a forgery or in the alternative that it was void for want of consideration (v) But quære whether the allegations of forgery and want of consideration are not inconsistent and embarrassing The High Court of Calcutta has held that a plaintiff may sue to set aside a deed of gift on the ground that she executed it under a fraudulent representation that it was a power of attorney or in the alternative on the ground that it was obtained by undue influence (w)

A plaintiff in a suit for specific performance may claim in the alternative that if the contract cannot be enforced it should be rescinded and delivered up for cancellation (x) A purchaser in a suit for specific performance may claim in the alternative a return of the earnest money and he may at the hearing give up his prayer for specific performance and ask for a return of the earnest money and the Court may direct the defendant to return the earnest money (y) In England in a case under the old practice it was held that a suit to set aside a transaction for fraud or in the alternative for specific performance of a compromise could not be sustained (z) It seems probable that the same conclusion would still be arrived at on the ground that the claims were inconsistent and embarrassing (a)

For a fuller discussion of this subject see notes to O 6 r 2 Alternative and inconsistent allegations

Relief not founded on pleadings—See notes under the same head to O 14 r 1

Events happening after institution of suit—Ordinarily the decree in a suit should accord with the rights of the parties as they stand at the date of its institution But where it is shown that the original relief claimed has by reason of subsequent change of circumstances become inappropriate or that it is necessary to have the decision of the Court on the altered circumstances in order to shorten litigation or to do complete justice between the parties it is incumbent upon a Court of justice to take notice of events which have happened since the institution of the suit and to mould its decree according to the circumstances as they stand at the time the decree is made (b) Leave to amend may be granted under O 6 r 17 for this purpose (c)

8 [New R S C O 20 r 7] Where the plaintiff seeks relief in respect of several distinct claims or causes of action founded upon separate and distinct grounds they shall be stated as far as may be separately and distinctly

Procedure on admitting plaint

Concise statements

(2) Where the plaintiff sues, or the defendant or any of the defendants is sued, in a representative capacity, such statements shall show in what capacity the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued

(3) The plaintiff may, by leave of the Court, amend such statements so as to make them correspond with the plaint

(4) The chief ministerial officer of the Court shall sign such list and copies or statements if, on examination, he finds them to be correct

Sub rule (2) representative capacity—It is not necessary to state in the title of the suit the representative capacity in which the plaintiff or the defendant sues or is sued although no doubt that is a convenient place to make such a statement It is enough if the pleading shows that the plaintiff or the defendant sues or is sued in a representative capacity (d) See O 7 r 4 and Appendix A (2) Description of Parties in Particular Cases the last two forms

10 [S 57] (1) The plaint shall at any stage of the suit be returned to be presented to the Court in which the suit should have been instituted

Return of plaint

(2) On returning a plaint the Judge shall endorse thereon the date of its presentation and return, the name of the party presenting it, and a brief statement of the reasons for returning it

Procedure on returning plaint

Return of plaint.—Where a suit filed in a Revenue Court is not triable by that Court the Court should not dismiss the suit but return the plaint to be presented to the proper Court (e) A suit against two defendants cognizable by a Civil Court as against the first and by a Revenue Court as against the second was filed in a Civil Court The Patna High Court directed the plaint to be returned for presentation to the Revenue Court and that a copy of it should be retained on the record for trial of the suit as against the second defendant (f)

At any stage of the suit. —These words are new They have been added to give effect to the undermentioned decision (g) in which it was held that a plaint may be returned to be presented to the proper Court at any stage of the suit even after the trial has begun and concluded But a plaint should not be returned unless the Court finds that it has no jurisdiction (h)

Court fee —Where a plaint is returned by a Court to be presented to the proper Court the latter Court is bound to give credit for the fee levied by the former Court (i)

Chartered High Courts —This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (1)]

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court whether the order is made by the Court of first instance [O 43 r 1 cl (a)] or by the Court of first appeal in the exercise of powers conferred upon it by s 107 (j) But no second appeal lies from the order of the first appellate Court (k) [see s 104 (2)]

A files his plaint in a District Munsif s Court The Munsif returns the plaint for presentation to the proper Court holding that the suit is beyond his pecuniary juris diction On the plaint being presented to a Subordinate Judge s Court it is again returned by that Court on the ground that the Munsif s Court had jurisdiction. Is A entitled to appeal to the District Court from the order of the District Munsif having regard to the fact that he in obedience to that order filed the plaint in the Subordinate Judge s Court? No according to a Calcutta decision the reason given being that by electing to file the plaint in the Subordinate Judge s Court he forfeited his right of appeal (l) Yes according to the Madras High Court (m)

The merits of an order refusing leave under s 20 cl (b) cannot be attacked in an appeal from an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court (n)

Rejection of plaint

11 [S 54] The plaint shall be rejected in the following cases —

(a) where it does not disclose a cause of action,

(b) where the relief claimed is undervalued, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to correct the valuation within a time to be fixed by the Court fails to do so

(c) where the relief claimed is properly valued, but the plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped, and the plaintiff on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp paper within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so,

(d) where the suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by any law

Change of law—Clause (a) is new See notes below Clause (a)

Chartered High Courts—Clauses (b) and (c) of this rule do not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction See O 49 r 3 (1)

Duty of Court to examine plaint—It is the duty of the Court under O 7 to examine a plaint before issuing summonses and to ascertain whether any cause of action has been pleaded and whether any relief has been claimed against the defendants and to determine whether the plaint should be rejected or returned for amendment (o)

Shall be rejected—This rule may be applied at any stage of a suit Therefore a plaint may be rejected under this rule even after it has been numbered and registered as a suit (p)

The provision contained in this rule that the plaint shall be rejected in the four cases mentioned in the rule is mandatory In a case therefore where the relief claimed was properly valued but the plaint was written upon paper insufficiently stamped and the plaintiff on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp paper failed to do so it was held that the plaintiff should not be allowed to amend the plaint by omitting the prayer in respect of which the extra court fee was directed to be paid and that the plaint should be rejected (q)

Rejection of plaint in part—This rule does not justify the rejection of any particular portion of a plaint (r)

Clause (a) where plaint does not disclose cause of action—Under the Code of 1882 s 53 it was not obligatory upon the Court to reject a plaint if it did not disclose cause of action Under the present rule the Court is bound to reject a plaint if it does not disclose a cause of action As to the meaning of cause of action see notes to s 20 Cause of Action on p 103 above

Clause (b) Where the relief claimed is undervalued—Even if the correct valuation would render the Court incompetent to entertain the suit the Court should in the first instance require the plaintiff to pay the proper court fee If the plaintiff does not pay the additional court fee the Court should not proceed under O 7 r 10 but it should reject the plaint If the plaintiff pays the requisite court fee and the Court finds that the value of the subject matter exceeds its jurisdiction it should return the plaint under O 7 r 10 (s)

11 Clause (c) Where a plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped—The following points are to be noted in connection with this clause —

1 Where a plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped, the Court is bound to give the plaintiff time to make good the deficiency This follows from the terms of cl (c) itself (t)

2 If the plaintiff fails to supply the requisite stamp paper within the period fixed by the Court the plaint may be rejected under this rule even after it has been numbered and registered as a suit The reason is that the power to reject a plaint under this rule is not exhausted when the plaint has been admitted and registered (u) See notes above Shall be rejected

3 A plaint is presented on the last day allowed by the law of limitation. It is written upon paper insufficiently stamped The plaintiff is ordered to supply the requisite stamp paper within a week The order is complied with on the fourth day after the date of presentation of the plaint This would necessarily be after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the institution of the suit Can the plaint be admitted under these circumstances ? Under this Code it can be [see s 149] Under the Code of 1882 there was a conflict of decisions on the point The High Courts of Calcutta (v) Madras (w) and Bombay (x) holding that the Court had power to admit the plaint while the Allahabad High Court held that the Court had no such power (y) The view taken by the Calcutta Madras and Bombay High Courts was that the Court had power under s 54 of that Code at any time and without any regard to limitation to fix a time within which the requisite stamp paper should be supplied and if the stamp was made good within the period fixed by the Court the suit was to be deemed to be instituted when the plaint was first presented and not when the requisite stamp paper was supplied On the other hand the view taken by the Allahabad High Court was that, though the Court had the power to give time to a plaintiff within which to supply the requisite stamp paper it must be a time within limitation and that s 54 did not give any power to the Court to extend the period of limitation This conflict has now been set at rest by the provisions of s 149 of this Code That section gives effect to the Calcutta, Madras and Bombay decisions The Allahabad decisions are no longer law (z) S 149 empowers the Court at any stage to allow a plaintiff to make up the deficiency of court fees, and provides in effect that when the deficiency has been made up the plaint is as valid as if it had been properly stamped when presented It follows from the provisions of s 149 that where a plaint written upon paper insufficiently stamped is presented to the Court on the last day allowed by the law of limitation and the Judge to whom the plaint is presented directs extra court fee to be paid but fixes no time for payment and the plaintiff pays the extra court fee though it be after the expiration of the period of limitation and the Court accepts it the plaint should be treated as if the full fee had been paid in the first instance and the suit cannot be held to be barred by limitation (a) In a recent Patna case the plaintiff was given a week s time in which to make up the deficiency Before the expiry of the week the Court closed for the vacation The amount in deficit was tendered two days after the re opening of the Court and accepted and the plaint was registered The period of limitation for the claim had expired prior to the date of the acceptance of the deficit It was held that the acceptance of the fee although tendered late and the subsequent registration of the plaint amounted to an exercise by the Court of its discretion to allow the deficiency to be paid on the day when it was tendered and therefore the suit was not barred by limitation (b)

The procedure prescribed by the present rule is not applicable to a case in which an appellate Court acts under s 12 of the Court Fees Act 1870 (c)

Memorandum of appeal insufficiently stamped—See notes to s 149 Appeals and Applications for review of judgment

Clause (d) —Suit barred by any law—Where a suit appears from statements in the plaint to be barred by the law of limitation but the plaint is not rejected when presented the Court may in a proper case allow the plaint to be amended at the hearing (d) Where a suit is brought against the Secretary of State without giving the notice required by s 80 the plaint should be rejected under this clause (e)

Enlargement of time—The Court may enlarge the time fixed under cls (b) and (c) See s 148

Appeal—An order rejecting a plaint is a decree [s 2 (2)] and appealable as such (f)

Where a plaint is rejected under cl (b) the order rejecting the plaint is not appealable when the order is based on a question of valuation pure and simple But if the order necessarily involves a decision of the category or class under which a suit falls even though it incidentally decides a question of valuation the order is appealable (g) These decisions turn on on s 12 of the Court Fees Act 1870

Revision—In a suit by A against B B raises the objection that the relief claimed is under valued The Court may in such a case either uphold the objection and require A to pay additional court fee or it may hold that A s valuation is correct Is this decision open to revision? It has been held by the Chief Court of the Punjab that an order directing a plaintiff to make up the deficiency in Court fee is not open to revision The reason given is that if the plaintiff believing the order to be wrong does not comply with it it will under this rule result in the rejection of his plaint from which he has a right of appeal for an order rejecting a plaint is appealable as a decree (h) In a recent Calcutta case the Court of first instance held, on an objection raised by the defendant that the valuation put by the plaintiff on his claim was correct The defendant applied for revision The High Court held that the decision was not open to revision on the ground that the case did not fall under any of the three clauses of s 115 and also on the ground that the decision could be challenged in appeal from the final decree (i) The High Court of Patna has held that an order demanding an additional court fee involving the jurisdiction of the Court to try the suit is open to revision and that the plaintiff is not bound to wait until his plaint is rejected for non payment of the additional court fee (j)

Review—An order rejecting a plaint under cl (c) of this section is open to review (k) So also in a proper case an order rejecting a plaint under cl. (b) of the section (l)

List of other documents

Production of documents relied upon—A horoscope does not require to be entered in the list of documents mentioned in sub r (2) The reason is that it is not a document to be relied upon as a probative document in itself but it is a record made by the maker of the horoscope to which he is entitled to refer for the purpose of refreshing his memory in the witness box (n)

Failure to produce documents—The penalty for not producing the documents referred to in this rule is that prescribed in r 18 below and not the rejection of the plaint (o)

Loss of document after production—Where a promissory note sued upon was produced and delivered to the Court as required by this rule but subsequently disappeared from the file the Judicial Committee held that the plaintiff was entitled to give secondary evidence under s 65 (2) of the Evidence Act 1872 without showing how it disappeared (p)

17 [S 62] (1) Save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891, where the document on which the plaintiff sues is an entry in a shop book or other account in his possession or power the plaintiff shall produce the book or account at the time of filing the plaint, together with a copy of the entry on which he relies

Production of shop book

(2) The Court, or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall forthwith mark the document for the purpose of identification, and, after examining and comparing the copy with the original, shall, if it is found correct, certify it to be so, and return the book to the plaintiff and cause the copy to be filed

Original entry to be marked and returned

Bankers Books Evidence Act 18 of 1891—The Bankers Books Evidence Act provides a special mode of proof of entries in bankers books by dispensing with the production of the books S 4 of the Act provides that a certified copy of any entry in a banker s book is to be received as prima facie evidence of the existence of such entry and that it should be admitted as evidence of the matter contained therein to the same extent as the original entry

18 [S 63] (1) A document which ought to be produced in Court by the plaintiff when the plaint is presented or to be entered in the list to be added or annexed to the plaint, and which is not produced or entered accordingly, shall not, without the leave of the Court, be received in evidence on his behalf at the hearing of the suit

Inadmissibility of document not produced when plaint filed

(2) Nothing in this rule applies to documents produced for cross examination of the defendant s witnesses or in answer to any case set up by the defendant or handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory

18 In what cases leave may be granted under this rule—The object of rr 14 and 18 is to provide against false documents being set up after the institution of a suit In those cases therefore where there is no doubt of the existence of a document at the date of the suit the Court should as a general rule admit the document in evidence though it was not produced with the plaint or entered in the list of documents annexed to the plaint as required by r 14 (q) But the Court may even in such a case refuse to receive it in evidence if it is produced at a very late stage of the proceedings e g ten years after the date of the suit and a day before the judgment was delivered as was done in the undermentioned case (r)

ORDER VIII

Written Statement and Set off

2 1 [S 110] The defendant may, and, if so required by the Court, shall, at or before the first hearing or within such time as the Court may permit, present a written statement of his defence

Written statement

Written statement—The written statement must contain and contain only a statement in a concise form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his defence but not the evidence by which those facts are to be proved (O 6 r 2) A defendant may by his written statement raise as many distinct and separate and therefore inconsistent defences as he may think proper provided the pleading is not embarrassing (s) A written statement is not embarrassing within the meaning of O 6 r 16 merely because it sets up inconsistent defences (t) But where the defendant relies upon several distinct grounds of defence they must be stated separately and distinctly (r 7 below) See notes to O 6 r 2 Alternate and inconsistent allegations

2 [New R S C, O 19, r 15] The defendant must raise by his pleading all matters which show the suit not to be maintainable, or that the transaction is either void or voidable in point of law, and all such grounds of defence as, if not raised, would be likely to take the opposite party by surprise, or would raise issues of fact not arising out of the plaint, as, for instance, fraud, limitation, release, payment, performance, or facts showing illegality

New facts must be specially pleaded

Fraud—See notes to O 6 r 4 Fraud and coercion

Facts showing illegality—When a plaintiff sues upon a bond and the defence is that there was no consideration, the Court should not entertain the plea that the consideration was unlawful e g stifling a criminal prosecution if it is raised for the first time in the argument of counsel at the close of the hearing The illegality of the consideration must be specifically pleaded (u) See notes to O 6 r 8

Limitation —In India a suit instituted after the expiry of the period of limitation shall be dismissed although limitation has not been set up as a defence Limitation Act 1908 s 3 In England limitation must be specifically set up as a defence

Claim against joint contractors for breach —Where in a suit against joint contractors separate defences are put in a successful defence pleaded and proved by one only ennures for the benefit of all (t)

3 [New R S C, O 19, r 17] It shall not be sufficient for a defendant in his written statement to deny generally the grounds alleged by the plaintiff, but the defendant must deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth except damages

Denial to be specific

Deal specifically with each allegation of fact —The defendant must take each fact which is alleged against him separately and say that he admits it or denies it or does not admit it It is not merely denial which is meant but the rule covers non admission for [the defendant] is to deal specifically with every allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth (w) Every allegation of fact in the plaint will be taken to be admitted if it is not denied specifically or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted (r 5)

A defendant ought not to deny by his written statement plain and acknowledged facts which it is neither to his interest nor in his power to disprove (x) nor should he plead to any matter which is not alleged against him (y) See notes to O 6 r 2 Facts not yet material to a case

Except damages —It is not necessary for a defendant in a suit for damages to deny specifically the damages it is quite sufficient if he pleads generally to the damages (z) See notes to O 6 r 2 Matters affecting damages

4 [New R S C, O 19 r 21] Where a defendant denies an allegation of fact in the plaint, he must not do so evasively, but answer the point of substance Thus, if it is alleged that he received a certain sum of money, it shall not be sufficient to deny that he received that particular amount, but he must deny that he received that sum or any part thereof or else set out how much he received And if an allegation is made with divers circumstances, it shall not be sufficient to deny it along with those circumstances

Evasive denial

Evasive denial —Where the plaintiff sets up an agreement and the defendant denies that the terms of the agreement between himself and the plaintiff were definitely agreed upon as alleged the denial is evasive He [defendant] is bound to deny that any agreement or any terms of arrangement were ever come to if that is what he means if he does not mean that he should say that there were no terms of arrangement come to except the following terms and then state what the terms were otherwise there is no specific denial at all (a) Similarly where the plaint alleges that the defendant offered to the plaintiff s agent a bribe of Rs 500 on 17th July 1908 at the defendant s office it is an evasive traverse for the defendant to plead the defendant did not offer to the plaintiff s agent a bribe of Rs 500 on 17th July 1908 at his office for the defendant might have offered any other sum on another day and in another place Here the point of substance is that a bribe was offered The details as to the amount time and place are only circumstances The defendant should plead that he never offered a bribe of Rs 500 or any other sum (b) Where a denial is evasive leave to amend may be given under O 6 r 17 unless the Court is satisfied that the defendant was acting mala fide (c)

5 [New R S C, O 19, r 13] Every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication, or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability

Specific denial

Provided that the Court may in its discretion require any fact so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission

Admissions of fact in pleadings —The first paragraph of this rule states what amounts to admissions of fact in a pleading Rule 3 requires that the defendant must deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth. The present rule provides that every allegation of fact in the plaint if not denied in the written statement shall be taken to be admitted by the defendant (d) In Rutter v Tregent (e) the statement of claim stated (paragraphs 1 2 and 3) the original mortgage and the assignment by the mortgagees to the plaintiff in which the mortgagor had joined (paragraphs 4 and 5) the charges created by the mortgagor subsequent to the assignment to the plaintiff of the first mortgage and (paragraph 6) the amount of principal money with interest due to the plaintiff By their statement of defence the defendants stated that they did not admit the correctness of the statements set forth in paragraphs 1 2 3 and 6 of the plaintiff s statement of claim and required proof thereof Defendant the mortgagor admitted that the subsequent charges were made as stated in paragraphs 4 and 5 of the statement of claim Upon a motion for judgment as upon admission of facts in the pleadings it was held that there was no sufficient denial of the facts alleged by the plaintiff and that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for foreclosure Bacon, V C said The defendants did not admit the correctness of the statements contained in the statement of claim but they ought to state in what respect they disputed them Similarly where a defendant simply puts the plaintiff to proof of the several allegations in the plaint he will be deemed to have admitted the facts alleged in the plaint (f) Where in a suit for the recovery of money the plaintiff relies in his plaint upon a letter written by the defendant to save the bar of limitation and all that the defendant says in his written statement as to the letter is the suit is not saved by the letter put in from the bar of limitation the letter must be taken as admitted and it need not be proved by the plaintiff (g) But where in a suit by the reversioner of a deceased Hindu to recover possession of properties alienated by the widow of the deceased the defendants pleaded that they did not admit that the widow died on the date stated in the plaint and further stated that the suit was barred by limitation and an issue was framed as to the date of the widow's death it was held that there was no admission by the defendants of the date of the widow's death merely because they did not state in their written statement the date on which according to their case the widow died (h)

A plaintiff who claims a decree must prove all the material facts on which he relies in support of his claim The importance of the present rule lies in this that since facts which have been admitted need not be proved it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove facts which have been expressly admitted by the defendant or which must be taken to have been admitted by him within the meaning of this rule (see Evidence Act 1872 s 58) The admission itself being a proof no other proof is necessary In the case however of facts which may be taken to be admitted by the defendant within the meaning of this rule the Court may in its discretion require any facts so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission That is to say the Court may require the plaintiff to adduce such proof of the fact as it would have been necessary for him to adduce if no such admission had been made This power which has been conferred upon the Court by the proviso to the rule is not new The matter it will be seen is one of evidence and a similar power is contained in the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872 The proviso to the rule in fact is a reproduction of the proviso to section 58 of the Evidence Act That section runs as follows —

> No fact need be proved in any proceeding which the parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing or which before the hearing they agree to admit by any writing under their hands or which by any rule of pleading in force at the time they are deemed to have admitted by their pleadings Provided that the Court may in its discretion require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions

The proviso to section 58 as well as the proviso to the present rule indicates the intention of the Legislature that pleadings in India ought not to be construed with the same strictness as in England. Upon this principle the defendant has been allowed under special circumstances to traverse at the hearing allegations in the plaint which he had omitted to traverse in his written statement (i) The rule of pleadings in England is very stringent According to that rule a defendant who omits to traverse in his defence any allegation of fact in the statement of claim is not allowed to traverse that fact at the hearing The fact will be taken to be admitted by him and the Court has no power to require the plaintiff to prove it in any case Strike out the proviso to the present rule and you have the rule of English law In fact the first paragraph of this rule is a reproduction of O 19 r 13 of the English Rules made under the Judicature Acts The proviso has been added to modify the rigour of that rule

But though pleadings in India are not to be construed as strictly as in England neither party will be allowed to set up at the hearing an entirely new and inconsistent case The plaintiff must be held to the state of facts alleged in his plaint or consistent therewith (j) Similarly the defendant must be held to the state of facts alleged in his written statement or consistent therewith (k)

Omission to file written statement.—This rule applies only where a pleading has been put in by the defendant. Omission to file a written statement does not amount to an admission of the facts stated in the plaint (l).

6 [S 111] (1) Where in a suit for the recovery of money the defendant claims to set off against the plaintiff's demand any ascertained sum of money legally recoverable by him from the plaintiff, not exceeding the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, and both parties fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit, the defendant may, at the first hearing of the suit, but not afterwards unless permitted by the Court, present a written statement containing the particulars of the debt sought to be set off.

Particulars of set-off to be given in written statement

(2) The written statement shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross suit so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in respect both of the original claim and of the set off; but this shall not affect the lien, upon the amount decreed, of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree.

Effect of set-off

(3) The rules relating to a written statement by a defendant apply to a written statement in answer to a claim of set off.

Changes in the rule —Sub rule (3) is new See r 9 below

Conditions of applicability of the rule —A defendant may claim a set under this rule if the following conditions are satisfied but not otherwise —

I The suit must be one for the recovery of money

II As regards the amount claimed to be set off—

(a) it must be an ascertained sum of money [see ills (c) (d) and (e) above]

(b) such sum must be legally recoverable

(c) it must be recoverable by the defendant or by all the defendants if mo than one [see ill (g)]

(d) it must be recoverable by the defendant from the plaintiff or all the plainti if more than one [see ill (f)]

(e) it must not exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which the suit is brought and

(f) both parties must fill in the defendant s claim to set off the same charac as they fill in the plaintiff suit [see ills (a) (b) and (h)]

The suit must be one for the recovery of money —In Nan Karay v Htau (m) their Lordships of the Privy Council observed that it was doubtful wheth a suit for an account was a suit for money In a subsequent Allahabad case it w held that a suit for a dissolution of partnership and for partnership accounts with a pray that such balance as may found due to the plaintiff upon taking the partnersh accounts may be paid to him was a suit for money and that a plea of set off mig therefore be raised by the defendant in such suit (n)

The amount claimed to be set off must be an ascertained sum money and not unliquidated damages —The expression ascertained sum does not mean a sum admitted by the plaintiff It is used in contradistinction to unliquidated damages (o) In ills (d) and (e) the claim is for an ascertained sum not so ill (c) where the amount claimed to be set off is for unliquidated damages In the ca mentioned in ill (c) the defendant may bring a cross suit against the plaintiff In ill (the amount claimed to be set off by B is the amount of a decree and this may be set c against A s claim It is not necessary that B should have taken any steps to enforc the decree (p)

A a clerk sues B his employer for arrears of wages due to him B alleges th A left his employment without notice and that A is therefore liable to pay damages whic he claims to set off The amount not being ascertained cannot be set off (q) Se ill (3) on the next page

Equitable set off —There are cases in which the defendant may be allowed set off even in respect of an unascertained sum which sounds in damages These ar cases where the cross demands arise out of the same transaction or are so connected i their nature and circumstances that they can be looked upon as part of one transactio

In such cases Courts of Equity in England have held that it would be inequitable to drive the defendant to a separate cross suit and that he may be allowed to plead a set off though the amount may be unascertained. Such a set off is called an equitable set off as it is allowed by Courts of Equity as distinguished from a legal set off which is allowed by Courts of Common Law in respect only of an ascertained sum. It will thus be seen that the present rule is restricted to a legal set off for it requires that the amount to be set off shall be an ascertained sum. The question therefore arises whether an equitable set off can be pleaded in Indian Courts in other words if the defendant's claim is for an unascertained sum but has arisen from the same transaction as the plaintiff's claim the defendant can set off such demand against the plaintiff's claim? It has been held that he can do so not under the provisions of the present rule which is limited to a legal set off but in the exercise of the general right of a defendant to plead a set off whether it is legal or equitable. The provisions of the Code regulate procedure only and they have not the effect of taking away any right of set off which a defendant may have independently of its provisions. O 20 r 19 (3) recognizes an equitable set off. The leading case on the subject is Clark v Ruthnavaloo (r). But this right of set off does not exist when the cross demand relates to a different transaction (s).

The amount claimed to be set off must be legally recoverable— O [illegible]
The amount claimed by way of set off under this rule must be legally recoverable It follows from this that if the defendant's claim is barred by the law of limitation at the date of the suit it cannot be pleaded by way of set off under this rule (t) But this rule relates only to a legal set off The question arises whether a claim by way of equitable set off can be allowed if it is barred by limitation at the date of the suit It has been laid down that in cases where the plaintiff's claim and the defendant's claim relate both to the same estate or there is a fiduciary relationship between the parties the defendant's claim to set off though barred by limitation at the date of the suit may be entertained as an equitable set off It has thus been held that in a suit by an heir against his co heirs for his one sixth share of the estate of the deceased the latter are entitled to set off one sixth of the Government revenue paid by them in respect of the estate though a separate suit by them to recover from the plaintiff the proportionate part of the revenue payable by him would be barred by limitation (u) Similarly in mortgage suits sums are allowed to be set off in taking accounts of the mortgage even though barred by limitation (v) Upon the same principle it has been held that a trustee in possession of the trust estate is entitled to set up his right to be indemnified out of the trust estate when called upon for an account although his right to sue for the amount claimed by him by way of indemnity is barred by limitation (w) In a recent case (x) the High Court of Madras held that in a suit by a lessor for rent it is not open to the lessee to claim by way of equitable set off an unliquidated claim for damages which was barred at the date of the suit Seshagiri Ayyar J said An exception to this rule [namely that a time barred claim cannot be pleaded by way of set off] has been recognized in some cases Where there is a fiduciary relationship between the parties as in the case of trustee and cestui que trust and there is accountability even barred claims may be taken into account in passing the final accounts This exception has been extended in some of the decided cases in India to mortgages presumably on the ground that there is accountability between the parties See Parasurama Pattar v Venkatachallam Pattar (y) Chidambara Mudalia v Krishnaswami Pillai ( ) and Ramdhari Singh v Permanund Singh (a) It is not necessary to say now whether these cases have been rightly decided I see no reason for extending the exception to suits between a lessor and a lessee

In a Madras case (b) an agent sued his principal to recover money that might be found due to him on the taking of agency accounts The defendant pleaded in his written statement that money would be found due to him on taking accounts and he asked for a decree for such sum as might be found due to him The defendant's claim was not barred at the date of the suit but it was barred at the date of the written statement It was held that the defendant's claim should be allowed as an equitable set off to the extent of the plaintiff's claim but that the defendant was not entitled to a decree for the balance found due to him as his claim was barred at the date of the written statement To pass a decree for the balance would be it was said to enable the defendant to evade the law of limitation The same view has been taken by the High Court of Bombay (c) In an Allahabad case (d) Oldfield J expressed the opinion that the set off if not barred at the date of the suit should be allowed in full and not merely to the extent of the

A separate debt cannot be set off against a joint and several debt — Thus in ill. (g) B cannot set off the debt due to him alone by A for it is a separate debt while the suit is to recover a joint and several debt It has similarly been held that in a suit by a company against its directors no individual director is entitled to set off the amount due to him alone from the company (f)

The amount claimed to be set off must not exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is brought — The valuation of a set off for the purpose of jurisdiction must be taken as relating to the whole amount pleaded as a set off and without reference to any portion of the plaintiff's claim admitted by the defendant A sues B in a Presidency Small Cause Court for Rs 1 000 B claims to set off a sum of Rs 2 700 and claims judgment for Rs 1 700 after giving A credit for Rs 1 000 admitted by B to be due to A The Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to try the claim as to set off the value of the amount claimed as set off being above Rs 2 000 (g)

A plea of payment is distinct from a plea of set off A sues B to recover Rs 1 500 in a Court of which the pecuniary jurisdiction is limited to Rs 2 000 B alleges that he has paid Rs 1 000 to A on account and admits his liability for the balance of Rs 500 but he claims a set off of Rs 1 700 being the amount due on a promissory note passed to him by A and asks for a decree for Rs 1 200 The amount claimed to be set off is not Rs 1 000 plus Rs 1 700=Rs 2 700 but Rs 1 700 only and it is therefore within the jurisdiction of the Court (h)

Not only the amount but also the nature of the set off must be within the cognizance of the Court in which the suit is brought Hence a Court cannot entertain a claim to a set off unless such claim if made the subject of a suit would fall within its jurisdiction (i)

Solicitor s lien for costs—Before the year 1832 the Courts in England had a discretionary power as regards set off and a discretion as to the terms upon which they would allow it (s) This discretion was taken away under the General Rules of 1832 and the General Rules of 18_3 Rule 93 of the General Rules of 1832 was in these words No set off of damages or costs between parties shall be allowed to the prejudice of the attorney s lien for costs in the particular suit against which the set off is sought provided nevertheless that interlocutory co ts in the same suit awarded to the adverse party may be deducted This rule was reproduced in identical terms in 18_3 That state of things continued until the Judicature Act 1873 came into force O 65 r 14 made under that Act was directly contrary to the previous rule The previous rule allowed no set off O 65 r 14 says that a set off may be allowed. The result is that in England the Courts under O 6_ r 14 exercise now in matters of set off the discretion which was taken away by the General Rules of 1832 (t)

Sec 111 of the Code of 1877 provided that the Court may pronounce a final judgment in the same suit both on the original and on the cross claim but it shall not affect the lien upon the amount decreed of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree This provision was reproduced in sec 111 of the Code of 1882 and it is reproduced in the present rule also It is clear from the language of this rule that the Courts of this country have no discretion in the matter of a solicitor s lien in cases falling within this rule

A solicitor has at common law a lien for his costs over property recovered or preserved or the proceeds of any judgments obtained for the client by his exertions (u) The lien attaches to property of every description such as for instance money payable to the client under a judgment including costs ordered to be paid to the client or the proceeds of an execution in the hands of a Sheriff money paid into Court whether as security for costs or by way of defence or otherwise and money received by way of compromise (v) The lien does not extend to general costs for all business done by a solicitor for his client but only to costs of the suit in which the property has been acquired or preserved by his exertions (w) Where there are assets of a partnership in the hands

6 of a receiver appointed in a partnership suit the solicitors engaged in that suit are entitled to a lien on those assets in priority to the creditors of the partnership But a solicitor's lien does not prevail against the claim of a mortgagee who advances money to the client to enable him to pay off prior encumbrances on the property in suit (x)

It is to be borne in mind that the solicitor's lien in the High Courts of India is governed exclusively by the law prevailing in English Courts before the passing of 23 and 24 Vict ch 127 by which that lien was very much extended (y) At common law a solicitor had no lien on realty Lien on realty was first conferred by the above statute The High Court of Calcutta has held that in India an attorney is entitled to a lien on immovable property recovered for his client in the suit ( ) The High Court of Bombay has held otherwise (a) and this view seems to be correct

A solicitor's lien for his costs extends to all the moneys of his client which are lying in Court It makes no difference that the moneys are brought into Court by attachment at the instance of a decree holder The lien however does not exist when moneys are once distributed to the creditors of the client So long as the moneys are in Court the Court has power to direct payment to the solicitor of his costs out of the moneys (b) A obtains a decree against B C who has obtained a decree against A attaches the amount of the decree obtained by A against B in B's hands A's attorney is entitled to a lien for his costs on the sum so attached but the only order that can be made in such a case is an order to the defendant not to pay the sum attached to any one without notice to the attorney (c)

Parties to an action may compromise without the intervention of solicitor but there must be no intention to deprive the solicitor of his charges and the Courts will exercise its equitable interference to enable a solicitor to proceed in the action for his costs though no notice of his lien has been given in cases where it is made out that there is an intention to cheat the solicitor but unless there has been notice or collusion the solicitor if the client has compromised can look only to his client for his costs (d)

Although the High Courts possess a summary jurisdiction to enforce a solicitor's lien upon the fruits of his exertion it will not do so when the circumstances would make it unfair to any of the parties or compel the Courts to go into complicated questions of fact especially when charges of fraud or collusion are made or where a solicitor has deliberately taken additional fresh security for the purpose of securing his costs and has not relied on his lien under the summary jurisdiction In such a case the Court will refer the solicitor to a regular suit (e)

On an application by a solicitor made in a suit in which costs have been awarded to his client against the opposite party the Court has jurisdiction to enforce in a proper case the solicitor's lien by making a direct order for payment to the solicitor by the opposite party of such costs Thus a case where the original client was dead and it appeared that his legal representatives were not men of substance and that they were unable to pay was held by the High Court of Calcutta to be a proper one for the Court in the exercise of its discretion to make a direct order for payment of costs to the solicitors by the opposite party (f)

By a decree passed in a suit for redemption of a mortgage brought by A against B A is directed to pay the mortgage debt to B but B is directed to pay to A the costs of the suit The High Court of Calcutta held that the suit being one for redemption B's attorney is not entitled to a lien for his costs on the whole of the mortgage money but to the mortgage money less the costs payable by B to A which costs A is entitled to set off against the mortgage money (g) See O 20 r 19 and O 21 r 19

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that where A obtains a decree against B for Rs 1451 and B subsequently obtains a decree against A for Rs 1000 A is entitled to have satisfaction of B's decree entered notwithstanding the lien of B's attorney for his costs Reliance was placed in the judgment on the fact that B's attorney had not stated that there was no chance of recovering his costs from his client [B] and that the decree which B had against A was the only property out of which his claim could be satisfied (h) There is no reference in the judgment to the provisions of O 8 r 6 (2)

Appeal —Unless the whole suit is disposed of an appeal does not lie from an order disposing of a defendant's claim to set off made under this rule even though the question as to that claim may have been tried as a preliminary issue Such an order is not a preliminary decree See O 20 r 19 which shows that there should be only one decree drawn up in a suit in which a set off is claimed (i)

Res judicata —A defendant is under no obligation to claim a set off His omission therefore to do so does not preclude him from bringing a separate suit in respect thereof (j)

Counterclaim —Though the Code does not provide for counterclaim there is nothing to prevent a Court from treating the counterclaim as a plaint in a cross suit and hearing the two suits together provided that the requisite court fee on the counterclaim has been paid (k)

Defence or set off founded on separate grounds

7 [New R S C, O 20 r 7] Where the defendant relies upon several distinct grounds of defence or set off founded upon separate and distinct facts, they shall be stated as far as may be, separately and distinctly terms as the Court thinks fit, but the Court may at any time require a written statement or additional written statement from any of the parties and fix a time for presenting the same

Additional written statement—The additional written statement should not set up a totally new case or state facts at direct variance with the original written statement so as completely to change the issue in the case (l) See O 6 r 7 and notes

Procedure when party fails to present written statement called for by Court

10 [S 113] Where any party from whom a written statement is so required fails to present the same within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may pronounce judgment against him or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit

Decree against defendant where no written statement filed—This rule enables the Court to pronounce judgment against the defendant on failure to file a written statement such as is required by r 9 Failure to file a written statement in other cases does not come within this rule (m) and the Court cannot in those cases pass a decree against the defendant unless the plaintiff proves his case (n) In a Bombay case the defendant was served with a summons which required him to file his written statement within four weeks from the date of service The date fixed for the hearing was 27th November 1907 The defendant failed to file his written statement within four weeks. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to apply for and obtain an ex parte decree before the returnable date of the summons namely 27th November 1907 (o)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule pronouncing judgment against a party [O 43 r 1 cl. (b)]

ORDER IX

Appearance of Parties and Consequence of Non appearance

Parties to appear on day fixed in summons for defendant to appear and answer

1 [S 96] On the day fixed in the summons for the defendant to appear and answer, the parties shall be in attendance at the Court house in person or by their respective pleaders, and the suit shall then be heard unless the hearing is adjourned to a future day fixed by the Court

Dismissal of suit where summons not served in consequence of plaintiff's failure to pay costs

2 [S 97] Where on the day so fixed it is found that the summons has not been served upon the defendant in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the Court-fee or postal charges (if any) chargeable for such service, the Court may make an order that the suit be dismissed

Provided that no such order shall be made although the summons has not been served upon the defendant, if on the day fixed for him to appear and answer he attends in person or by agent when he is allowed to appear by agent

Defendant —The expression defendant in this rule does not include the guardian ad litem of a minor defendant (p)

Appeal —The order or dismissal under this rule is a form of dismissal for default It is not a decree [s 2 (2)] and no appeal lies from it The plaintiff s remedy is under r 4 of this Order (q)

Revision —The Court has no power under this rule to dismiss the suit in a case where the plaintiff has paid the requisite Court fee for the service of the summons but the office does not issue the summons in time If the Court dismisses the suit in such a case the High Court has power to set aside the order in revision (r)

3 [S 98] Where neither party appears when the suit is called on for hearing, the Court may make an order that the suit be dismissed

Where neither party appears suit to be dismissed

Where neither party appears —A sues B and C A and C do not appear when the suit is called on for hearing but B appears The Court makes an order dismissing the suit As between A and B the order is one under r 8 so as to attract the applicability of r 9 But as between A and C the order is one under the present rule so that r 4 applies and not r 9 (s)

If the plaintiff appears on the date fixed for the hearing but the defendant does not appear and the suit is dismissed owing to failure on the part of the plaintiff to adduce evidence in support of his claim the dismissal is on the merits and not under this rule (t)

This rule does not apply after a preliminary decree has been passed and a suit cannot be dismissed for default of appearance on an application for a final mortgage decree (u)

May make an order that the suit be dismissed —These words have been substituted for the words the suit shall be dismissed [Code of 1882 s 98] to make it clear that the dismissal under this rule is not a decree but an order See s 2 (2)

4 [S 99] Where a suit is dismissed under rule 2 or rule 3, the plaintiff may (subject to the law of limitation) bring a fresh suit, or he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his not paying the Court-fee and postal charges (if any) required within the time fixed before the issue of the summons, or for his non appearance, as the case may be the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit

Plaintiff may bring fresh suit or Court may restore suit to file

Remedies open to a defendant in the case of an ex parte decree—See note to r 13 below Remedies in case of ex parte decree

7 [S 101] Where the Court has adjourned the hearing of the suit ex parte, and the defendant, at or before such hearing, appears and assigns good cause for his previous non appearance, he may, upon such terms as the Court directs as to costs or otherwise, be heard in answer to the suit as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance

Procedure where defendant appears on day of adjourned hearing and assigns good cause for previous non appearance

This rule was applied in the undermentioned case (f)

8 [S 102] Where the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear when the suit is called on for hearing the Court shall make an order that the suit be dismissed unless the defendant admits the claim, or part thereof, in which case the Court shall pass a decree against the defendant upon such admission, and, where part only of the claim has been admitted, shall dismiss the suit so far as it relates to the remainder

Procedure where defendant only appears

Where defendant only appears—If neither party appears on the day fixed for the hearing of the suit the procedure laid down in r 3 is to be followed. If the plaintiff appears and the defendant does not appear the procedure laid down in r 6 is to be followed If the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear the procedure laid down in the present rule is to be followed. All that a defendant is entitled to under this rule is to have the plaintiff s suit dismissed He is not entitled to call any evidence even though it be to disprove charges of fraud or the like that may have been made against him in the plaint (g)

If the plaintiff does not appear—See notes to r 9 below Appearance This rule does not apply to the case of non appearance by reason of death Where a sole plaintiff dies before the hearing of a suit and the suit is dismissed for non appearance under this rule the fact of his death not being known to the Court there s inherent jurisdiction in the Court under s 151 to set aside the dismissal and thus rectify the mistake which has been inadvertently made It is then for the legal representative of the plaintiff to apply to be brought on the record under O 22 r 3 (h) Similarly the rule does not apply if the plaintiff has been adjudged insolvent before the hearing for there is no person on the record who has any right or duty to appear and the Court should not dismiss the suit but should under O 22 r 8 fix a time within which the Official Assignee may decide to continue the suit (i) Where on the day fixed for hearing the plaintiff does not appear and the defendant appears but applies for time and the Court dismisses the suit for default the order falls under this rule and not under r 4 above (j)

More plaintiffs than one—This rule provides for the case where a single plaintiff or all the plaintiffs if there are more than one do not appear Rule 10 provides for a case where there are more plaintiffs than one and one or more of them appear and others do not appear (k)

More defendants than one—If there are several defendants of whom one appears the suit will be dismissed against the defendant who appears under O 9 r 8 and the plaintiff will under O 9 r 9 be precluded from bringing a fresh suit against him But as against the defendants who have not appeared the dismissal will be under O 9 r 3 and the plaintiff will under O 9 r 4 be at liberty to bring a fresh suit against them (l)

Remedies in case of dismissal under this rule—See notes to r 9 below Remedies in case of dismissal under rule 8

The Court shall make an order that the suit be dismissed—These words have been substituted for the words the Court shall dismiss the suit [Code of 1882 s. 102] An order of dismissal under this rule for default of plaintiff s appearance is not a decree and is not therefore appealable See s 2 (2) (b) and notes Order of dismissal for default on p 11 above

9 [S 103] (1) Where a suit is wholly or partly dismissed under rule 8, the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action But he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non appearance when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit

9 (2) No order shall be made under this rule unless notice of the application has been served on the opposite party

Remedies in case of dismissal under rule 8—A plaintiff whose suit is dismissed under r 8 for default of appearance on the day fixed for the hearing cannot appeal from the order of dismissal as such an order is not a decree [s 2 cl. (2) sub cl (b)] but he may—

(1) apply for a review of the order under O 47 r 1 (m) though the High Court of Bombay (n) has held that since the decision of the Privy Council in Chajju Ram v Neki (o) a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed under r 8 has no remedy by way of review Or he may

(2) apply under this rule for an order to set aside the order of dismissal

He is entitled to apply for a review without a previous application to set aside the dismissal under this rule (p) The period of limitation for an application for a review of the order is 10 days from the date of the order in the case of an order made by the Provincial Court of Small Causes 20 days from the date of the order in the case of an order made by any of the chartered High Courts in the exercise of its original jurisdiction and 90 days from the date of the order in other cases (q) The period of limitation for an application under this section is 30 days from the date of the dismissal of the suit (r)

The first remedy is open to any plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed whatever the ground of dismissal may be whether it is dismissed for default of appearance at the hearing or on the merits after a hearing But the second remedy that is the remedy provided by this rule can only be availed of by a plaintiff who does not appear at the hearing and the suit is dismissed for default of appearance under r 8 above The remedy given by this rule is not open to a plaintiff whose suit is dismissed on any ground other than default of appearance Hence if a plaintiff's suit is dismissed on his failure to establish his case by reason of non attendance of his witnesses (s) or for want of evidence (t) the dismissal is not one under r 8 and he cannot therefore avail himself of the remedy provided by this rule

There is a conflict of decisions whether if a plaintiff does not apply under this rule within the 30 days allowed by law he is entitled to apply for a review under O 47 r 1 after the expiration of that period The Patna High Court has held (u) following an earlier decision of the Calcutta High Court (v) that he is not on the other hand the Calcutta High Court has held in a latter case that he is (w) The ground of the Patna decision is that to allow a review in such a case would be an evasion of the rule of limitation See note below limitation

Appearance —A plaintiff or a defendant will be deemed to have appeared on the day fixed for the hearing of the suit if he appears—

(1) in person or

(2) by a pleader either himself duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit or accompanied by some person able to answer such questions [O 5 r 1 sub r (2)]

First as regards Appearance of a party in person—The mere presence of a party in Court at the hearing is sufficient to constitute appearance within the meaning of this Order. It does not matter for what purpose he appears or what action he takes on the appearance. A plaintiff appearing and applying for an adjournment on the ground that his witnesses are not present will be deemed to have appeared. If the application is refused and the suit is dismissed owing to his inability to establish his case in the absence of witnesses, the dismissal is not one under r 8, for the plaintiff did appear, and he cannot therefore avail himself of the provisions of this rule (x). Similarly a defendant appearing and applying for an adjournment on the ground that he had no time to prepare his case will be deemed to have appeared. If the application is refused and a decree is passed against him owing to his unpreparedness to defend the suit, the decree is not ex parte under r 6, for he did appear, and he cannot therefore avail himself of the provisions of r 13 below (y).

Next as regards Appearance of a party by a pleader—Different considerations arise when a party is represented by a pleader. Appearance by a pleader within the meaning of this Order does not like appearance by a party in person mean mere presence in Court; it means appearance by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or by a pleader accompanied by some person able to answer all such questions [O 5 r 1]. Hence a party cannot be said to appear by a pleader if the pleader appears at the hearing and states that though he has filed his vakalatnama he has not received any instructions from his client with regard to the case and that he is therefore unable to go on with the suit ( ). Similarly a party cannot be said to appear by a pleader if the pleader has no instructions other than to apply for an adjournment and on the adjournment being refused withdraws from the suit stating that he has no further instructions to go on with the suit (a). In neither case can it be said that the party appeared by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit. But what if the party himself is also present in person in Court at the time? According to the Madras (b) and Patna (c) High Courts it makes no difference that the party himself is present in Court, for mere physical appearance does not constitute appearance. According to the Bombay High Court he must be deemed to have appeared, the reason given being that if the pleader is not duly instructed to answer material questions the Court may under O 10 r 1 ask questions relating to the suit to the party himself and may examine his witnesses (d).

A pleader appears at the hearing on behalf of a plaintiff and applies for an adjournment on the ground that he had no time to prepare himself with the case or on the ground that the papers being left with his senior he could not proceed with the case. The application is refused and the pleader being unable to go on with the case the suit is dismissed. Can it be said under these circumstances that the plaintiff appeared by a pleader? It has been held in the undermentioned cases that the plaintiff must be held to have appeared by a pleader and that the order of dismissal could not therefore be said to be one made under r 8 so as to entitle the plaintiff to apply under this rule (e)

Suit. —An application under s 158 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885 is not a suit within the meaning of r 8 or this rule (f)

Fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action—If the plaintiff fails to appear and the suit is in consequence dismissed under r 8 the dismissal does not operate as res judicata (g) In such a case however the plaintiff is precluded by this rule from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action Thus if A sues B for damages for breach of a contract and the suit is dismissed for default of A's appearance A cannot bring a fresh suit to recover damages for breach of the same contract A's only remedy in such a case is to apply for a review or to apply under this rule for an order to set aside the dismissal But if the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from that in the first suit the subsequent suit will not be barred under this rule Thus the dismissal for default of a suit by a reversioner against a Hindu widow for an injunction to restrain her from making a gift of immovable property inherited by her from her husband is no bar to a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff against the widow for a declaration that a gift of the property made by the widow after the first suit is inoperative (h) Similarly if A sues B for the rent of certain lands and the suit is dismissed for default of A's appearance under r 8 the dismissal does not operate as a bar to a suit by A against B for enhanced rent (i) or for possession of the lands (j) For other cases in which it was held that the cause of action in the subsequent suit was not the same as in the first suit see cases cited in foot note (k)

If the right of redemption has not been extinguished the rule will not apply to a suit for redemption (l) The Privy Council case of Shankar Baksh v Daya Shanker (m) seems to have been decided on the English rule that the dismissal of an action for redemption operates as a foreclosure

This rule does not apply to a suit for partition The reason is that the right to enforce partition is a legal incident of a joint tenancy and as long as such tenancy subsists so long may any of the joint tenants sue for partition of the joint property (n)

The dismissal under r 8 of a suit filed by the Voluntary Liquidator against a shareholder for the recovery of money alleged to be due to the company is a bar to a subsequent application by the Official Liquidator to have the name of the defendant placed in the list of contributories in respect of the same claim (o)

This rule does not apply when an application for probate is dismissed for default (p) nor when an adjudication order is annulled under sec 43 (1) of the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 for default of appearance of the insolvent on the day fixed for hearing his application for discharge (q)

Minor plaintiff—A fresh suit notwithstanding the provisions of this rule may be instituted in respect of the same cause of action where the first suit was brought by a next friend on behalf of a minor and was dismissed under r 8 for default of the next friend's appearance owing to gross want of care and diligence on his part (r) See notes to r 13 below Ex parte decree against minor defendant

(1) A plaintiff left the Court house believing that a part heard case which preceded his case would occupy some time he returned in about half an hour and found that his suit had been called on and dismissed owing to his absence He then applied to set aside the order of dismissal Held refusing the application that the above circumstances did not amount to sufficient cause for non appearance Manilal v Gulam Husain (1889) 13 Bom 12

(2) Where it was the duty of an attorney's clerk to examine every evening the board for the next day and to inform his master what cases in which he was engaged as attorney were on the board for hearing and the clerk neglecting his duty did not inform the master and no one appearing for the plaintiff the suit was dismissed it was held that the absence was caused by a bona fide mistake and the suit was restored on payment by the attorney of the costs of the hearing The Oriental Corporation v The Mercantile Corporation Ld (1866) 2 B H C 267

(3) In two cases the High Court of Bombay said that the rule of practice to be observed in the subordinate Courts in the Bombay Presidency is that when a party arrives late before the Judge and finds that his suit has been dismissed before his arrival he is entitled to have his suit restored though there may be no sufficient cause for his late arrival on payment of such costs as may have been incurred by reason of his default by the defendant Chhotalal v Ambalal (1925) 27 Bom L R 685 89 I C 225 ('25) A B 423 Sorabji v Pamjilal (1924) 26 Bom L R 321 80 I C 237 ('24) A B 39 In a later case it was held that there was no such hard and fast rule and that the Court had a discretion in each case to deal with the matter Currimbhoy v Moos (1929) 31 Bom L R 468 117 I C 593 ('29) A B 250

(4) A litigant should not be deprived of a hearing unless there has been something equivalent to misconduct or gross negligence on his part Arunachalam v Subbaramiah (1923) 46 Mad 60 63 68 I C 971 ('23) A M 63 [delay caused by inevitable accident] As to negligence of pleader see the undermentioned case (s)

Inherent power to restore suit dismissed for default—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (t) Bombay (u) and Rangoon (v) that this rule does not take away the inherent power of a Court to restore a suit dismissed for default if there be a just and reasonable cause for restoring it even if no sufficient cause is shown within the meaning of this rule for the plaintiff's non appearance Thus where a case was called on at 12 o'clock and the plaintiff's pleader being under the impression that the case would be taken up at 2 o'clock was engaged in other cases in other Courts and the plaintiff himself was waiting in his pleader's room and the suit was dismissed for default of appearance it was held that though there was no sufficient cause for non appearance within the meaning of this rule the case was one in which the Court should in the exercise of its inherent powers restore the suit to the file (w) Similarly where a plaintiff believing that his case which was fourteenth on the list would not be reached immediately did not attend the Court but went to bring his principal

Minor plaintiff—A fresh suit notwithstanding the provisions of this rule may be instituted in respect of the same cause of action where the first suit was brought by a next friend on behalf of a minor and was dismissed under r 8 for default of the next friend's appearance owing to gross want of care and diligence on his part (r) See notes to r 13 below Ex parte decree against minor defendant

(1) A plaintiff left the Court house believing that a part heard case which preceded his case would occupy some time he returned in about half an hour and found that his suit had been called on and dismissed owing to his absence He then applied to set aside the order of dismissal Held refusing the application that the above circumstances did not amount to sufficient cause for non appearance Manilal v Gulam Husain (1889) 13 Bom 12

(2) Where it was the duty of an attorney's clerk to examine every evening the board for the next day and to inform his master what cases in which he was engaged as attorney were on the board for hearing and the clerk neglecting his duty did not inform the master and no one appearing for the plaintiff the suit was dismissed it was held that the absence was caused by a bona fide mistake and the suit was restored on payment by the attorney of the costs of the hearing The Oriental Corporation v The Mercantile Corporation Ld (1866) 2 B H C 267

(3) In two cases the High Court of Bombay said that the rule of practice to be observed in the subordinate Courts in the Bombay Presidency is that when a party arrives late before the Judge and finds that his suit has been dismissed before his arrival he is entitled to have his suit restored though there may be no sufficient cause for his late arrival on payment of such costs as may have been incurred by reason of his default by the defendant Chhotalal v Ambalal (1925) 27 Bom L R 68 89 I C 2-5 (23) A B 423 Sorabji v Ramjilal (1924) 26 Bom L R 321 80 I C -37 (-4) A B 39 In a later case it was held that there was no such hard and fast rule and that the Court had a discretion in each case to deal with the matter Currimbhoy v Moos (1929) 31 Bom L R 468 117 I C 593 (29) A B -50

(4) A litigant should not be deprived of a hearing unless there has been something equivalent to misconduct or gross negligence on his part Arunachala v Subbaramiah (1923) 46 Mad. 60 63 68 I C 971 (23) A M 63 [delay caused by inevitable accident] As to negligence of pleader see the undermentioned case (s)

Inherent power to restore suit dismissed for default—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (t) Bombay (u) and Rangoon (v) that this rule does not take away the inherent power of a Court to restore a suit dismissed for default if there be a just and reasonable cause for restoring it even if no sufficient cause is shown within the meaning of this rule for the plaintiff's non appearance Thus where a case was called on at 12 o clock and the plaintiff's pleader being under the impression that the case would be taken up at 2 o clock was engaged in other cases in other Courts and the plaintiff himself was waiting in his pleader's room and the suit was dismissed for default of appearance it was held that though there was no sufficient cause for non appearance within the meaning of this rule the case was one in which the Court should in the exercise of its inherent powers restore the suit to the file (w) Similarly where a plaintiff believing that his case which was fourteenth on the list would not be reached immediately did not attend the Court but went to bring his principal

9 witnes and the suit being called on in the meantime his counsel applied for an adjournment on the ground that his client was not in Court but the application was refused and the suit dismissed, it was held that even if there was no sufficient cause within the meaning of this section the Court had inherent power to re tore the suit having regard to the special facts of the case (x) On the other hand it has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that a Court has no power apart from the provisions of this rule to restore a suit or apart from the provisions of r 13 to set aside an ex parte decree (y) The Patna High Court has followed the Madras ruling ( )

Appeal —An appeal lies under O 43 r 1 (c) from an order rejecting an appl a tion (in a case open to appeal) made under this rule but no appeal lies from an ord r granting the application (a) As regards an order rejecting an application to set aside the dismissal of a suit made by a single Judge sitting on the original side of the High Court it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that it is appealable not only under O 43 r 1 (c) but also as a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent (b) but that an order granting the application is not appealable either under O 43 r 1 (c) or as a judgment under cl 15 of the Letters Patent (c)

Where an application is made by a plaintiff under this rule but the application is dismissed for default no appeal lies from the order of dismissal (d)

Revision —If there is no sufficient cause for setting aside the dismissal the Court cannot do so as a matter of grace because it involves a heavy claim and if it does so the High Court will set aside the order in revision even though the suit has been tried and decreed (e)

Whether this rule applies to proceedings in execution —As has already been stated in the notes on sec 141 the provi ions of O 9 do not apply to proceedings in execution Therefore if an application for execution is dismi sed for default it cannot be restored under this rule (f) It is competent however to the applicant to present a fresh application for execution (g) The High Court of Lahore has held that if an application for execution is dismissed for default the Court may restore it in the exercise of its inherent power under sec 151 of the Code (h) A different view has been taken by the High Courts of Patna and Madras (i)

hearing and an ex parte order is made granting A s application and setting aside the sale Since O 9 does not apply the dismissal of the application in the first case cannot be treated as a dismissal under O 9 r 3 and the provisions of O 9 r 4 do not apply (j) Similarly the dismissal in the second case cannot be treated as a dismissal under O 9 r 8 and the provisions of O 9 r 9 do not apply (k) For the same reason the ex parte order made in the last case cannot be treated as one under O 9 r 6 and the provisions of O 9 r 13 do not apply

Dismissal for default of application to restore suit—This rule provides for the revival of a suit dismissed for default Does it apply where an application to set aside the dismissal of a suit is itself dismissed for default? A suit by A against B is dismissed for A s default A applies under this rule to set aside the dismissal A does not appear at the hearing of the application and the application also is dismissed for default Can the application be restored under this rule? No according to the Patna High Court the reason given being that such an application is a proceeding in execution and that O 9 cannot therefore apply to such an application (m) On the other hand the other High Courts (n) have held that such an application may itself be treated as an application to restore the suit provided it is made within the period prescribed for the original application In later cases in Allahabad (o) and Calcutta (p) it was said that the second application may be entertained under s 151 The same rules apply to applications to restore an application to set aside an ex parte decree which has been dismissed for default

Limitation—Where no application to set aside a dismissal is made within the period of limitation the Court has no inherent power under s 151 to set aside the dismissal after the expiry of the period (q) See notes above Remedies in case of dismissal under r 8 The High Court of Bombay has made a rule under sec 122 applying sec 5 of the Indian Limitation Act 1908 to applications under this rule The rule so made has been held to be intra vire (r)

Procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several defendants

11 [S 106] Where there are more defendants than one, and one or more of them appear and the others do not appear, the suit shall proceed and the Court shall, at the time of pronouncing judgment, make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the defendants who do not appear

Consequence of non-attendance, without sufficient cause shown, of party ordered to appear in person

12 [S 107] Where a plaintiff or defendant, who has been ordered to appear in person, does not appear in person, or show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Court for failing so to appear, he shall be subject to all the provisions of the foregoing rules applicable to plaintiffs and defendants respectively, who do not appear

Where party directed to appear in person—This rule applies to all cases where a party has been ordered to appear in person and fails to do so This is clear from the fact that the words under the provisions of section 66 or section 436 (now O [illegible] r 3 and O 20 r 3 respectively) which occurred in the corresponding s. 107 of the Code of 1882 have been omitted from the present rule (s)

Setting aside Decrees ex parte

Setting aside decree ex parte against defendant

13 [S 108] In any case in which a decree is passed ex parte against a defendant, he may apply to the Court by which the decree was passed for an order to set it aside, and if he satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served, or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the decree as against him upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit

Provided that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such defendant only it may be set aside as against all or any of the other defendants also

Old section—This rule corresponds with s 108 of the Code of 1882 The words as against him have been added after the words shall make an order setting aside the decree The proviso to the rule is also new See as to the effect of these changes note Proviso to the Rule

Remedies in case of ex parte decree—A defendant against whom an ex parte decree has been passed under r 6 for default of appearance at the hearing has the following courses open to him (t) —

(1) he may appeal from the ex parte decree under s 96

(s) [illegible] v Valliamma (1918) 41 Mad 2[illegible] [illegible] 41 I C 19

(t) Jethalal v [illegible] (19[illegible]) 46 Bom 1[illegible] 63 I C 4[illegible] ( ) A I R [illegible]

(2) he may apply for a review of judgment under O 47 r 1 (u)

(3) he may apply under this rule for an order to set aside the ex parte decree provided the application is made in cases to which the Limitation Act 1908 applies within 30 days from the date of the decree or where the summons was not duly served when he has knowledge of the decree (v) and in cases to which the Limitation Act 1877 applies within 30 days from the date of executing any process for enforcing the judgment (w) As to knowledge of the decree it has been held that it must be knowledge of a particular decree passed against the defendant in a particular Court in favour of a particular person and for a particular sum and not merely the knowledge that a decree has been passed by some Court against him (x)

Where the right to make the application is barred under the Act of 1877 and the bar arose before the Limitation Act of 1908 came into force the provisions of that Act could not revive the right (y) But where the right is not barred the law of limitation to be applied to applications under the present rule made after January 1 1909 is art 164 of the Limitation Act of 1908 and not art 164 of the Limitation Act of 1877 though the ex parte decree was passed when the Limitation Act of 1877 was in force ( )

The first two remedies that is the remedies by way of appeal and review are open to any person against whom a decree is passed whether the decree is ex parte or not But the third remedy the one provided by this rule can only be resorted to if the decree is passed ex parte that is to say passed against the defendant for default of appearance under r 6 The remedy given by this rule is not open to a defendant if the decree is passed on grounds other than his non appearance

Whether remedies concurrent — A defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed is at liberty as stated above to apply to set aside the decree under this rule or to appeal from the decree or to apply for a review of the judgment. He is entitled to apply under this rule to set aside the decree and at the same time to appeal from the decree Further he is entitled to appeal from the decree without a previous application to set aside the decree under this rule (a) Similarly he is entitled to apply for a review without previously applying under this rule (b) If he applies under this rule and his application is rejected he is entitled under O 43 r 1 (d) to appeal from the order rejecting the application But he is not bound to appeal from the order he may appeal under s 96 from the ex parte decree itself

If a defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed does not apply under this rule to set aside the decree but appeals from the decree two questions arise namely —

(1) Whether the appellate Court can consider the reason for the defendant's non appearance at the hearing and determine whether the lower Court was right in proceeding ex parte or whether the only question which it could consider is whether the evidence on the record is sufficient to support the ex parte decree in other words whether the decree can be sustained on the merits and

(2) whether if the appellate Court comes to the conclusion that the suit ought not to have been heard ex parte it has the power to remand the case for re hearing to the lower Court

Upon these points there is a conflict of decisions In a case under the Code of 188 the Calcutta High Court held that the only question which the appellate Court could

3 consider was whether the decree was wrong in law or based on insufficient evidence and that it could not deal with the question whether the lower Court was right in proceeding ex parte (c) But in a recent case (d) under the present Code the Calcutta High Court has treated this decision as obiter and holds that the Court of Appeal can deal with the reason for the defendant s non appearance and if not satisfied with the ex parte order can remand the suit for trial on the merits. In a Bombay case also decided under the Code of 1882 it was held that the appellate Court could consider the reason for the defendant s non appearance but it had no power to remand the case to the lower Court for a re hearing the reason given being that an order of remand could only be made under s 562 [now O 41 r 23] when a suit was disposed of on a preliminary point and that the disposal of a suit ex parte was not a disposal on a preliminary point (e). In Sadhu v Kuppan (f) which also was a case under the Code of 1882 a Full Bench of the Madras High Court held that the appellate Court could consider the reason for the defendant s non appearance and that it came to the conclusion that the lower Court ought not to have proceeded ex parte it had the power to remand the case to that Court for a re hearing The Madras ruling was followed by the High Court of Bombay in Jethalal v Varajlal (g) where it was held that even if the appellate Court had no power under the Code of 1882 to remand a case except under s 562 it has power now to make an order of remand under s 151 of the present Code and also under O 41 r 33 The High Court of Rangoon has followed the first Calcutta ruling (h)

If an application to set aside an ex parte decree is rejected and the defendant does not appeal from the order under O 43 r 1 (d) he cannot according to an Allahabad ruling reagitate the matter in appeal from the ex parte decree the reason given bein that the appellate Court has no power to consider the reason for the defendant s non appearance but it can only hear the appeal on the merits (i)

Hearing of application pending appeal —The High Courts of Calcutta (k) Madras (l) and Allahabad (m) have held that where a defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed applies under this rule to set it aside and at the same time prefers an appeal from it the proper Court to hear the application is the Court which passed the decree and not the appellate Court A obtains an ex parte decree against B B applies under this rule to have the decree set aside At the same time he prefers an appeal from the decree Which Court has jurisdiction to hear the application—is it the Court which passed the decree or is it the appellate Court? According to the above decisions the only Court which has jurisdiction to hear the application is the Court which passed the decree The reason given is that the matter to be considered in a proceeding under this rule is entirely distinct from the matter to be considered in an appeal from the ex parte decree the one being concerned with the Hearing of application after disposal of appeal—But if the appeal is disposed of other considerations arise The High Courts of Calcutta (o) Allahabad (p) and the Chief Court of Oudh (q) have held that where an appeal is preferred from an ex parte decree and the decree is confirmed or otherwise disposed of in appeal under O 41 r 32 the Court which passed the ex parte decree has no longer any power to entertain an application to set it aside even if the application was made before the appeal was filed This is because the decree of the lower Court is merged in that of the appellate Court But if the appeal is dismissed for default there is no merger and the original Court can entertain the application (r) On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Madras that the Court which passed an ex parte decree had jurisdiction to entertain an application to set aside even after an appeal therefrom has been dismissed (s) See notes to s 36 Merger of decree

Where a defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed is not joined as a party to the appeal preferred by other parties to the suit and the appellate Court does not adjudicate upon his case the ex parte decree against him does not merge in the decree of the Court of appeal so as to preclude him from applying under this rule to the Court which passed the ex parte decree to set aside the decree A sues B C and D and obtains an ex parte decree against B and a decree on the merits against C and D C and D appeal from the decree B is not joined as a party to the appeal The appellate Court confirms the decree of the Court of first instance passed against C and D This does not preclude B from applying to the Court of first instance to set aside the ex parte decree against him (t)

Ex parte decree obtained by fraud—A regular suit does not lie to set aside an ex parte decree merely on the ground of non service of summons (u) But where an ex parte decree is alleged to have been obtained by a plaintiff by fraud the defendant is entitled to institute a regular suit to set aside the decree on the ground of fraud (v) The suit is maintainable even though the defendant was unsuccessful in his application made under this rule to set aside the ex parte decree and though he did not appeal from the order rejecting his application (w) But if the very fraud that is set up by the defendant in his suit was set up in his application and the Court after going into the question of fraud rejected the application the suit would be barred as res judicata unless the fraud alleged was of such a nature that it could not properly come within the scope of enquiry under this rule A applies under this rule to set aside an ex parte decree

3 on the ground of fraud in respect of the service of summons upon him The Court after going into the question of fraud rejects the application A then institutes a regular suit to set aside the ex parte decree basing his suit on the very fraud that was alleged by him in the application The suit is barred as res judicata (x) In a recent Calcutta case A sued B in a Munsif s Court on a hand note and obtained an ex parte decree for Rs 59 B applied to set aside the decree but the application was refused. B then sued A in the Munsif s Court to set aside the decree on the grounds (1) that the summons was not duly served and (2) that the decree was obtained by perjured evidence It was held that the issue as to service of summons was not res judicata the reason given being that the suit included matters which could not have been raised on the application to set aside the decree (y) This decision it is submitted is not good law

Application by legal representative of deceased defendant—Under the Code of 1882 it was not settled whether his legal representative could apply for an order to set aside the ex parte decree against a deceased defendant The High Court of Calcutta held that he could (z) The High Courts of Madras (a) and Allahabad (b) held that he could not But the Allahabad Court conceded that if the application was made by the defendant and he died during the pendency of the application the proceedings could be continued by his legal representative (c) Under this Code (s 146) such an application may be made by the legal representative of the deceased defendant (d)

Grounds on which ex parte decree may be set aside—These are stated in the second paragraph of the rule the one being that the summons was not duly served upon the defendant (e) and the other that though the summons was duly served the defendant was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing (f) A summons cannot be said to be duly served if it is a misleading document having no relevance to the real proceedings which are contemplated and having no reference to the order ultimately passed (g) When a summons was served upon a purdanashin lady to whom the serving officer was not able to obtain access by affixing a copy of the summons on the outer door of her dwelling house under O 5 r 17 and it appeared that the lady had no knowledge of the suit against her the Court set aside the ex parte decree passed against her on the ground that she was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing at the hearing of the suit (h) But duly does not mean personally and a summons may be duly served by substituted service (i)

Sufficient cause—Where an ex parte decree has been passed against a defendant who has failed to appear at the hearing he is not entitled to have the decree set aside as a matter of course even if he applies on the same day for the purpose It is a matter for the discretion of the Court (j) The fact that a defendant was contemplating an appeal from a preliminary decree in a suit for partition is no ground for his failure to attend proceedings in connection with the division of property and for setting aside the final decree for partition (k) In a Rangoon case under the Land Acquisition Act 1894 the Collector failed to appear as he was on tour at that time and there was

Upon such terms as to payment into Court —In restoring a case under this rule the Court may make it a condition that costs (m) or the decretal amount or some portion thereof be paid into Court (n) If a decree is set aside on failure to comply with a condition imposed by a Court an appeal will lie under O 43 r 1 (d) and the appellate Court will consider whether the condition was a reasonable one (o)

High Court of Calcutta Original Side —The High Court of Calcutta has held that this rule does not apply in terms on the Original Side of the High Court The principle however of this rule is applied on that side and Rankin C J said that the High Court on its Original Side has a discretion which it may exercise independently of the rule and that it may set aside an ex parte decree even in a case in which there has been an element of negligence (p) The same High Court has also held that an application to set aside an ex parte decree not being one under this rule is not governed by art 164 of the Limitation Act (q)

Inherent power to set aside ex parte decree —See notes to r 9 Inherent power to restore suit dismissed for default

Ex parte decree against minor defendant —It is no ground for setting aside an ex parte decree passed against a minor defendant that the Nazir who was appointed guardian ad litem of the minor did not appear and defend the suit if the failure to defend was owing to the fact that the Nazir did not receive instructions from any person to defend the suit It would be otherwise if fraud collusion or gross negligence on the part of the guardian ad litem were proved (r) See notes to r 9 Minor plaintiff

Proviso to the rule —Cases under this proviso fall into two classes

I Where the decree is ex parte against all the defendants but the application to set aside the decree is made only by some of them

II Where against some of the defendants the decree is passed ex parte but against others who have appeared and defended the suit it is passed on the merits and the application to set aside the decree is made by one or more of the defendants against whom the decree was passed ex parte

In cases under both classes the question is whether if the decree is set aside as against the applicant the Court can set aside the decree as against the other defendants also so as to reopen the whole suit and if so in what cases? No provision was made in the old section as to these cases The present rule expressly provides for these cases The first para of r 13 says that where a defendant against whom a decree is passed ex parte applies for an order to set it aside and satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served upon him etc the Court shall make an order setting aside the decree as against him [that is the applicant] (s) The proviso to r 13 says that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such defendant only it may be set aside as against all or any of the other defendants The object is to provide for cases where it may be necessary in the ends of justice to set aside the decree not

3 only against the applicant but also against the other defendants (t) This would as a general rule be so

(1) where the decree is one and indivisible (u)

(2) where the suit would result in inconsistent decrees if the decree were not set aside as against the other defendants also (v)

(3) where the relief to which the applicant is entitled in the suit could not effectively be given otherwise than by setting aside the decree as against the other defendants also (w)

(4) where the decree proceeds on a ground common to all the defendants (x)

These four cases may be considered under the two classes referred to above

Class II —Where against some of the defendants the decree is passed ex parte but against others who have appeared and defended the suit it is passed on the merits and the application to set aside the decree is made by one or more of the defendants against whom the decree was passed ex parte —In this case the question arises whether if the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against the applicant only but must be set aside also as against the defendants against whom the decree was passed on the merits the Court has the power to set aside the decree as against such defendants also It is submitted that it has The words the decree in the proviso mean the decree passed in the suit not only against the defendants who did not appear but also against the defendants who did appear The words other defendants in the proviso mean defendants other than the applicant against whom the decree is passed whether as against them it was passed ex parte or after a hearing (z)

If the Bombay decision means that the setting aside of a decree ex parte against a defendant does not necessarily revive the suit as against a defendant who has appeared and defended the suit the decision is still good law But if it means that where a decree is passed ex parte against A and after a hearing against B the Court can set aside the decree only against A and cannot set it aside in any case against B the decision is no longer law see the proviso to the rule

Whether this rule applies to execution proceedings—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution See notes under the same head to r 9 above

Dismissal for default of application to set aside ex parte decree—See note to r 9 above Dismissal for default of application to restore suit

Application to set aside ex parte decree after it has been executed—The fact that an ex parte decree has been satisfied does not preclude the defendant from applying to the Court for an order to set it aside under this rule A obtains an ex parte decree against B and attaches B s goods in execution of the decree B pays the amount of the decree under protest and applies for an order to set aside the decree on the ground that the summons was not served upon him The Courts may make an order setting aside the decree notwithstanding that the decree has been satisfied (a)

Effect of setting aside ex parte decree—When an ex parte decree is set aside all proceedings from the stage of the non appearance of the defendant are equally set aside (b)

Ex parte decree against firm—A decree against a firm cannot be said to be ex parte against a partner in the firm because he has not appeared at the hearing An ex parte decree against a firm can be set aside on the ground that the summons was not duly served on the firm If the summons was duly served upon the firm the decree cannot be set aside because one of the partners was not served Under O 30 r 3 it is not necessary to serve every partner A sues X Y & Co a firm The firm consists of two partners X and Y The summons is served on X alone as a partner Y is not served with the summons Neither X nor Y appears at the hearing and an ex parte decree is passed against the firm The summons having been duly served on the firm the decree against the firm cannot be set aside because Y was not served and he did not appear at the hearing (c)

Appeal—Where an application under this rule is dismissed an appeal lies from the order dismissing the application whether the dismissal was on merits or for default (d) [O 43 r 1 cl (d)] But where the application is granted no appeal lies from the order granting the application (e) Where an application to set aside an ex parte decree has been dismissed for default and a fresh application is made to set aside such dismissal and the fresh application also is refused no appeal lies from the order refusing the fresh application (f)

Revision—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that an order setting aside an ex parte decree is not subject to revision under s 115 the reason given being that the validity of the order may be attacked under s 105 in an appeal from the final decree (g) The High Court of Madras has held that an order setting aside an ex parte decree may be set aside in revision if it is not based on any ground recognised by law (h)

Limitation—A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has held that a rule framed by that Court applying s 5 of the Limitation Act 1908 to applications under r 13 was intra vires (i) See notes above Remedies in case of ex parte decree

Where no application to set aside an ex parte decree is made within the period of limitation the Court has no inherent power under s 151 to set it aside after the expiry of the period (j)

Vakalatnama—No fresh vakalatnama is necessary for the purpose of an application to set aside an ex parte decree (k) See O 3 r 4

14 [S 109] No decree shall be set aside on any such application as aforesaid unless notice thereof has been served on the opposite party

No decree to be set aside without notice to opposite party

Opposite party—Where in a suit for partition by A against B and C an ex parte decree is passed against B the opposite party on whom notice should be served under this rule is A the plaintiff and not C the co defendant (l)

ORDER X

Examination of Parties by the Court

1 [S 117] At the first hearing of the suit the Court shall ascertain from each party or his pleader whether he admits or denies such allegations of facts as are made in the plaint or written statement (if any) of the opposite party, and as are not expressly or by necessary implication admitted or denied by the party against whom they are made The Court shall record such admissions and denials

Ascertainment whether allegations in pleadings are admitted or denied

2 [S 118] At the first hearing of the suit, or at any subsequent hearing, any party appearing in person or present in Court, or any person able to answer any material questions relating to the suit by whom such party or his pleader is accompanied may be examined orally by the Court, and the Court may, if it thinks fit, put in the course of such examination questions suggested by either party

Oral examination of party or companion of party

Object of examination under this rule—The object of examination under this rule is not to take evidence or ascertain what is to be the evidence in the case but to determine the matters in dispute between the parties (m)

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (2)]

Consequence of refusal or inability of pleader to answer

4 [S 120] (1) Where the pleader of any party who appears by a pleader or any such person accompanying a pleader as is referred to in rule 2 refuses or is unable to answer any material question relating to the suit which the Court is of opinion that the party whom he represents ought to answer, and is likely to be able to answer if interrogated in person, the Court may postpone the hearing of the suit to a future day and direct that such party shall appear in person on such day

(2) If such party fails without lawful excuse to appear in person on the day so appointed, the Court may pronounce judgment against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit

Direct that such party shall appear in person—Under this rule an order directing a party to appear in person can only be made if the pleader who represents him has refused or is unable to answer material questions (n) See O 9 r 12

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order pronouncing judgment against a party under sub r (2) [O 43 r 1 cl (e)] Where in a suit by A against B C and D the Court struck off B's defence owing to his failure to appear in person but ultimately decided the case on the merits and passed a decree against all three defendants their defences being similar it was held that B was not entitled to appeal from the order striking off his defence but that he was at liberty to appeal from the final decree and in that appeal to object to the order striking off his defence [s 105] (o)

Res judicata—A dismissal of a suit under sub r (2) operates as res judicata so as to bar a subsequent suit in respect of the same matter (p)

ORDER XI

Discovery and Inspection

Discovery by interrogatories

1 [R S C O 31, r 1, Cf S 121] In any suit the plaintiff or defendant by leave of the Court may deliver interrogatories in writing for the examination of the opposite parties or any one or more of such parties and such interrogatories when delivered shall have a note at the foot thereof stating which of such interrogatories each of such persons is required to answer Provided that no party shall deliver more than one set of interrogatories to the same party without an order for that purpose Provided also that interrogatories which do not relate to any matters in question in the suit shall be deemed irrelevant, notwithstanding that they might be admissible on the oral cross examination of a witness

Discovery by interrogatories—Every party to a suit is entitled to know the nature of his opponent s case (q) so that he may know beforehand what case he has to meet at the hearing (r) But he is not entitled to know the facts which constitute exclusively the evidence of his opponent s case the reason being that it would enable an unscrupulous party to tamper with his opponent s witnesses and to manufacture evidence in contradiction and so shape his case as to defeat justice (s) The nature of a plaintiff s case is disclosed in his plaint The nature of a defendant s case is disclosed in his written statement But a plaint or a written statement may not sufficiently disclose the nature of a party s case and to make good the deficiency either party may administer interrogatories in writing to the other through the Court Interrogatories may also be administered by a party to his opponent to obtain admissions from him to facilitate the proof of his own case The party to whom interrogatories are administered must answer them in writing and on oath (r 8) This is called discovery by interrogatories the party to whom the interrogatories are administered discovers or discloses by his affidavit in answer to the interrogatories the nature of his case

Every suit contemplates two sets of facts namely, (1) facts which constitute a party s case and (2) facts by which a party s case is to be proved (see O 6 r 2) The first set of facts discloses the nature of a party s case The second set forms the evidence of his case Thus if A sues B for damages for breach of a contract A must prove (1) the contract and (2) breach of the contract These two facts constitute A s case and determine the nature of A s case Therefore B may administer interrogatories to A to elicit particulars of (1) the contract and (2) the breach thereof He may also interrogate A to obtain admissions from him to facilitate the proof of his own case But he is not entitled to administer interrogatories to ascertain the evidence by which A will prove these two facts Thus B may not ask who was present at the time when the alleged contract was made in other words it is not permissible to ask the names of A s witnesses (t) But if the name and address of a person is itself a relevant fact an interrogatory as to that name and address is not rendered inadmissible merely because it involves the disclosure of a witness s name (u) In a suit for the recovery of the amount of a hundi drawn by the defendant for an advance of Rs 5000 made by the plaintiff and to have been dishonoured by non payment the defendant is entitled to discovery of the form in which consideration was paid and particulars of the time and place when and where defendant accepted the hundi and the names and addresses of persons by whom and the time and place at which the hundi was presented for payment All these are material facts which constitute the plaintiff s case (v) See notes to O 6 r 4 Object of particulars See also note below Interrogatories relating to names of persons

What interrogatories may be allowed—In England interrogatories are allowed for the following purposes —

(1) To ascertain the nature of your opponent s case or the material facts constituting his case (w)

(r) Marriott v Chamberlain (1886) 17 Q B D 154

(2) To support your own case either

(a) directly by obtaining admissions or

(b) indirectly by impeaching or destroying your adversary s case (x)

Case (1) has already been dealt with The following is an illustration of Case 2 A sues B to recover Rs 5 000 for making model machinery for exhibition The defence is that the machinery was defective and unworkable A may interrogate B whether the machinery did not obtain a prize at the exhibition If it did it is clear that the answer would tend to destroy B s case and support A s case (y) Moreover the answer will serve as an admission from B and the getting of admissions by interrogatories is always allowed for it supports the party s case ( )

There is one exception to the rule in Case 2 (b) A sues to eject B from a piece of land alleging that the land belongs to him and that B is wrongfully in possession thereof This is an action of ejectment A is plaintiff in ejectment and B is defendant in ejectment In an action of ejectment the plaintiff must prove his own title affirmatively It is not enough for him to impeach or destroy the defendant s title If he does not establish his own title to the land he will not be entitled to a decree though he may succeed in impeaching or even destroying the defendant s title The reason is that the defendant being in possession he cannot be dispossessed of the land except by proof of title on the part of the claimant Hence the plaintiff in ejectment should not be allowed to interrogate the defendant merely for the purpose of destroying or impeaching the defendant s title (a) And this is the Exception above referred to But the plaintiff in ejectment is entitled to interrogate the defendant as to any matter relating to the defendant s title that may support his case directly (b) The same principles apply in the case of discovery by production of documents

The High Court of Calcutta has said that interrogatories in India should not be allowed for the first of the above purposes that is to ascertain the nature of your opponent s case but that they may be allowed for the second that is to support your own case (c) This is on the ground that where a party has not sufficiently disclosed his case it is the Court that has to determine the exact nature of his case by procedure under O 8 r 7 and O 14 rr 1 2 and that it is not therefore permissible to the opposite party to get that information by discovery But these rules are it is submitted intended not to supersede but to supplement discovery and there is no reason why any distinction should be drawn between the English and the Indian practice (d)

What interrogatories may not be allowed —These may be divided into three classes —

1 A party is not entitled to administer interrogatories for obtaining discovery of facts which constitute exclusively the evidence of his adversary s case or title (e)

2 A party is not entitled to interrogate as to any confidential communications between his opponent and his legal advisers

3 A party is not entitled to execute interrogatories which would involve disclosures injurious to public interests

1 Interrogatories relating to names of persons—Interrogatories relating to the names of persons not already parties to the action are only allowable where the object is either to make the proceedings complete and effective for all purposes or to enable the plaintiff more effectively to substantiate the case which he makes against the existing defendant (f) Such interrogatories are not allowable in any other case Thus in a suit by the vendor against the purchaser for specific performance of a contract for sale the plaintiff is not entitled to interroga e the defendant for the purpose of disco vering whether he was acting as agent for an undisclosed principal The only ob ect of such an interrogatory is to give the plaintiff the opportunity of releasing the defendant and of securing for the plaintiff some other person liable under the contract in substitution for and not jointly with the defendant (g)

As to interrogatories as to names of witnesses see note above Discovery by interrogatories and notes to O 6 r 4 Object of particulars As to interroga tories as to names of informants in defamation cases see the undermentioned cases (h)

Refusal by company to regist r transfer—Where an article of a company's articles of association empowers the directors without assigning any reason to decline to register any transfer of shares not fully paid up made to any person not approved by them or made by any member jointly or alone indebted to the company and the company refuses to register a transfer the company is not entitled in an action for a declaration that the refusal was wrongful to refuse to state which of the grounds mention ed in the article the directors had acted under although it might refuse to say what reasons influenced them in exercising their discretion before that ground (i)

Foreign law—An interrogatory involving a question of foreign aw is not per missible unless the party interrogated is shown to be an expert in that law (j)

Time for delivery of interrogatories—A plaintiff may under this rule deliver interrogatories to a defendant even before the filing of the written statement But there is this difference if the English practice is to be followed here that in what are called common law actions interrogatories if delivered before filing the written statement will as a rule be struck out under r 7 as unnecessary and vexatious unless sufficient reasons are given by the plaintiff to explain why the interrogatories are neces sary at that stage of the suit (k) while in suits of the nature of chancery actions (l) they may as a rule be allowed though no written statement has been filed (m)

A defendant as a rule is not allowed to deliver interrogatories to the plaintiff before he has filed his written statement (n)

Leave of Court—The application for leave to administer interrogatories is as a rule made ex parte In determining whether leave should be granted the Court should consider whether it is a fit and proper case for administering interrogatories Leave should be refused if the interrogatories are scandalous or are an abuse of the process of the Court But it is not the duty of the Court when granting leave to con sider what particular questions the party interrogated should be compelled to answer The proper time for considering that question is after the party interrogated has made his affidavit in answer [r 8] (o) See r 2 below

Opposite party —These words do not include solely the relation of plaintiff and defendant Hence one defendant may administer interrogatories to another defendant provided there is some right to be adjusted in the action between them (p)

Where opposite party is a minor or lunatic —Where a party to a suit is a minor or a lunatic interrogatories may be administered to his next friend or guardian ad litem as the case may be see r 23 below

Points of distinction between interrogatories and cross examination —

(1) Not every question which could be asked to a witness in the box may be put as an interrogatory Thus questions which are put only to test the credibility of a person will not be allowed although of course they may be asked in cross examination (q)

(2) Interrogatories can be administered only to a party to a suit and not to a witness (r)

Impleading party for discovery —A person cannot be made a party to a suit solely for the purpose of discovery (s)

Distinction between pleadings and interrogatories —Interrogatories are not like pleadings confined to the material facts on which the parties rely in support of their claim or defence Interrogatories may be administered not only to ascertain the nature of your opponent s case but to obtain admissions from him of everything which is material on the pleadings so as to facilitate the proof of your own case and thus save yourself the expense of proving facts admitted by your opponent in answer to the interrogatories (t)

Probate proceedings —O 11 applies by virtue of s 266 of the Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 to proceedings in probate (u)

2 [New R S C, O 13 r 2] On an application for leave to deliver interrogatories, the particular interrogatories proposed to be delivered shall be submitted to the Court In deciding upon such application, the Court shall take into account any offer which may be made by the party sought to be interrogated to deliver particulars, or to make admissions, or to produce documents relating to the matters in question, or any of them, and leave shall be given as to such only of the interrogatories submitted as the Court shall consider necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs

Particular interrogatories to be submitted

Power of Court under this rule —It is to be noted that the Court has no power under this rule to settle interrogatories but to state only what interrogatories should be administered (t) Further the allowance by the Court of interrogatories to be administered to a party does not amount to a decision that the party is bound to answer them but leaves him at liberty to take any objection to answering which he might otherwise have taken (w) See rr 6 7 below

Running down cases—In running down cases only such interrogatories should be allowed as may be necessary for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs within this rule (x)

3 [R S C, O 31 r 3 Cf S 123] In adjusting the costs of the suit inquiry shall at the instance of any party be made into the propriety of exhibiting such interrogatories, and if it is the opinion of the taxing officer or of the Court, either with or without an application for inquiry, that such interrogatories have been exhibited unreasonably, vexatiously, or at improper length, the cost occasioned by the said interrogatories and the answer thereto shall be paid in any event by the party in fault

Costs of interrogatories.

4 [New R S C, O 31, r 4] Interrogatories shall be in Form No 2 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require

Form of interrogatories

5 [R S C O 31 r 5 Cf S 124] Where any party to a suit is a corporation or a body of persons, whether incorporated or not, empowered by law to sue or be sued whether in its own name or in the name of any officer or other person any opposite party may apply for an order allowing him to deliver interrogatories to any member or officer of such corporation or body, and an order may be made accordingly

Corporations

Delivery of interrogatories to an officer of a corporation—A corporate body cannot answer for itself and if it is necessary that some officer should answer for it His answer is the answer of the Company and can be read against the Company Therefore he is only bound to answer with reference to knowledge acquired in the course of his employment by the Company and as the result of inquiries made by him of the other officers and agent of the Company with regard to their knowledge acquired in the same way He is not bound to answer as to his own knowledge or to make inquiries of the other officers or agents of the Company as to their knowledge acquired accidentally or in some other capacity (y)

6 [R S C O 32 r 6 Cf S 125] Any objection to answering any interrogatory on the ground that it is scandalous or irrelevant or not exhibited bona fide for the purpose of the suit, or that the matters inquired into are not sufficiently material at that stage, or on any other ground, may be taken in the affidavit in answer

Scandalous interrogatories — Certainly nothing can be scandalous which is relevant ( ) Interrogatories which tend to incriminate a party are not scandalous if they are relevant (a)

Irrelevant interrogatories —The discovery by interrogatories as distinguished from cross examination must be directly relevant to the matter in issue (b) Thus in an action for damages against the defendant for seducing the plaintiff's daughter the defendant cannot be asked how rich he is as it is perfectly irrelevant in such cases whether the defendant is rich or poor the true measure of damages being the amount of compensation to be paid to the plaintiff for the injury he has sustained by the seduction of his daughter But interrogatories as to whether the defendant has had sexual intercourse with the daughter and whether he had stated that he believed that she had not had such intercourse with any other man are allowable (c) Similarly interrogatories will not be allowed if the defence at which they aim would be no defence in law to the suit (d)

Where a party seeks discovery of documents and the opposite party alleges that the documents are not relevant the procedure to be followed is that laid down in r 18 sub r (2) below A party should not be compelled by means of interrogatories to give discovery of document the relevancy of which is denied (e)

Not exhibited bona fide for the purpose of the suit —Though an interrogatory may be relevant it may be ojected to on the gound that it is put with a view to serve an ulterior object beyond the scope of the suit

Not sufficiently material at that stage —An interrogatory may be perfectly relevant to a suit and put bona fide for the purposes of the suit but if it is premature it will not be allowed (f) This may be illustrated by the following cases —

(1) A sues B for breach of an alleged trust and for profits made by B by such breach B denies the alleged trust A is not entitled to interrogate B so as to require from him an account of profits of the alleged trust fund unless the trust is proved (g) but it is otherwise if the breach of trust is admitted (h)

(2) In Hennessy v Clark (i) the plaintiff's interrogatories as to the amount of damages were held to be premature as it was not yet decided whether the plaintiff was entitled to any damages at all Cotton L J said The Court is always unwilling before the right to relief is established to make an order for discovery which may be injurious to the defendant and will only be useful to the plaintiff if he succeeds in establishing his title to relief

Or any other ground —Besides the three specific grounds mentioned in the rule a party interrogated may object to answer an interrogatory on the ground that it is prolix oppressive unnecessary or scandalous (r 7) or on the grounds specified in the notes to r 1 What interrogatories may not be allowed on p ol above

Fishing interrogatories not allowed —The questions asked must not be fishing that is to say they must refer to some definite and existing state of circumstances and must not be put merely in the hope of discovering something which may help the party interrogating to make out some case (j) See Odgers on Pleading 8th Ed p 218 For instances of fishing interrogatories see Ali Kadar v Gobind Das (k)

Contracts by way of wager—In cases where the defence of wager is set up the Court will refuse to allow the party setting up this defence to interrogate his opponent generally as to his business transactions apart from the particular transactions in the suit the reason being that it is manifestly unfair to compel a person to disclose his general dealings on the chance that thereby his opponent may discover something that will support his case (l)

Defamation—Where a statement of claim in an action for slander alleges publication to one named person and publication also to various other persons unnamed it is not generally permissible to ask the defendant whether he uttered the words complained of to any person or persons other than the person named and if so to give their names Such an interrogatory is a fishing interrogatory the object being to find out some cause of action against the defendant other than the specific cause of action alleged in the plaint (m)

Setting aside and striking out interrogatories

7 [New R S C, O 31, r 7] Any interrogatories may be set aside on the ground that they have been exhibited unreasonably or vexatiously, or struck out on the ground that they are prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous, and any application for this purpose may be made within seven days after service of the interrogatories

Setting aside and striking out interrogatories—A as trustee in the bankruptcy of C sues B for a declaration that a piece of land purchased by B and C in 1883 was purchased by B and C in partnership B denies the partnership A exhibits interrogatories to B asking for particulars of purchases of land by B and C previous and subsequent to 1883 to prove that they had been co partners in various other purchases similar to that of 1883 The interrogatories are irrelevant and oppressive and must be struck out To ask the defendant to take the trouble to go through his books and papers for so many years is vexatious and oppressive (n)

The present rule does not apply where the interrogatories are merely irrelevant An objection that an interrogatory is irrelevant must be taken in the affidavit in answer (r 6) and is no ground for setting aside the interrogatory under this rule (o)

There is no foundation for the opinion that a person who has a ground for refusing to answer [an interrogatory] is precluded from availing himself of that ground because he has not applied to have the interrogatory struck out (p)

Affidavit in answer filing

8 [R S C, O 31, r 8, S 126] Interrogatories shall be answered by affidavit to be filed within ten days, or within such other time as the Court may allow

Answers as to matters done by agent or servant of party interrogated—A party to a suit is not excused from answering interrogatories relevant to the question in issue on the ground that they are as to matters which are not within his own knowledge but are only within the knowledge of his agents or servants if such knowledge has been acquired by them in the ordinary course of their employment He is bound to obtain the information from such agents or servants unless he shows that it would be unreasonable to require him to do so as for instance if either such agents or servants have left his employment or if it would occasion unreasonable expense or an unreasonable amount of delay or the like (q) A party's banker or solicitor is his agent within the meaning of the above rule (r) But a party is not bound to disclose matters that have come to the knowledge of his agents or servants otherwise than in the ordinary course of their employment (s)

Form of affidavit in answer

9 [New R S C, O 31, r 9] An affidavit in answer to interrogatories shall be in Form No 3 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require

No exception to be taken

10 [New R S C O 31, r 10] No exceptions shall be taken to any affidavit in answer, but the sufficiency or otherwise of any such affidavit objected to as insufficient shall be determined by the Court

Order to answer or answer further

11 [R S C O 32 r 11 S 127] Where any person interrogated omits to answer, or answers insufficiently, the party interrogating may apply to the Court for an order requiring him to answer, or to answer further, as the case may be And an order may be made requiring him to answer or answer further, either by affidavit or by viva voce examination, as the Court may direct

Application for further answer to interrogatories—An application for a further answer to interrogatories ought to specify the interrogatories or parts of interrogatories to which a further answer is required (t)

Answers insufficiently — With regard to an answer to interrogatories what the Court has to consider is this simply whether the answer is insufficient not to go into the question of the truthfulness of the answer but to see whether it is insufficient or not and if it is insufficient then only can it require a further answer (u)

When an answer is couched in a form which makes it embarrassing that is to say which prevents the person who asks for it from using it without having thrust upon him irrelevant matters as part of it the answer is insufficient and the proper course to pursue is to ask that a further answer shall be made (v)

Privilege—Where in an answer to interrogatories the party interrogated declines to give further information on the ground of privilege and the privilege is properly claimed in law the Court will not require a further answer to be put in unless it is clearly satisfied either from the nature of the subject matter for which privilege is claimed or from statements in the answer itself or in documents so referred to as to become part of the answer that the claim for privilege cannot possibly be substantiated The mere existence of reasonable suspicion which is sufficient to justify the Court in requiring a further affidavit of documents is not enough when a claim for privilege in an answer

12 [R S C, O 31, r 12, S 129] Any party may, without filing any affidavit, apply to the Court for an order directing any other party to any suit to make discovery on oath of the documents which are or have been in his possession or power, relating to any matter in question therein On the hearing of such application the Court may either refuse or adjourn the same, if satisfied that such discovery is not necessary, or not necessary at that stage of the suit, or make such order, either generally or limited to certain classes of documents, as may, in its discretion, be thought fit Provided that discovery shall not be ordered when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs

Application for discovery of documents

13 [R S C, O 31 r 13 S 129, 2nd para] The affidavit to be made by a party against whom such order as is mentioned in the last preceding rule has been made, shall specify which (if any) of the documents therein mentioned he objects to produce, and it shall be in Form No 5 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require

Affidavit of documents

Discovery and production of documents—Besides discovery by way of answer to interrogatories there is another species of discovery called discovery of documents The parties to a suit may have in their possession or power documents relating to the matters in question in the suit These documents may be divided into two classes —

(i) those which the adversary is entitled to inspect and

(ii) those which he is not entitled to inspect

Documents which belong to class (ii) are described and classified below under the head Grounds of objection to production of documents As to class (i) it may be said that the adversary is entitled to inspection of all documents which do not come within class (ii) Speaking generally we may say that the adversary is entitled to inspection of all documents which do not of themselves constitute exclusively the party's evidence of his case or title But how is inspection to be obtained? If A wants to inspect documents in the possession of B which he is entitled to inspect it is clear that he cannot inspect them unless they are produced by B A must therefore call upon B to produce the documents But how can A do this unless he knows what documents are in the possession or power of B? To enable him to obtain this information A is entitled to discovery from B of the documents in his possession or power (x) For this purpose A may apply to the Court for an order requiring B to make an affidavit called affidavit of documents stating what documents are in his possession or power relating to the matters in dispute in the suit When the Court makes the order B is bound to make his affidavit of documents and if he fails to do so he will be subjected to the penalties specified in r 21 below After B has disclosed his documents by affidavit A may require him to produce for his inspection such of the documents as he is in law entitled to inspect O 11

Contents of affidavit of documents —A party who is ordered to make his affidavit of document should set forth in the affidavit all documents which are or have been in his possession or power relating to all matters in question in the suit As to documents which are not but have been in his possession or power he must state what has become of them and in whose possession they are in order that the opposite party may be enabled to get production from the persons who have possession of them For the same reason if there are any documents in which he has a joint property with other persons not before the Court he must state the names of those persons Rule 13 provides that every affidavit of documents should also specify which of the documents therein set forth the declarant objects to produce for the inspection of the opposite party together with the grounds of such objection (see App C Form No 5) These grounds are three in number and are detailed below The Court examines these grounds when it is called upon to make an order for production of the documents in a party's possession for the inspection of the opposite party (r 14)

Grounds of objection to production of documents —Production of documents can be resisted as of right on three grounds (1) as disclosing the party's evidence (2) as being within the doctrine of legal professional privilege and (3) as being injurious to public interests

1 A party is not bound to produce for the inspection of his opponent documents which of themselves evidence exclusively the party's own case or title (y) —Documents constituting evidence of the party's case or title are not protected unless they are solely or exclusively evidence of it Where a document is or may be evidence for the adversary as well as the party the party cannot withhold inspection of it from the adversary (z) although his own evidence may be thus disclosed (a) It is not enough for a man to say such and such documents are the title deeds of his property it is no ground for refusing their production if they are necessary to support the adversary's case (b) But a document is protected from production and inspection if it exclusively evidences a party's own case and does not support the adversary's case (c) To entitle the party to this protection the privilege must be properly claimed that he must state in his affidavit that the documents constitute evidence of his own case or title that they contain nothing supporting or tending to support the adversary's case or title and that they contain nothing impeaching his own case or title (d) As to discovery in actions of ejectment see notes to r 1 above What interrogatories may be allowed

2 A party is not bound to produce any confidential communications between him and his legal adviser (e) —The object of this rule is to enable persons to obtain legal advice

A communication with a legal adviser is protected though it relates to a transaction which is not the subject of litigation provided it is a communication made to him for the purpose of obtaining professional advice (q) But no privilege attaches to communications between a solicitor and his client which are in themselves facts of a criminal or unlawful proceeding (r) Where one of the trustees of a will is a solicitor and acts as the solicitor for the trustees communications passing between him and his co trustees which would be privileged if the solicitor were not a trustee are privileged notwithstanding that he is a trustee (s) But confidential communications between a principal and an agent who is not a legal agent e g a commercial agent are not privileged whether they are made after litigation has become imminent and after legal advice has been taken or even after litigation has commenced (t) Similarly reports made by a servant to his master regarding the subject matter of the suit are not privileged (u) See Evidence Act 1872 ss 126 129

3 A party is not bound to produce any public official document if its production would be injurious to public interests (v)—This head of privilege applies as a rule when a party to a suit is a public officer See Evidence Act 1872 ss 123 124

In all the three heads of privilege mentioned above the privilege must be claimed in the affidavit of documents and the grounds of privilege must be sufficiently disclosed If the affidavit of documents does not sufficiently raise the claim of privilege the party may be allowed to put in a further affidavit in support of that claim (w)

apparently yes according to the Indian law See Evidence Act s 132 where the term witness obviously includes a party to a suit O 1

Conclusiveness of affidavit of documents Further affidavit—If a party states in his affidavit of documents that he has no documents relating to the matters in question in the suit other than those set forth in the affidavit his oath is conclusive and the other party cannot cross examine upon it nor adduce evidence to contradict it nor administer interrogatories asking whether he has not in his possession or power documents other than those set forth in his affidavit (y) The oath of the party being conclusive the Court will not order him to make a further affidavit of documemts though the opponent may state on oath that the party has got other documents in his possession (z) the reason being that in all questions of discovery the oath of the party making the discovery is conclusive as against the oath of the party claiming the discovery (a) The only case in which the Court may require a party to make a further affidavit is where there is a resonable probability or presumption or even ground for suspicion derived from certain sources that he has other relevant documents in his possession (b) The sources into which the Court may look for this purpose are (1) the affidavit of documents itself (²) the documents therein referred to and (3) the pleadings(c) Unless the affidavit is shewn from any of these sources to be insufficient the general rule is that no further affidavit can be ordered But this rule is qualified where the basis on which the affidavit has been made turns out to be wrong Thus if the party making the affidavit has misconceived his case so that the Court is practically certain that if he had acted on a proper view of the law he would have disclosed further documents then the Court will refuse to recognise the affidavit as conclusive and order a further affidavit (d)

The affidavit of documents is also conclusive as to the facts constituting the ground of objection to production Thus if a party sets forth five documents in his affidavit and objects to produce two of them on the assertion that they relate exclusively to his own title and that they contain nothing tending to support the adversary s title the Court will not go behind the affidavit (e) and will not order production unless the Court is reasonably satisfied or reasonably certain from the sources specified in the preceding paragraph that the nature of the documents as described by the party has been misconceived by the party or that the documents are of such a character that the party cannot properly make such an assertion (f) Mere suspicion that the documents are not of the character described by the party though it is sufficient to justify the Court in ordering the party to make a further affidavit of documents (see preceding paragraph) does not entitle the Court to order their production (g)

In a suit for the price of material supplied to the defendant in which the defence was that the materials were defective the defendant objected to produce his engineer s report on the ground that it formed evidence of his own case exclusively but the Court ordered production on the ground that the defendant had set forth the nature of the report in his written statement and the statement showed that the report was not of the character described by the defendant (h)

3 Court may inspect the document for the purpose of deciding whether the claim of privilege is valid See r 19 sub r (2)

Sufficient description of documents—As it is one of the objects of the affidavit of documents to enable the Court to make an order for production of the documents mentioned therein the affidavit ought to contain a sufficient description of the documents A description will be held sufficient if it is of such a character that if an order for production is made the Court can determine whether the documents are the same as those ordered to be produced (i) Where there are numerous documents the practice is to tie them up in bundles to schedule the bundles and number the documents or otherwise ear mark them in such a way that the other party may ask for those which he wants to see (j)

When a party claims to withhold certain documents from production although some description may be necessary he need not give such a description as would enable the adversary to know their contents (k) Thus where privilege is claimed for letters it is not necessary to state the dates or the names of the writers nor such other particulars as might enable the opponent to discover indirectly the contents (l)

Not necessary at that stage of the suit—See notes to r 6 above Not sufficiently material at that stage

Relating to any matter in question in the suit.—Every document which will throw any light on the case is a document relating to a matter in dispute in the suit (m) though it may not be admissible in evidence (n) A document may not be admissible in evidence and yet it may contain information which may either directly or indirectly enable the party seeking discovery either (1) to advance his own case or (2) to damage his adversary's case or which may fairly lead him to a train of inquiry which may have either of these two consequences (o) Every such document must be included in the affidavit of document and the opposite party is entitled to inspection of such documents Thus a plaintiff may be required to produce for inspection of the defendant correspondence containing mere matter of opinion by non legal agent as to the prospect of the plaintiff's success in the case though the correspondence may not be admissible in evidence (p)

Non disclosure of documents—Presumption— It is open to a litigant to refrain from producing any document that he considers irrelevant if the other litigant is dissatisfied, it is for him to apply for an affidavit of documents and he can obtain inspection and production of all that appears to him in such affidavit to be relevant and proper If he fails so to do neither he nor the Court at his suggestion is entitled to draw any inference as to the contents of any such documents It is for the litigant who desires to rely on the contents of documents to put them in evidence in the usual and proper way if he fails to do so no inference in his favour can be drawn as to the contents thereof (q) But where an order for discovery is made upon a party and it is alleged by him as to some of the documents that they may have been destroyed or may have perished it is incumbent on him to give evidence of diligent search and of failure to find them if no such evidence is given the presumption arises that the contents of the documents not accounted for are as regards the issue in dispute unfavourable to that party (r)

Several plaintiffs or several defendants.—Where there are several plaintiffs or several defendants all must join in making the affidavit of documents unless some specific reasons to the contrary are shown. The fact that some of the parties reside in England is no reason why they should be excused from making such affidavit (s).

Minors and lunatics.—The next friend or guardian ad litem as the case may be of a minor or a lunatic may be required to make an affidavit of documents (r. 23).

Affidavit of documents from a co-defendant.—An affidavit of documents may be required by a defendant from a co-defendant if there is an issue joined between them but not otherwise (t). See notes to r. 1 above, "Opposite party".

Advocate General.—No order can be made against the Advocate General whether he be plaintiff or defendant requiring him to give discovery on oath. Hence no affidavit of documents can be required from the Advocate General. But an affidavit of documents may be required from the relators (u). See s. 9.

Official Liquidator.—The Official Liquidator being an officer of the Court should not in the absence of special circumstances be required to make an affidavit as to documents in his possession though he is bound to produce to the adverse litigant the documents which the latter requires to see (v).

Marine Insurance.—The affidavit of ship's papers which underwriters are entitled to require from the plaintiff in an action on a policy of marine insurance on cargo is not limited to documents in the possession of the plaintiff or other persons interested in the insurance but extends to all material documents in whomsoever's possession they may be (w).

Sealing up parts of documents.—Where one part of a document relates to matter in dispute in the suit and another part does not, the latter may be sealed up and so concealed from inspection. Similarly where protection from discovery can be claimed for one part of a document and not for another part, the part which can be protected may be sealed up (x). In some cases the Judge has ordered the sealed parts to be unfastened in order that he might inspect them himself (y). See r. 19, sub-r. (2).

Duty of solicitor.—Where after a party has made his affidavit of documents his solicitor finds that there are other documents which have not been disclosed, it is the duty of the solicitor to bring those documents to the notice of his opponent at the earliest possible opportunity (z).

Inspection of property being subject-matter of suit.—See O. 39, r. 7 (1) (a).

Production of documents

14. [R. S. C., O. 31, r. 14, S. 130.] It shall be lawful for the Court, at any time during the pendency of any suit, to order the production by any party thereto upon oath of such of the documents in his possession or power, relating to any matter in question in such suit, as the Court shall think right; and

A party is entitled under this rule to inspection of letters referred to in an affidavit of the opposite party though the affidavit has not been filed provided it is sworn and a copy thereof is furnished to him (t)

Inspection by party or his pleader—No one is entitled under this rule to inspection except a party or his pleader The term party includes the authorized agent of the party (w) But if such agent was formerly in the employ of the opposite party and in charge of his books the Court ought not to permit inspection to be taken by him (x)

16 [R S C, O 31, r 16] Notice to any party to produce any documents referred to in his pleading or affidavits shall be in Form No 7 in Appendix C with such variations as circumstances may require

Notice to produce

17 [R S C, O 31, r 17, S 132] The party to whom such notice is given shall, within ten days from the receipt of such notice, deliver to the party giving the same a notice stating a time within three days from the delivery thereof at which the documents or such of them as he does not object to produce, may be inspected at the office of his pleader, or in the case of bankers books or other books of account or books in constant use for the purposes of any trade or business, at their usual place of custody, and stating which (if any) of the documents he objects to produce, and on what ground Such notice shall be in Form No 8 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require inspection or objects to give inspection, or offers inspection elsewhere than at the office of his pleader, the Court may, on the application of the party desiring it make an order for inspection in such place and in such manner as it may think fit Provided that the order shall not be made when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs

(2) Any application to inspect documents, except such as are referred to in the pleadings, particulars or affidavits of the party against whom the application is made or disclosed in his affidavits of documents, shall be founded upon an affidavit showing of what documents inspection is sought, that the party applying is entitled to inspect them, and that they are in the possession or power of the other party The Court shall not make such order for inspection of such documents when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs

Served with notice —No order for inspection can be made under this rule unless notice has been served under r 15 (a)

Sub rule (2) —This sub rule provides for the inspection amongst others of documents not disclosed in the affidavit of documents and the Court may under this sub rule direct a party to give inspection of such documents But an opportunity should be given to such party to make an affidavit in answer and if he in such affidavit denies possession of the document the affidavit will be conclusive on that fact (b) But he cannot merely rely on his previous affidavit of documents in answer to an application under this sub rule for such an affidavit is conclusive for the purposes only of discovery as distinguished from inspection (c)

Appeal —No appeal lies under the Code from an order for inspection Nor does an appeal lie under cl 15 of the Letters Patent for an order directing inspection to be given as it is not a judgment within the meaning of that clause (d)

Bankers Books Evidence Act —In ordering inspection under the Bankers Books Evidence Act 1891 the Court is guided by the general rules regulating the inspection of documents before trial (e)

19 [New R S C, O 31 r 19A] (1) Where inspection of any business books is applied for, the Court may, if it thinks fit, instead of ordering inspection of the original books, order a copy of any entries therein to be furnished and verified by the affidavit of some person who has examined the copy with the original entries, and such affidavit shall state whether or not there are in the original book any and what erasures, interlineations or alterations Provided that, notwithstanding that such copy has been supplied, the Court may order inspection of the book from which the copy was made

(2) Where on an application for an order for inspection privilege is claimed for any document, it shall be lawful for the Court to inspect the document for the purpose of deciding as to the validity of the claim of privilege

(3) The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit at any time, and whether an affidavit of documents shall or shall not have already been ordered or made, make an order requiring any other party to state by affidavit whether any one or more specific documents, to be specified in the application, is or are, or has or have at any time been, in his possession or power, and, if not then in his possession, when he parted with the same and what has become thereof Such application shall be made on an affidavit stating that in the belief of the deponent the party against whom the application is made has, or has at some time had, in his possession or power the document or documents specified in the application and that they relate to the matters in question in the suit, or to some of them

Specific documents—To justify an application under sub r (3) the party making the application must in his affidavit name and specify so that they can be identified the particular documents of which he desires discovery It is not sufficient to make a general affidavit based on a priori reasoning that certain classes of documents must be in his opponent s possession or power (f)

Premature discovery

20 [R S C, O 31, r 20 S 135] Where the party from whom discovery of any kind or inspection is sought objects to the same, or any part thereof, the Court may, if satisfied that the right to the discovery or inspection sought depends on the determination of any issue or question in dispute in the suit, or that for any other reason it is desirable that any issue or question in dispute in the suit should be determined before deciding upon the right to the discovery or inspection, order that such issue or question be determined first, and reserve the question as to the discovery or inspection

(f) White v Spafford & Co [1901 2 K B 41

Issue to decide upon right to inspection—The object of the rule is to enable the Court to decide an issue in a suit as distinguished from the suit itself for the purposes of discovery (g) See notes to r 6 above Not sufficiently material at that stage

Non-compliance with order for discovery

21 [R S C O 31, r 21, S 136] Where any party fails to comply with any order to answer interrogatories, or for discovery or inspection of documents he shall, if a plaintiff, be liable to have his suit dismissed for want of prosecution, and if a defendant, to have his defence, if any, struck out, and to be placed in the same position as if he had not defended, and the party interrogating or seeking discovery or inspection may apply to the Court for an order to that effect, and an order may be made accordingly

Dismissal of suit—This rule cannot be applied unless there has been an order for discovery under r 12 or for inspection under r 18 (h) And even where such an order has been made it is only when the default is wilful and as a last resort that the Court should dismiss the suit or strike out the defence (i) If the parties concerned are purdanashin ladies this should be taken into account before making the order (j) The word production which occurred after discovery in the corresponding s 136 of the Code of 1882 has been omitted in the present rule It has hence been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (k) and Madras (l) that this rule does not apply to cases where there has been non compliance with an order for production of documents made under r 14 According to a Lahore decision (m) this rule applies also to orders made under r 14

Contempt—Besides the penalty prescribed by this rule a party to a suit filed in a Chartered High Court who has failed to answer or give inspection is liable to be committed for contempt by that Court This power has been conferred on Chartered High Courts by their Letters Patent (n) An order of committal for contempt is appealable according to the Bombay decisions (o) but not according to the Allahabad decisions (p)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule under O 43 r 1 (f) below (q)

Using answers to interrogatories at trial

22 [New R S C, O 31, r 24] Any party may, at the trial of a suit, use in evidence any one or more of the answers or any part of an answer of the opposite party to interrogatories without putting in the others or the whole of such

ORDER XII

Admissions

Notice of admission of case

1 [R S C, O 32, r 1] Any party to a suit may give notice, by his pleading, or otherwise in writing, that he admits the truth of the whole or any part of the case of any other party

Different kinds of admissions—The object of obtaining admissions is to do away with the necessity of proving facts that are admitted [see Evidence Act 1872, s 58] Admissions are of three kinds namely—

I Admissions in pleading—

(1) actual that is those contained in the pleadings (O 7 r 5) or in answer to interrogatories (O 11 r 22)

(2) constructive that is those which are merely the consequence of the form of pleading adopted (O 8 rr 3 4 5)

II Admissions by agreement

III Admissions by notice

Admissions by notice are dealt with in this Order

The importance of admission consists in the fact that either party may at any stage of the suit move for judgment on the admissions made by the other side (r 6)

Notice to admit documents

2 [R S C, O 32, r 2, S 128] Either party may call upon the other party to admit any document, saving all just exceptions, and in case of refusal or neglect to admit, after such notice, the costs of proving any such document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs, and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice is given, except where the omission to give the notice is, in the opinion of the Court, a saving of expense

Admissions between co defendants —Admissions between co defendants to which the plaintiff is not a party cannot be entered as evidence against the plaintiff (r)

Form of Notice

3 [New R S C O 32, r 3] A notice to admit documents shall be in Form No 9 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require

Notice to admit facts

4 [New R S C, O 32 r 4] Any party may, by notice in writing, at any time not later than nine days before the day fixed for the hearing, call on any other party to admit, for the purposes of the suit only, any specific fact or facts mentioned in such notice And in case of refusal or neglect to admit the same within six days after service of such notice, or within such further time as may be allowed by the Court, the costs of proving such fact or facts shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs Provided that any admission made in pursuance of such notice is to be deemed to be made only for the purposes of the particular suit, and not as an admission to be used against the party on any other occasion or in favour of any person other than the party giving the notice Provided also that the Court may at any time allow any party to amend or withdraw any admission so made on such terms as may be just

Form of admissions

5 [New R S C O 32, r 5] A notice to admit facts shall be in Form No 10 in Appendix C, and admissions of facts shall be in Form No 11 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require

Judgment on admissions

6 [New R S C, O 32, r 6] Any party may at any stage of a suit, where admissions of fact have been made, either on the pleadings, or otherwise, apply to the Court for such judgment or order as upon such admissions he may be entitled to, without waiting for determination of any other question between the parties and the Court may upon such application make such order, or give such judgment, as the Court may think just

Scope of the rule—This rule is new It is a reproduction of O 32 r 6 of the English Rules It enables either party at any stage of the suit to move for judgment on the admissions which have been made by the other side Either party may by availing himself of this rule get rid of so much of the suit as to which there is no controversy (s) The rule however is permissive it does not preclude a party who does not avail himself of it and proceeds to trial in the ordinary way from relying at the trial on the admissions made by the opposite party (t)

The Court may make such order or give such judgment as the Court may think just —A judgment on admissions is not a matter of right but is in the discretion of the Court If a case involves questions which cannot be conveniently disposed of on a motion under this rule the Court may in the exercise of its discretion refuse the motion (u)

There is no hard and fast rule that where the defendant admits part of the plaintiff s claim and denies the rest of the claim the Court should if it gives judgment under this rule for the plaintiff as to the portion of the claim admitted by the defendant refuse to allow the plaintiff to proceed with the suit as to the remainder of his claim If there is a clear and unambiguous admission by the defendant as to part of the plaintiff s claim the Court has jurisdiction to enter judgment as to that part of the plaintiff s claim and it is in its discretion having regard to the nature of the case and the allegations contained in the pleadings and the admissions made in Court whether it should allow the plaintiff to proceed to prove the remainder of his claim (v) A sues B for Rs 6 800 B admits that only Rs 4 500 are due and alleges as to the rest of A s claim that it was in respect of goods as to which there was a separate arrangement between the parties The issue as to the balance of A s claim being an issue independent of the other part of the claim the Court may pass judgment for A for Rs 4 500 and give leave to A to prove his claim to the balance It is clear that even if the issue as to the balance of A s claim were decided in B s favour it would not having regard to B s admission reduce A s claim below Rs 4 500 (w)

In the United Telephone Co v Donohoe (x) the plaintiffs sued the defendant for infringement of a patent claiming injunction and damages The defendant admitted ten instances of infringement but denied he had committed any others The plaintiffs thereupon moved for judgment upon the admissions in the pleadings In the Court of first instance the Vice Chancellor granted an injunction against infringement by the defendant of the plaintiff s patent but he refused an enquiry as to damages The Court of Appeal held that the plaintiffs were entitled to an enquiry as to damage but that it must be limited to the instances of infringement admitted and that the judgment having been obtained upon a motion for judgment upon the pleadings the plaintiffs were bound to take the negative as well as the affirmative allegations therein Referring to this case Sanderson C J said in the Calcutta case cited above (y) that the question whether the Judge who in the first instance heard the application would have had jurisdiction to give judgment on the admissions and to allow the plaintiffs to proceed to prove the rest of their claim as to the other alleged infringements if such an application had been made was not before the Court

Admissions on pleadings—Under this rule either party may move for judgment upon admissions of fact made on the pleadings or otherwise Admissions in pleadings are either actual or constructive Actual admissions consist of facts expressly admitted either in pleadings or in answer to interrogatories [O 11 r 22] The patent case cited in the preceding paragraph is an instance of actual admissions Constructive admissions on the other hand are admissions which are inferred or implied from pleadings as a consequence of the form of pleading adopted [O 8 rr 3 4 5] Constructive admissions usually arise where a defendant has not specifically dealt with some allegation of fact in the plaint of which he does not admit the truth [O 8 r 3] for as we have seen every allegation of fact in the plaint if not denied specifically or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted in the written statement will be taken to be admitted except as against persons under disability [O 8 r 5] Constructive admissions also arise where a defendant denies an allegation of fact in the plaint evasively and does not answer the point of substance [O 8 r 4]

Illustrations

1 A alleging that he and B having agreed to carry on certain business in partnership draft articles of partnership were prepared and approved by B and that they both thereupon proceeded with the partnership undertaking sues B for a declaration that he and B were partners and claims that the partnership may be dissolved B in his written statement admits that he agreed to enter into partnership as alleged but adds that terms of the arrangement between himself and the plaintiff were not definitely agreed upon as alleged This is an evasive denial of the fact of partnership (O 8 r 4) and it will therefore be construed as an admission by B of the partnership A is therefore entitled under this rule to a decree for dissolution of partnership without adducing any evidence to prove the partnership But though the written statement will be construed as an admission of the fact of partnership it will not be construed as an admission of the terms of the partnership B may therefore claim an inquiry as to the terms of the arrangement of partnership and if such inquiry is claimed the Court will direct it by its decree (z)

2 A defendant by his written statement simply puts the plaintiff to proof of the several allegations in the plaint The denial not being specific (O 8 r 3) the defendant will be deemed to have admitted the facts alleged in the plaint (O 8 r 5) so as to entitle the plaintiff to a decree under this rule without adducing any evidence in support of his case (a)

In applying the present rule in India it is to be noted that where a plaintiff applies for a decree upon constructive admission in a written statement the Court may in its discretion refuse to pass the decree if it thinks in the special circumstances of the case that the defendant must not be held to have admitted facts not specifically denied in his written statement (b) See the proviso to r [illegible] of O 8 and notes thereto

An order on admissions on the pleadings will not be made unless the admissions are clear and unequivocal (c) Moreover a plaintiff moving for judgment on admission in the defendant's written statement must have a clear case and the mere admission by the defendant of a right asserted by the plaintiff but which has in fact no existence in law is not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to a judgment establishing his right (d)

6 Judgment upon admissions made otherwise than on pleadings—A judgment may be given under this rule not only upon admissions made in the pleadings but upon admissions otherwise made The words "or otherwise" in this rule are not confined to admissions made under r 1 or r 4 of this Order but are of general application and justify the giving of an immediate judgment when an admission is made by letter of facts which show that the defendant has no defence to the action (e) A judgment may be given under this rule even upon a verbal admission if it is clearly proved (f)

Orders which may be made under this rule—This rule was framed for the express purpose that if there was no dispute between the parties and if there was on the pleadings such an admission as to make it plain that the plaintiff was entitled to a particular order he should be able to obtain that order at once upon motion It must however be such an admission of facts as would show that the plaintiff is clearly entitled to the order asked for whether it be in the nature of a decree or a judgment or anything else The rule was not meant to apply when there is any serious question of law to be argued But if there is an admission on the pleadings which clearly entitled the plaintiff to an order then the intention was that he should not have to wait but might at once obtain any order which could have been made on an original hearing of the action (g) An order amounting to what is called a preliminary decree in this Code may appropriately be made under this rule upon a simple motion Where such an order was applied for under the corresponding English rule by a plaintiff in a suit for partition and the defendant contended that that would be giving a decree to the plaintiff and that the plaintiff should wait until the action was set down for trial the Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to an order directing the usual inquiries upon the admissions of the defendant and that he was not bound to wait (h) [O 20 r 18] Such orders have also been made in administration actions (i) [O 20 r 13] in actions for dissolution of partnership (j) [O 20 r 15] in actions for partnership accounts (k) [O 20 r 15], in actions for accounts between principal and agent (l) [O 20 r 16] and in actions for the execution of the trusts of a settlement (m)

Practice—Motions in England under the corresponding English rule are brought on upon an ordinary motion day after notice to the other side As to form of application see Daniel's Ch Forms 270 The practice in England is when an order is made amounting to what is called a preliminary decree in this Code to adjourn the further hearing of the case without requiring any further prior hearing the words generally used in the order being "and without requiring any further prior hearing than this motion of the said cause the further hearing of the said cause is adjourned" (n). See Seton on Decrees Vol I p 390 Form No 5

At any stage—A plaintiff may move for judgment upon admissions in the written statement at any stage of the suit and notwithstanding that he has joined issue on the defence (o)

Co plaintiffs—An application under this rule for an order against a defendant on admissions of fact must be made by all the plaintiffs and not merely by some of them If the application is made by some of the plaintiffs only it must be refused (p)

Withdrawal of admission—Where it is shown that an admission was made by mistake the party may be allowed to amend his pleadings under O 6 r 17 for the purpose of withdrawing it upon such terms as to the Court may appear just (q) O rr

Appeal—An order rejecting an application for judgment on admission is a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable (r)

Affidavit of signature

7 [New R S C, O 32, r 7] An affidavit of the pleader or his clerk, of the due signature of any admissions made in pursuance of any notice to admit documents or facts, shall be sufficient evidence of such admissions, if evidence thereof is required

Notice to produce documents—It is always desirable when a document is in the possession or power of the opposite party to give him notice to produce the same for unless such notice is given secondary evidence of the document cannot be given see Indian Evidence Act 1872 s 65 cl (a) and s 66

Costs

ORDER XIII

Production, Impounding and Return of Documents

Documentary evidence to be produced at first hearing

1 [Ss 138 140] (1) The parties or their pleaders shall produce, at the first hearing of the suit, all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power, on which they intend to rely and which has not already been filed in Court, and all documents which the Court has ordered to be produced O 13,

(r) Kor mall v Mongual (1919) 3 Cal W N 101 54 I C 536

(2) The Court shall receive the documents so produced provided that they are accompanied by an accurate list thereof prepared in such form as the High Court directs

Shall produce at the first hearing —This rule does not exclude the discretion of the Court to receive documentary evidence at a subsequent stage of the proceedings (s) See r 2 below and note

Form of list of documents produced by Parties —See App H Form no 5

Effect of non production of documents

2 [S 139] No documentary evidence in the possession or power of any party which should have been but has not been produced in accordance with the requirements of rule 1 shall be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings unless good cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non production thereof, and the Court receiving any such evidence shall record the reasons for so doing

Unless good cause is shown —This rule has been enacted to prevent fraud by the late production of suspicious documents But no suspicion can attach to certified copies of public documents such as records of Government or records of judicial proceeding Such copies therefore may be received in evidence though they have not been produced at the first hearing (t) The rule however is not confined to public documents only The Court may in its discretion admit other documents also at a subsequent stage of the proceedings (u) See notes to r 1 above

Appeal —The fact that further documentary evidence is admitted after the first hearing is not a good ground of appeal (v) Nor can an appellate Court reject evidence admitted by the Court of first instance simply on that ground (w)

Rejection of irrelevant or inadmissible documents

3 [S 140] The Court may at any stage of the suit reject any document which it considers irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible, recording the grounds of such rejection

Rejection of inadmissible documents —Questions as to the admissibility of evidence should be decided as they arise and should not be reserved until judgment in the case is given (x)

When a Court is doubtful as to whether a document is admissible or not and its decision is open to appeal it is better to admit than to exclude the document (y)

Court may order any document to be impounded

ORDER XIV

Settlement of Issues and Determination of Suit on Issues of Law or on Issues agreed upon

1 1 [S 146] (1) Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one party and denied by the other

Framing of issues

(2) Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to show a right to sue or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence

(3) Each material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other shall form the subject of a distinct issue

(4) Issues are of two kinds (a) issues of fact, (b) issues of law

(5) At the first hearing of the suit the Court shall after reading the plaint and the written statements, if any, and after such examination of the parties as may appear necessary, ascertain upon what material propositions of fact or of law the parties are at variance, and shall thereupon proceed to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to depend

(6) Nothing in this rule requires the Court to frame and record issues where the defendant at the first hearing of the suit makes no defence

Of the framing of issues—The plaint and written statement in a suit are called pleadings [O 6 r 1] Section 58 of the Evidence Act enacts that no fact need be proved at the hearing which a party has admitted by his pleadings unless the Court requires proof thereof Admissions on pleadings may be either actual or constructive (g) [O 8 rr 3 4 5] Issues are to be framed in respect only of those facts which have been alleged by one party and either denied or not admitted by the other party (h) They must however be confined to material facts that is to points on which the right decision of the case depends The practice of raising issues which do not state the main questions in the suit but only various subsidiary matters of fact upon which there is not agreement between the parties is embarrassing and must be avoided (i) Where an issue though in terms covering the main question in the cause does not sufficiently direct the attention of the parties to the main questions of fact necessary to be decided and a party may have been prevented from adducing evidence a fresh issue may be directed to try the principal question of fact (j)

The duty of raising issues rests under the Code of Civil Procedure on the Court and it would be unsafe to presume from the failure of the Court to raise the necessary issues an intention of the defendant to admit the facts which the plaintiff was bound to prove (k) See also notes to O 8 r 5

Omission to frame issues—Where a material fact stated in the plaint is denied or is not admitted in the written statement the Court must frame an issue on the fact denied What is the consequence of an omission to frame an issue of fact? The answer depends on the following considerations If though no issue is framed on the fact the parties adduce evidence on the fact and discuss it before the Court and the Court decides the point as if there was an issue framed on it the decision will not be set aside in appeal on the ground merely that no issue was framed The reason is that mere omission to frame an issue is not fatal to the trial of a suit (l) But if the point denied in the written statement is not tried at all or if tried is tried imperfectly so as to cause failure of justice the case will in appeal be remanded for a re trial after framing the necessary issue (m) In other words omission to frame an issue is an irregularity which may or may not affect the disposal of a suit on the merits If it does the appellate Court should remand the case for a new trial to the lower Court after framing the necessary issue If it does not the appellate Court should not remand the case (s 99) In Mitna v Syed Fazl (n) their Lordships of the Privy Council said —

In this case the omission to raise the issues was brought before the notice of the appellate Court the appellate Court expressed its regret and their Lordships are glad

1 to observe that it did express its regret that the Principal Sudder Ameen had omitted to settle the issues The [appellate] Court however neverthele s conceived that it was not under any positive obligation to remand the case but seeing that the parties had gone to trial knowing what the real question between them was that the evidence had been taken and that the conclusion had been in the opinion of the appellate Court correctly drawn from that evidence they thought it within their competence to affirm that decision without sending the case back for a re trial Their Lordships sitting here are not prepared to say that the Court had not power to do so under the 35th section [now O 41 r 25] of the Civil Procedure Code Their Lordships think that under all the circumstances of the case substantial justice having been done there has not been that fatal mis trial of the cause which vitiates all the proceedings and renders a new trial necessary

Delay in raising an issue—In Sayad Muhammad v Fatteh Muhammad (o) their Lordships of the Privy Council said It does not quite appear at what period of the suit the question of the sound disposing mind of the Diwan was raised nor is it very material except in one respect Whatever system of pleading may exist the sole object of it is that each side may be fully alive to the questions that are about to be argued in order that they may have an opportunity of bringing forward such evidence as may be appropriate to the issue and it may perhaps be not altogether immaterial to observe that the question of the capacity of the Diwan does not appear to have been prominently raised at all events in the first instance Their Lordships are however of opinion that they must assume that the question of his capacity was open upon the proceedings sufficiently to give each Court below the right to form a judgment upon the matter

Wrong issue—If the fir t Court frames and tries wrong issues the appellate Court should lay down the proper issues and remand the case for a new trial (p) This is however not necessary if the first Court frames a wrong issue but the judgment gives a finding on the correct issue In such a case the appellate Court need not remand the case (q)

Relief not founded on pleadings—As a rule relief not founded on the pleading should not be granted But where the substantial matters which constitute the title of all the parties are touched though obscurely in the issues and they have been fully put in evidence and have formed the main subject of discussion in the Court the Court may grant a relief though it may not be founded on the pleadings Thus in a case where the plaintiff and the defendant each claims to be exclusively entitled to certain lands the Court may if the above conditions are satisfied declare each to be entitled to a moiety (r) Similarly the Court may in a suit for ejectment pass a decree for redemption (s) But if a case not alleged by the plaintiff in his pleading is di clo ed in the evidence the Court should not deal with it unless a specific issue is raised on it and the defendant is given an opportunity of meeting it (t)

Variance between pleading and proof— It is impossible to conclude parties by inferences of fact which are not only not consistent with the allegations that are to be found in the plaint which constitute the case which the defendant has to meet but which are in reality contradictory of the case made by the plaintiff It will introduce the greatest amount of uncertainty into judicial proceedings if the final determination of causes is to be founded upon inferences at variance with the case that the plaintiff has pleaded and by joining issue in the cause has undertaken to prove (u)

This principle applies only to cardinal facts and cardinal issues and not to subordinate facts and issues based thereon In applying the principle the whole of the circumstances must be taken into account and carefully scrutinized (t)

2 [S 146 6th para] Where issues both of law and of fact arise in the same suit, and the Court is of opinion that the case or any part thereof may be disposed of on the issues of law only, it shall try those issues first, and for that purpose may, if it thinks fit, postpone the settlement of the issue of fact until after the issues of law have been determined

Issues of law and of fact

Or any part thereof —These words are new

3 [S 147] The Court may frame the issues from all or any of the following materials —

Materials from which issues may be framed

(a) allegations made on oath by the parties, or by any persons present on their behalf, or made by the pleaders of such parties,

(b) allegations made in the pleadings or in answers to interrogatories delivered in the suit,

(c) the contents of documents produced by either party

Issues not to be inconsistent with pleadings —Issues whether raised from the allegations in the pleadings or from other materials should not be inconsistent with the pleadings (u) Thus if A sues B to set aside a document on the ground that it was not executed by him and that it is a forgery the Court should not raise an issue as whether the document was executed under coercion or undue influence The latter [illegible] assumes that the document was executed by the plaintiff while the case set up [illegible] plaint is that it was not executed by him at all (x) But the plea that the d[illegible] in suit was obtained by the defendant by fraud is not inconsistent with the [illegible] it was obtained by undue influence Therefore where fraud is pleaded in [illegible] and the plaintiff s counsel alleges at the hearing that the plaintiff was subjected [illegible] influence the Court may allow issues both as to fraud and undue influence (y)

Appeal —No appeal lies from an order refusing to frame an issue [illegible] a party to a suit ( )

The High Court of Madras once held that an appeal lies under cl. [illegible] Patent from an order made at the settlement of issues fixing a distant da[illegible] of the suit (a) But this decision has been disapproved in later cases [illegible]

Court may examine witnesses or documents before framing issues

4 [S 148] Where the Court is of opinion that the issues cannot be correctly framed without the examination of some person not before the Court or without the inspection of some document not produced in the suit, it may adjourn the framing of the issues to a future day, and may (subject to any law for the time being in force) compel the attendance of any person or the production of any document by the person in whose possession or power it is by summons or other process

Power to amend and strike out issues

5 [S 149] (1) The Court may at any time before passing a decree amend the issues or frame additional issues on such terms as it thinks fit, and all such amendments or additional issues as may be necessary for determining the matters in controversy between the parties shall be so made or framed

(2) The Court may also at any time before passing a decree strike out any issue that appear to it to be wrongly framed or introduced

Sub rule (1)—The first part of sub rule (1) leaves it to the discretion of the Court to amend the issues or frame additional issues as appears from the word may while the latter part makes it imperative on the Judge to amend the issues and frame additional issues as appears from the word shall (c)

May amend the issues or frame additional issues—As a general rule the Court should not frame even additional issues from materials other than those specified above in r 3 Lodtasappa v Pradhanappa (1925) 27 Bom L R 1318 91 I C 426 (b) A B 33 The Court may however under special circumstances allow issues to be raised upon a matter which does not strictly come within the proper scope of the proceedings provided no injustice is done to either party (d) It follows that the Court should not frame any additional issue so as to make for either party a case which he had no intention of making for himself (e) Nor should it frame an additional issue so as to convert a suit or defence of one character into a suit or defence of a different and inconsistent character Thus if A sues B for damages for wrongful occupation of his land treating B as a trespasser he should not be allowed to raise an additional issue claiming rent of the land from B treating him as his tenant (f) But if a suit is brought on a mortgage and it transpires at the hearing that the witnesses to the mortgage deed were not present at its execution but had put their names on the document on the acknowledgment by the executant of his signature it is perfectly competent to the Judge to frame an additional issue as to whether the deed of mortgage was valid under s 59 of the Transfer of Property Act though the invalidity of the deed is not set up as a defence in the written statement

(a) a sum of money specified in the agreement or to be ascertained by the Court, or in such manner as the Court may direct, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them, or that one of them be declared entitled to some right or subject to some liability specified in the agreement,

(b) some property specified in the agreement and in dispute in the suit shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them, or as that other may direct, or

Disposal of the Suit at the first hearing

Parties not at issue

2 [S 153] Where there are more defendants than one, and any one of the defendants is not at issue with the plaintiff on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment for or against such defendant and the suit shall proceed only against the other defendants

3 [S 154] (1) Where the parties are at issue on some question of law or of fact, and issues have been framed by the Court as hereinbefore provided, if the Court is satisfied that no further argument or evidence than the parties can at once adduce is required upon such of the issues as may be sufficient for the decision of the suit and that no injustice will result from proceeding with the suit forthwith, the Court may proceed to determine such issues, and, if the finding thereon is sufficient for the decision, may pronounce judgment accordingly, whether the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit

Parties at issue

Failure to produce evidence

4 [S 155] Where the summons has been issued for the final disposal of the suit and either party fails without sufficient cause to produce the evidence on which he relies, the Court may at once pronounce judgment, or may, if it thinks fit, after framing and recording issues, adjourn the suit for the production of such evidence as may be necessary for its decision upon such issues

ORDER XVI

Summoning and Attendance of Witnesses

Summons to attend to give evidence or produce documents

1 [S 159] At any time after the suit is instituted, the parties may obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents

Difference between the old section and the present rule—This rule corresponds with s 159 C P C 1882 except as to the time for application for witness summonses for which see next paragraph

Time for application for witness summons—Under s 159 of the Code of 1882 the application for summonses to witnesses was to be made after the writ of summons was delivered or sent for service on the defendant and before the day fixed in the summons for the appearance of the defendant Under the present rule the application may be made at any time after the institution of the suit

Whether witness summons can be refused—A party is entitled as of right to summonses to witnesses (j) So long as the application is made after the institution of the suit the Court is bound to issue the summons It does not matter that the party had himself originally undertaken to bring his witnesses and has failed to do so (k) Nor does it matter that the application is made at such a late stage of the proceedings that the witnesses cannot be present in Court before the final disposal of the suit (l) The Court may in either of these cases refuse to adjourn the hearing for the attendance of the witnesses but it has no power to refuse to issue summonses (m) The only case in which the Court has power to refuse to issue summonses is where the application is not

Remedy of party when witness summons refused—Where a party applies for summonses to witnesses but the application is refused he cannot appeal from the order of refusal He must wait until the suit is disposed of and if the decree in the suit goes against him he may appeal from the decree and set forth the refusal of the lower Court to issue summonses as a ground of objection in the memorandum of appeal (s 105) If the appellate Court finds that the refusal has injuriously affected the decision of the case it may set aside the decree and direct the lower Court to issue the summonses but if it finds that the refusal has not injuriously affected the decision it should not interfere with the decree (o) [see s 99]

Expenses of witness to be paid into Court on applying for summons

Remedy of witness if travelling expenses not paid—The only remedy is by an application to the Court that heard the case no separate suit will lie to recover such expenses (t)

(1) Where it appears to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf that the sum paid into Court is not sufficient to cover such expenses or reasonable remuneration the Court may direct such further sum to be paid to the person summoned as appeared to be necessary on that account, and in case of default in payment may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the movable property of the party obtaining the summons or the Court may discharge the person summoned without requiring him to give evidence, or may both order such levy and discharge such person as aforesaid

Time place and purpose of attendance to be specified in summons

Where hearing postponed—When a witness attends Court in pursuance of a summons on the day specified in the summons but the case is not reached on that day it is not necessary to issue a fresh summons He need only be warned that his attendance will be required on the day to which the hearing may be postponed (u)

Adjournments

1 [S 156] Court may grant time and adjourn hearing (1) The Court may, if sufficient cause is shown, at any stage of the suit grant time to the parties or to any of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing of the suit

(2) In every such case the Court shall fix a day for the further hearing of the suit, and may make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the costs occasioned by the adjournment Costs of adjournment

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded

May adjourn —This rule gives a discretion to the Court to grant time to the parties and to adjourn the hearing of a suit On the one hand no adjournment should be granted if no sufficient cause is shown (d) On the other hand the Court should not refuse an adjournment if sufficient cause is shown (e) What is sufficient cause is a question of fact in each case

Payment of costs as a condition precedent —A sues B for damages At the hearing of the suit B applies for an adjournment The hearing is adjourned on the terms that B should pay Rs 50 to A for costs before the next hearing and that if he fails to do so his defence would be struck off and the suit would be proceeded with ex parte B fails to pay the cost The Court may proceed with the suit ex parte (f) But the Court cannot do so if the payment of costs was not a condition precedent to the hearing of B's case (g)

Distinction between O 9 and O 17—The provisions of O 9 by themselves do not apply to a case in which the plaintiff or defendant has already appeared but has failed to appear at an adjourned hearing of the suit For such a case the procedure is laid down in O 17 which deals with adjournments (i)

One of the modes directed by Order IX—The effect of this rule is to assimilate the procedure in cases where there is default of appearance at an adjourned hearing with that in cases where there is such default at the first hearing The result is that though a party may have appeared at the first hearing but fails to appear at an adjourned hearing the procedure laid down in Order 9 will apply that is to say if the plaintiff fails to appear at an adjourned hearing the Court may make an order dismissing the suit under this rule and O 9 r 8 and the plaintiff may if so advised then apply under this rule and O 9 r 9 for an order to set the dismissal aside (j) and if the defendant fails to appear at an adjourned hearing the Court may pass an ex parte decree under this rule and O 9 r 6 and the defendant may if so advised then apply under this rule and O 9 r 13 for an order to set it aside (k) If both parties fail to appear at the hearing the Court may make an order dismissing the suit under this rule and O 9 r 3 and the plaintiff may then if so advised either bring a fresh suit or apply for an order to set the dismissal aside under this rule and O 9 r 4 (l)

After a decree has been passed the Court has no jurisdiction to dismiss the suit under this rule and O 9 r 8 for plaintiff's default This is because once a decree has been made in a suit the suit cannot be dismissed unless the decree is reversed on appeal (m)

May proceed under O 9 or make such other order as it thinks fit—The High Court of Bombay has held that where the plaintiff has made a case which if uncontradicted would entitle him to a decree but does not appear at an adjourned hearing the Court should not dismiss the suit under this rule and O 9 r 8 but should decide the case on the merits The reason given is that O 9 r 8 does not apply where the plaintiff has made a case which if uncontradicted would entitle him to the relief claimed (n) On the other hand the Allahabad High Court has held that the words or make such other order as it thinks fit do not empower the Court to dispose of the suit on the merits but only to grant a further adjournment and if the Court does not adjourn the hearing it should proceed under this rule and O 9 that is to say dismiss the suit under O 9 r 8 if the plaintiff does not appear and pass an ex parte decree under O 9 r 6 if the defendant does not appear (o) In Calcutta it has been held that where there are no materials on the record the Court should proceed under r 2 above but if there are materials on the record the Court ought to proceed under this rule (p) It has been held in some cases that if the Court refuses a further adjournment and dismisses the suit if the plaintiff does not appear or passes an ex parte decree if the defendant does not appear but omits to state whether the order was made under this rule or r 3 below the order must be taken to have been made under this rule (q) unless it clearly appears from the proceedings that there has been a decision on the merits (r)

There does not seem to be any doubt that default of appearance before hearing in a case of general adjournment as distinguished from an adjournment granted under r 3 to enable a party to perform any act necessary to the further progress of the suit is within this rule and under r 3 so that if the plaintiff does not appear the Court may dismiss the suit under this rule and O 9 r 8 and if the defendant does not appear it may pass an ex parte decree under this rule and O 9 r 6 (s)

Adjourned hearing—It has been held by the High Court o Calcutta that the word adjourned in this rule refers to an adjournment upon the application of parties granted under r 1 and not an adjournment necessitated by the rules of the Court relating to the regulation of its own business (t)

Fail to appear —See notes to O 9 r 9 Appearance

Non appearance on day fixed for judgment—A suit cannot be dismissed for non appearance of parties on the day fixed for delivery of judgment (u)

Remedy—See notes to the next rule under the head Remedy

3 [S 158] Where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith

Court may proceed notwithstanding either part fails to produce evidence etc

Scope of the rule—The provisions of this rule do not apply unless—

(1) the hearing is adjourned on the application of a party to the suit as distinguished from an adjournment by the Court of its own motion (v)

(2) the hearing is adjourned on the application of the party who subsequently makes the default (w)

(3) the adjournment is granted to enable the party to produce his evidence or to cause the attendance of his witnesses or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit and

(4) the party fails to perform any of the acts for which the adjournment was granted within the time allowed by the Court

Any other act —A sues B to recover possession of certain land B contends that the suit is not properly valued The Court thereupon appoints a commissioner on the application of B to value the land and directs A to pay into Court Rs 100 being the commissioner's fee within a specified time If A fail to make the payment within the prescribed time the Court may proceed under this rule The payment of the commissioner's fee is an act necessary to the further progress of the suit within the meaning of this rule (x)

Procedure to be followed under this rule—Rule 2 applies to cases where the hearing is adjourned no matter for what purpose and the parties or any of them fail to appear at the adjourned hearing The present rule is directed to a case where the hearing is adjourned at the instance of a party for some one or other of the purposes specified in the rule and the party fails to p rform the specified act or acts for which the adjournment was granted within the time allowed by the Court (y) In such a case the rule says the Court may notwithstanding such default proceed to decide the suit forthwith These words do not mean that the Court may dismiss the suit if the plaintiff is in default or pass a decree against the defendant if the defendant is in default ( ) What they mean is that the Court may further adjourn the hearing or it may without granting any further adjournment proceed to try the suit and take such evidence as may be tendered by the parties and decide the suit on the merits (a) Thus where an adjournment is granted to the plaintiff to amend the plaint but the plaintiff fails to amend the plaint and the Court refuses a further adjournment the Court should not dismiss the suit for default but decide it on the merits (b) The word forthwith means without granting any further adjournment [contrast the words at once pronounce judgment in O 15 r 4] Where the adjournment is not for the purpose of performing any act necessary to the further progress of the suit in other words it is a general adjournment default of appearance at the adjourned hearing comes within r 2 above and not under this rule (c)

Remedy—Where a suit is disposed of under the first part of r 2 above it is open to the party aggrieved by the order to proceed under O 9 r 9 or O 9 r 13 as the case may be see notes to r 2 above One of the modes directed by Order 9 But where a case is decided under the present rule the decision amounts to a decree and the remedy of the party aggrieved i by way of appeal (d) or by way of review (e) As to what points may be taken in appeal and what in review see the undermentioned case (f)

Case where default under this rule is coupled with default of appearance under rule 2—If the hearing of a suit is adjourned on the application of the plaintiff to enable him to produce his evidence or to perform any other act as mentioned in this rule and the plaintiff does not appear at the adjourned hearing should the Court proceed under this rule or under rule 2 ? The High Court of Madras has held that the Court should in such a case proceed under r 2 and dismiss the suit for default so that the plaintiff may have an opportunity to apply under O 9 r 9 to set aside the dismi al (g) A similar view has been taken by the High Court of Bombay (h) The High Court of Lahore has held that if there are no sufficient materials on the record the Court should proceed under r 2 above (i) but if there are sufficient materials it should proceed to decide the suit under this rule (j) In Allahabad the balance of authority seems to be in favour of the view that the Court should proceed under r 2 and not under this rule (k)

Right to begin —The right to begin is to be determined by the rules of evidence As a general rule the party on whom the burden of proof rests should begin Sections 101 114 of the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872 deal with burden of proof Section 102 of the Act provides that the burden of proof lies on that party who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side Thus if A sues B for the recovery of a piece of land of which B is in possession the burden of proof lies on A for if no evidence were given on either side B would be entitled to retain his possession

Unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff — Facts mean all material facts Thus where a defendant admits only some of the facts alleged by the plaintiff it does not give him the right to begin (o)

Preliminary issue raised by defendant that suit does not lie — Where the defendant raises a preliminary issue that the suit is barred as res judicata the defendant has the right to begin (p)

Preliminary issue raised by respondent that appeal does not lie — In such a case according to the Bombay High Court the appellant has the right to begin The decision was put on the ground of established practice in the Bombay High Court (q)

Hearing of the Suit and Examination of Witnesses

Right to begin

1 [S 179, Expln] The plaintiff has the right to begin unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin

Right to begin —The right to begin is to be determined by the rules of evidence As a general rule the party on whom the burden of proof rests should begin Sections 101 114 of the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872 deal with burden of proof Section 102 of the Act provides that the burden of proof lies on that party who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side Thus if A sues B for the recovery of a piece of land of which B is in possession the burden of proof lies on A for if no evidence were given on either side B would be entitled to retain his possession

(2) The other party shall then state his case and produce his evidence (if any) and may then address the Court generally on the whole case

(3) The party beginning may then reply generally on the whole case

The other party shall then state his case —Where there are two sets of defendants and their interests are practically the same the rule is that after the plaintiff has closed his case both the defendants should state th ir case before any evidence is given by either defendant (r)

Some of the defendants supporting plaintiff's case —Where there are several defendants and some of them support the plaintiff s case the rule is that the plaintiff and such of the defendants as support his case wholly or in part must address the Court and call their evidence in the first place and then the other party that is the other defendants should address the Court and call their evidence (s)

Hearing of arguments —If in a case where a party having an opportunity of addressing the Court does not do so the judgment cannot be set aside because it was delivered without hearing arguments (t)

E idenc where several issues

3 [S 180 3rd para] Where there are several issues the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning, may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party , and, in the latter case, the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues after the other party has produced all his evidence and the other party may then reply specially on the evidence so produced by the party beginning , but the party beginning will then be entitled to reply generally on the whole case

Witnesses to be examined in open Court

4 [S 181] The evidence of the witnesses in attendance shall be taken orally in open Court in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge

Evidence of witnesses —It is the duty of the Judge to examine every witness tendered unless it appears clearly that the object of summoning a large number of witne ses is to obstruct or d lay justice (u) It is not right for the Judge to select a certain number of witnes es and send away the rest because he thinks that they would only prove the same facts as those already deposed to (v) or because he is satisfied on the evidence already recorded (w) If he does so the Appellate Court may remand

Evidence shall be taken in open Court —As to the examination of witnesses on commission see Order 26 below

5 [S 182] How evidence shall be taken in appealable cases In cases in which an appeal is allowed the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing, in the language of the Court by or in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge, not ordinarily in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative and, when completed, shall be read over in the presence of the Judge and of the witness and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same, and shall sign it

Chartered High Courts —This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

Presence of parties —Where evidence is taken in the absence of the opposite party it will be rejected by the Court of appeal if the objection to the reception of the evidence was taken before the Court trying the suit If no such objection was taken the appellate Court will not remand the case especially if the other evidence in the case is sufficient to support the decision of the lower Court (y) See Indian Evidence Act 1872 s 167

Shall be read over —There is a difference of opinion whether if the deposition is not read over to the witness as required by this rule or interpreted to him as required by r 6 below it is admissible in evidence in trials for perjury and forgery it being held in some cases that the deposition is not admissible in evidence (z) while in others that it is (a) The former view proceeds on the ground that the deposition not being read over or interpreted to the witness it does not prove itself under s 80 of the Evidence Act 1872 and that it cannot be proved in any other way having regard to the provisions of s 91 of that Act. The latter view proceeds on the ground that though the deposition does not in such a case prove itself under s 80 of the Evidence Act it may be proved in any other way e g by the Judge who took it down and that s 91 of the Act is no bar to such proof

Where a witness understands English and the deposition is read over by him instead of being read over to him it is a substantial compliance with the rule (b)

Signature of witness —The rule does not require a witness to sign his evidence (c)

Signature of Judge —A prosecution for perjury cannot be sustained if the deposition is not signed by the Judge The signing of the deposition by the Judge is made essential to the application of s 80 of the Evidence Act 1872 by the section itself (d)

Evidence under section 138

8 [S 184] Where the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Judge, he shall be bound, as the examination of each witness proceeds, to make a memorandum of the substance of what each witness deposes and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge and shall form part of the record

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

Where evidence not taken down by Judge—If the evidence is taken down not by the Judge but by some other person the Judge also should make or cause to be made a memorandum as provided by this rule even if the evidence was taken down by the other person in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge as required by r 5 above If evidence is dictated to a typist by a Judge and no memorandum is made by him the provisions of this rule and of rr 5 and 14 are not complied with But the case is then one not of illegality but of irregularity (e)

11 [S 187] Where any question put to a witness is objected to by a party or his pleader, and the Court allows the same to be put, the Judge shall take down the question, the answer, the objection and the name of the person making it, together with the decision of the Court thereon

Power to deal with evidence taken before another Judge

15 [S 191] (1) Where a Judge is prevented by death, transfer or other cause from concluding the trial of a suit, his successor may deal with any evidence or memorandum taken down or made under the foregoing rules as if such evidence or memorandum had been taken down or made by him or under his direction under the said rules and may proceed with the suit from the stage at which his predecessor left it

(2) The provisions of sub rule (1) shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to evidence taken in a suit transferred under section 24

Chartered High Courts—This rule so far as it relates to the manner of taking evidence does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

Power to examine witness immediately

16 [S 192] (1) Where a witness is about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or other sufficient cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court why his evidence should be taken immediately, the Court may upon the application of any party or of the witness, at any time after the institution of the suit, take the evidence of such witness in manner hereinbefore provided

(2) Where such evidence is not taken forthwith and in the presence of the parties, such notice as the Court thinks sufficient, of the day fixed for the examination, shall be given to the parties

(3) The evidence so taken shall be read over to the witness, and, if he admits it to be correct, shall be signed by him and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same and shall sign it, and it may then be read at any hearing of the suit

17 [S 193] The Court may at any stage of a suit recall any witness who has been examined and may (subject to the law of evidence for the time being in force) put such questions to him as the Court thinks fit

Court may recall and examine witness

18 [New] The Court may at any stage of a suit inspect any property or thing concerning which any question may arise

Power of Court to inspect

View by Judge —This rule does not entitle a Judge to put his own view on inspection in the place of evidence Thus in an action of deceit brought on the ground that a particular article used by the defendant is a colourable imitation of the plaintiff s the conclusion of the Judge on a view by him of the two articles—such as two rival omnibuses that the defendant s article is calculated to deceive is not sufficient by itself to support an injunction. The Judge must be satisfied by independent evidence that there is at least a reasonable probability of deception (h)

ORDER XIX

Affidavits

1 [S 194] Any Court may at any time for sufficient reason order that any particular fact or facts may be proved by affidavit, or that the affidavit of any witness may be read at the hearing on such conditions as the Court thinks reasonable

Power to order any point to be proved by affidavit

Provided that where it appears to the Court that either party bona fide desires the production of a witness for cross examination, and that such witness can be produced, an order shall not be made authorizing the evidence of such witness to be given by affidavit

2 [S 195] (1) Upon any application evidence may be given by affidavit, but the Court may at the instance of either party, order the attendance for cross examination of the deponent

Power to order attendance of deponent for cross examination

(2) Such attendance shall be in Court unless the deponent is exempted from personal appearance in Court or the Court otherwise directs

3 3 [S 196] (1) Affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the deponent is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications, on which statements of his belief may be admitted provided that the grounds thereof are stated

Matters to which affidavits shall be confined

(2) The costs of every affidavit which shall unnecessarily set forth matters of hearsay or argumentative matter, or copies of or extracts from documents, shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid by the party filing the same

Grounds of belief—The grounds of belief must be stated with sufficient particularity to enable the Court to judge whether it would be safe to act on the deponent's belief (i)

ORDER XX

Judgment and Decree

r 1 1 [S 198] The Court, after the case has been heard, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders

Judgment when pronounced

See s 33 above

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (a)]

Evidence taken before another Judge—As a general rule judgment must be given upon evidence taken by the Judge before himself and not upon evidence taken before another person (j) In the three following cases the Judge may give judgment upon evidence recorded by some other Judge or person —

(1) Under O 18 r 15 when the Judge who has heard the evidence is prevented by death transfer or other cause from concluding the trial of the suit

(2) Under O 26 r 1 where the evidence has been taken by a commissioner of a witness residing within the jurisdiction who is exempted under the Code from attending the Court or is unable to attend from sickness or infirmity

(3) Under O 26 r 4 where the evidence has been taken by a commissioner of a witness residing beyond the jurisdiction and of other persons specified in the rule

Notice to parties—Notice should be given in the manner prescribed by s 140 A judgment delivered without notice to parties is not a judgment pronounced within the meaning of this rule (k)

Judgment not pronounced—A judgment not pronounced in Court does not operate as a judgment it operates only as minute or memoranda made by the Judge who wrote it (l) The posting of a notice on the notice board of the Court announcing the result of a case is not a sufficient compliance with this rule (m)

Non compliance with rules 1 2 and 3 —Where a judgment is not pronounced dated or signed in conformity with the requirements of the Code it constitutes a mere irregularity within the meaning of s 99 it affords no ground for reversal in appeal of the decree based on it (n)

Power to pronounce judgment written by judge's predecessor

2 [S 199] A Judge may pronounce a judgment written but not pronounced by his predecessor

Chartered High Courts —This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (5)] The High Court of Bombay has held that where a Judge of the High Court dictates his judgment to a shorthand writer but does not see or approve the transcript the transcript cannot be treated as his judgment but a letter from him to the Prothonotary stating his final decision and the exact order made and asking that it should be communicated to the parties in Court may be treated as a judgment although it gives no reasons (o)

Written by his predecessor —It does not matter that the judgment was written by the Judge's predecessor after he had taken leave or left the judicial post which he occupied when he heard the case or after he had been transferred (p) The fact that the transferred officer himself pronounces the judgment does not make any difference (q)

May pronounce —The word may leaves a Judge the option to pronounce a judgment according to his own view of the case though it may be different from the judgment written by his predecessor who heard the case (r)

Non compliance with rules 1 2 and 3 —See notes to r 1 above under the same head

Judgment to be signed

3 [S 202] The judgment shall be dated and signed by the Judge in open Court at the time of pronouncing it and, when once signed, shall not afterwards be altered or added to, save as provided by section 152 or on review

Chartered High Courts —This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl ( )]

Shall not afterwards be altered —A decree cannot be altered by a Court even with the consent of parties except in the mode prescribed by this rule (s) When a District Judge delivered a judgment in open Court but suspended the [illegible] of the decree pending the production by the plaintiff of a certificate of [illegible] h ll to exist, by the Judge of any Court to which such Court was subordinate

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (5)]

9 [S 207] Where the subject-matter of the suit is immovable property, the decree shall contain a description of such property sufficient to identify the same, and where such property can be identified by boundaries by numbers in a record of settlement or survey, the decree shall specify such boundaries or numbers

Decree for recovery of immovable property

Decree for possession of land—A decree for possession of land carries with it possession of account books and other papers relating to the management of the land (c)

10 [S 208] Where the suit is for movable property, and the decree is for the delivery of such property, the decree shall also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had

Decree for delivery of movable property

Decree for delivery of movable property—This rule contemplates suits for the recovery of specific movable property referred in arts 48 and 49 of the Limitation Act (d) The decree holder cannot execute the decree without having recourse to the procedure prescribed by O 21 r 31 he has not an option not to take delivery of the property and to fall back upon the money portion of the decree (e)

11 [S 210] (1) Where, and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may for any sufficient reason at the time of passing the decree order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments with or without interest, notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable

Decree may direct payment by instalments

(2) After the passing of any such decree the Court may, on the application of the judgment debtor and with the consent of the decree holder, order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments on such terms as to the payment of interest, the attachment of the property of the judgment debtor, or the taking of security from him, or otherwise, as it thinks fit

Old section —This rule corresponds with s 210 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

(1) The words shall be postponed in sub rules (1) and (2) are new

(2) The words notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable in sub rule (1) are also new see notes below under those words

In so far as the decree is for the payment of money —This rule applies to money decrees only and not to mortgage decrees (f)

Sufficient reason —The possibility of the judgment debtor obtaining a cross decree in another pending litigation has been held not to be sufficient cause for post poning payment of the decretal amount (g)

Notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable —These words are new They have been added to overrule the decision of the Bombay High Court in Ragho v Dipchnad (h) In that case it was held that if A executed a bond to B payable by instalments with a proviso that if default was made in payment of any one of the instalments the whole amount should become due and payable forthwith and if on default being made by A in payment of any one instalment B sued A to recover the whole of the balance due the Court could not at the time of passing the decree order the amount decreed to be paid by instal ments for to do so it was said, would be inconsistent with the terms of the bond Under the present rule the Court has the power to order payment of the amount decreed by instalments notwithstanding the terms of the bond

Interest —Where a decree is made payable by instalments under sub rule (1) the rate of interest is in the discretion of the Court (i)

Summary Suit —It is irregular for the Court in a summary suit instituted under O 37 where the defendant has failed to obtain leave to appear and defend to pass an order at his instance for the payment of the decretal amount by instalments (j)

Sub rule (2) —Sub rule (1) applies where an application is made by the judgment debtor at the time of passing the decree Sub rule (2) applies where an application is made after the passing of the decree In the latter case no order can be made for pay ment by instalments nor can payment be postponed except with the consent of the decree holder Sub rule (2) has been altered by Burma Schedule Notification and an order can be made for payment by instalments under the altered rule even without the consent of the decree holder but after notice to him (k)

Taking of security —Immovable property given by the judgment debtor as security under sub rule (2) may be realized by the decree holder in execution and he is not obliged to have recourse to a regular suit for the purpose O 34 r 14 does not apply to a charge created by the decree itself or one created by the act of parties subsequent to the decree. It applies only to a charge existing prior to the decree (l)

Limitation —An application by a judgment debtor under this rule for payment of the amount of a decree by instalments should be made within 6 months from the date of the decree [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art. 175]

Execution of decree payable by instalments —In the case of an ordinary instalment decree that is a decree payable by instalments on certain specified dates

the period of limitation as regards each instalment (which is 3 years) runs from the date on which the instalment becomes due (m) In the case of a decree payable by instalments with a proviso that if default be made in payment of any one of the instalments the whole of the decretal amount should become due and recoverable in execution, limitation runs from the date of the first default (n) But if the judgment-debtor pays the over due instalment and the decree holder accepts it without protest limitation will run from the date of the next default Strictly speaking the first default being waived it ceases to be a default in law and the next default then becomes the first default (o)

12 [Ss 211, 212] (1) Where a suit is for the recovery of possession of immoveable property and for rent or mesne profits, the Court may pass a decree—

Decree for possession and mesne profits

(a) for the possession of the property,

(b) for the rent or mesne profits which have accrued on the property during a period prior to the institution of the suit or directing an inquiry as to such rent or mesne profits,

(c) directing an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits from the institution of the suit until—

(i) the delivery of possession to the decree holder,

(ii) the relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor with notice to the decree holder through the Court, or

(iii) the expiration of three years from the date of the decree

whichever event first occurs

(2) Where an inquiry is directed under clause (b) or clause (c) a final decree in respect of the rent or mesne profits shall be passed in accordance with the result of such inquiry

Inquiry as to mesne profits no longer a proceeding in execution—The provisions relating to mesne profits in the Code of 1882 were contained in ss 211 212 and 244 Those provisions have now been re cast The definition of mesne profits is relegated to s 2 cl 12 At the same time an important alteration has been made as regards procedure in determining the amount of mesne profits. Under the Code of 18__ the amount of mesne profits was to be determined in execution proceedings (p) [see C P C 1882 s 244 cls (a) and (b)] Under the present rule the amount must be determined by the decree and not in execution An application for ascertainment of mesne profits under this rule is not a proceeding in execution but a proceeding in

Decree for possession and mesne profits—In a suit for the recovery of possession of immovable property the plaintiff may claim mesne profits which have accrued due during a period prior to the institution of the suit He may also claim mesne profits which have accrued due subsequent to the institution of the suit The decree to be passed in such a case will now be as follows —

1 That the defendant do put the plaintiff in possession of the property specified in the schedule annexed to the decree [To this extent the decree is final]

2 That the defendant do pay to the plaintiff the sum of Rs with interest thereon at the rate of per cent per annum to the date of realization on account of mesne profits which have accrued due prior to the institution of the suit [To this extent the decree is final]

Or [where accounts have to be taken of the mesne profits]—

That an inquiry be made as to the amount of mesne profits which have accrued due prior to the institution of the suit [To this extent the decree is preliminary sec s 2 Expln]

3 That an inquiry be made as to the amount of mesne profits from the institution of the suit until the point of time specified in cl (c) of the section [To this extent the decree is preliminary] See Sch I App D Form No 23

The inquiry referred to above may be held before an officer of the Court appointed in that behalf who must report to the Court the result of the inquiry After that is done and the parties are heard on the report a final decree will be passed in respect of the mesne profits

Where decree silent as to mesne profits—Where a preliminary decree is silent as to mesne profits the Court has no power to direct such enquiry by its final decree (s)

Mesne profits where no date fixed—Where a preliminary decree awards possession and mesne profits but is silent as to the date up to which mesne profits are awarded the decree holder is entitled to mesne profits up to the date of delivery of possession to him (t)

Joint Hindu family—This rule applies not only where the plaintiff sues for possession of the whole of an immovable property but also where he sues for possession of a portion thereof But the portion must be a specified portion that is a portion to the profits of which the plaintiff is exclusively entitled Hence the provisions of the rule do not apply to a suit for partition by a member of a joint Hindu family for until partition no member is entitled to a specific share of the property (u) This does not mean that a member of a joint Hindu family is not entitled in a suit for partition to claim his share of the rents and profits of the joint property from which he may have been wrongfully excluded He is entitled to such share (v) but the Court in dealing

2 upon his claim must be guided not by the provisions of this rule but by the rules of Hindu law relating to partition (w) See notes to r 18 below

Procedure—Where an appellate Court disagreeing with the lower Court finds that the plaintiff is entitled to possession it should pass a preliminary decree for possession and direct an inquiry as to mesne profits it is not proper merely to remand the case to the lower Court for disposal (x) The Madras High Court has added a clause to this rule as to which see the case in footnote (y)

Mesne profits—The expression mesne profits is defined in s 2 cl (12) as meaning those profits which the person in wrongful possession of property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom together with interest on such profits but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession

The claim for mesne profits is virtually a claim for damages Hence there is no rigid rule for determining the amount of mesne profits and the amount must be assessed in every case by a proper exercise of judicial discretion (z) Mesne profits are in the nature of damages which the Court may mould according to the justice of the case Hence in calculating mesne profits payments of revenue and cesses made by the defendant should be deducted (a) But the costs of collecting the rents of profits should not be allowed to the defendant unless he entered on the property in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right (b)

Wrongful possession by the defendant is the very essence of a claim for mesne profits and the very foundation of a decree therefor and this rule cannot apply if the possession of the defendant has not been wrongful (c) Hence a defendant cannot be rendered liable for mesne profits during the period the property was under attachment by virtue of an order made under s 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code (d) Where a defendant has been in wrongful possession for a certain period and is subsequently dispossessed by a third party the defendant can only be charged with mesne profits for the period for which he was in wrongful possession. He cannot be charged with mesne profits that have accrued due subsequently to his dispossession though the person who dispossessed him may not have done anything to recover the rents or profits (e) The reason is that if a defendant is dispossessed by a third party he cannot be said to have even impliedly received the profits nor could he with ordinary or extraordinary diligence have received them But where a defendant who has been in wrongful possession abandons the land without giving notice to the plaintiff he will be held liable for mesne profits (f)

Where a person buys immovable property from a defendant pending a suit against him for recovery of the property and for mesne profits and a decree is eventually passed against the defendant the plaintiff is entitled to recover mesne profits not only from the defendant but from the purchaser pendente lite (g) The purchaser however is liable only from the date on which he entered into possession (h)

for cultivation and a suit is brought by the other zamindars against him and the patnidar for possession of their shares and mesne profits and a decree is passed for them the mesne profits recoverable from the zamindar defendant should be based upon the rent received by him from the patnidar and not upon the produce value of the land but the mesne profits recoverable from the patnidar should be based upon such value The liability of the zamindar defendant is not in such a case joint and several with the patnidar (i)

Interest forming part of mesne profits—It will be seen from the definition of mesne profits that mesne profits consist of two items namely (1) profits of the property and (2) interest on such profits Hence if a decree awards mesne profits but says nothing about interest that is interest on the profits it must be construed as including not only the profits but the interest on such profits This was decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Girish Chunder v Shoshi Shikareswar (j) If the profits were payable from month to month the interest thereon would be calculated month by month and if they were payable from year to year the interest would be calculated year by year Calculating in this manner the interest on the profits must be allowed up to the date of ascertainment of the aggregate amount of mesne profits (k) but in no case should it be allowed for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree (l) The reason is that the item of interest we are now considering forms an integral part of mesne profits and since mesne profits cannot be allowed for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree so also the interest forming part thereof cannot be allowed for a longer period It must not however be supposed that because mesne profits are defined as meaning profits plus interest on such profits therefore the Court must always allow interest on such profits Mesne profits as stated above are in the nature of damages which the Court may award according to the justice of the case And since the item of interest now under consideration forms part of mesne profits it is equally in the discretion of the Court whether to allow such interest or not (m) For the same reason the Court may while allowing the claim for interest direct the interest to be calculated not month by month or year by year but in a manner less advantageous to the plaintiff The mode of calculation indicated in the beginning of this paragraph applies only to those cases where the decree is silent as to the mode in which interest is to be calculated

After the aggregate amount of mesne profits is ascertained the plaintiff may apply to the Court for a final decree for the amount so ascertained and for interest on that amount and the Court may award interest at such rate as it thinks fit (n) The date from which interest may be allowed is the date of the preliminary decree and not the date on which the amount is ascertained (o) The rate of interest allowed is usually 6 per cent (p) See 34

Application for ascertaining future mesne profits—The right to apply for ascertainment of future mesne profits arises not on the date of the decree directing an inquiry as to such profit but on the happening of any one of the three events specified in sub rule (1) ( ) (q) The application is an application in the suit and if the suit is pending the law of limitation does not apply (r)

12 Notice through Court —The notice of relinquishment of possession should be given through the Court But where a judgment debtor gives such notice directly to the decree holder and the latter does not object that it should be sent through the Court he is not entitled to mesne profits after the date of the notice (s)

Three years from the date of the decree' — Decree means a decree capable of execution. Thus if an appeal is preferred from a decree for mesne profits and the decree is confirmed in appeal the period of three years is to be computed from the date of the appellate decree (t) Similarly if a decree for mesne profits is taken to the Privy Council and is confirmed the period of three years is to be counted from the date of the King's order in Council (u) See notes to s 36 What decree may be executed

When a decree awards possession with mesne profits to be ascertained in an inquiry but specifies no time down to which mesne profits are to be computed the decree cannot be construed as giving mesne profits for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree (v) The plaintiff therefore is not entitled to mesne profits for more than three years from the date of the decree though possession was not delivered to him until after the expiration of the three years note the words whichever event first occurs in sub r (1) cl (c) But in no case can mesne profits be awarded to the plaintiff for any period subsequent to an offer by the defendant to restore him possession (w)

Limitation —As regards mesne profits accrued due prior to the institution of the suit the defendant is only liable for the mesne profits accrued due during the three years before the date of the suit A claim for mesne profits during a period preceding the three years next before the date of the suit is barred under the Limitation Act 1908 sch. I art 109 (x)

Court Fee —Where in a suit for recovery of immovable property and for mesne profits antecedent to as well as subsequent to the institution of the suit the decree directs the profits to be ascertained in execution the court fee is payable with respect to the claim for such profits but the fee cannot be claimed until the amount actually due on account of the profits has been ascertained (y)

Burden of proof —The burden of proving the amount of mesne profits actually received is on the person who has received them while that of proving the amount of profit that might with ordinary diligence have been received is on the person claiming them (z)

Order supplementing preliminary decree —Where after the passing of a preliminary decree for accounts an order is made determining the period and the mode of accounting the order itself is a preliminary decree and appealable as such (a) See notes to s 97 Two preliminary decrees

Appeal —Under the Code of 1882 [s. 244] the amount of mesne profits was determined in execution proceedings and the decision determining mesne profits being an order in execution proceedings was appealable as a decree Under the present rule the amount of mesne profits is to be determined by the decree itself and a party aggrieved

Decree in administration suit

13 [S 213] (1) Where a suit is for an account of any property and for its due administration under the decree of the Court, the Court shall, before passing the final decree, pass a preliminary decree ordering such accounts and inquiries to be taken and made, and giving such other directions as it thinks fit

(4) An executor or administrator when there are disputes amongst the legatees or next of kin as to the amount of the property left by the deceased and the amount to which the legatees or next of kin are entitled

Forms of plaint in administration suit—See Sch I App A forms Nos 41 to 43

Preliminary decree—This rule provides that in an administration suit the Court shall pass a preliminary decree before passing the final decree directing accounts to be taken and enquiries to be made For forms of preliminary decree see Sch. I App D forms Nos 17 and 19 and for forms of final decree see forms Nos 18 and 20

Insolvent estate—Sub rule (2) provides that when it appears in an administration suit that the estate of the deceased is insolvent the rules laid down in the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909 as to Presidency towns and in the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 as to the other parts of British India where that applies shall apply so far as regards (1) the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors (2) debts and liabilities proveable and (3) the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities Note that this sub rule does not apply all the rules and principles of insolvency to insolvent estates but only the rules in respect of the three heads enumerated above (e)

Rights of secured creditors under the Presidency towns Insolvency Act—See s 48 of the Act and cls 9 to 17 of Sch II to the Act

Rights of secured creditors under the Provincial Insolvency Act—See s 47 of the Act

Debts and liabilities proveable under the Presidency towns Insolvency Act—See sections 46 and 48 and Schedule II of the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909

Debts and liabilities proveable under the Provincial Insolvency Act—See ss 45 and 46 of the Act

Suit to recover assets improperly applied by Administrator General—This section does not apply to a suit brought by a creditor of the deceased against the Administrator General (to whom letters of administration have been granted) and against other creditors of the deceased to recover assets alleged to have been improperly paid by the Administrator General to those creditors in priority to the plaintiff (f)

Effect of decree in administration suit upon prior attachments—A decree in an administration suit is a decree in favour of all creditors of the deceased and as all of them are included in the same decree it would be inequitable that one should be in a better position than another under that decree The assets are therefore divided amongst all creditors pro rata Even a creditor who has obtained an attachment on the estate of the deceased prior to the decree in the administration suit is not entitled to priority over the other creditors An attachment does not create a charge upon the property attached and the Court will stay all proceedings in execution after the passing of the decree in the suit (g)

14 [S 214] (1) Where the Court decrees a claim to O 20 pre emption in respect of a particular sale of property and the purchase money has not been paid into Court, the decree shall—

Decree in pre emption suit

(a) specify a day on or before which the purchase-money shall be so paid, and

(b) direct that on payment into Court of such purchase money, together with the costs (if any) decreed against the plaintiff, on or before the day referred to in clause (a), the defendant shall deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff, whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment, but that, if the purchase money and the costs (if any) are not so paid, the suit shall be dismissed with costs

(2) Where the Court has adjudicated upon rival claims to pre emption, the decree shall direct—

(a) if and in so far as the claims decreed are equal in degree that the claim of each pre emptor complying with the provisions of sub rule (1) shall take effect in respect of a proportionate share of the property including any proportionate share in respect of which the claim of any pre emptor failing to comply with the said provisions would, but for such default, have taken effect, and,

(b) if and so far as the claims decreed are different in degree, that the claim of the inferior pre emptor shall not take effect unless and until the superior pre emptor has failed to comply with the said provisions

Difference between the old section and the present rule—This rule corresponds with s. 214, C. P. C. 1882, except in the following particulars:—

1 The words "whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment" are new See notes below under those words

2 Sub rule (2) is also new See notes below "Sub rule (2) Rival pre-emptors."

Pre emption—The right of pre emption can only be exercised in respect of immovable property A and B, both Mahomedans, are co sharers of a house If B sells his share to X for Rs 5,000, A is entitled to pre empt B's share on payment of Rs 5,000, that is to say, A as co sharer may require B to sell his share to him in preference to X The same rule applies if A and B are owners of adjoining houses If B refuses to sell his share to A, A may institute a suit for pre emption against B and X It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that if the sale by B to X has been completed before

14 the date of the suit B having no longer any interest in the property he is not a necessary party to the suit (h) If a decree is passed for A and if he has not paid the amount of purchase money into Court the decree should specify a day on or before which the purchase money should be paid into Court If the amount is paid within the time fixed by the Court A will be entitled to enter into possession of B's share But if he fails to pay the amount within that time he will lose the benefit of the decree (i). If a decree is passed for A with costs A may pay into Court the purchase money less the costs (j) As to extension of time for payment see notes below

It is important to note that the right of pre emption is a personal right. This leads to the following results —

1 If the pre emptor that is the person entitled to pre emption transfers the right to a third party the right is lost and the transferee cannot maintain a suit for pre emption (k)

2 It is not settled whether if the pre emptor dies during the pendency of the suit for pre emption the right according to Sunni Mahomedan Law is extinguished (l) or whether it survives to his heirs or to his legal representatives (m)

3 If the pre emptor transfers the right of pre emption during the pendency of the suit for pre emption the right of pre emption is lost and the suit will be dismissed And even if he obtains a decree and transfers the decree the right of pre emption will be lost and the Court will not allow execution of the decree But if he obtains a decree and transfers not the decree but the property which is the subject of pre emption the right of pre emption is not lost and he may execute the decree though execution will not be allowed to the transferee (n)

Whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment. —These words have been added to make it clear that the title to the property vests in the plaintiff on payment of the purchase money and that it is not necessary to complete the title that there should be a document in writing and registered as required by the Transfer of Property Act in the case of a sale of immovable property The object of inserting these words in the rule is to supersede the opinion expressed by the High Court of Madras that since the passing of the Transfer of Property Act the title to a pre empted property could not vest in the plaintiff without an instrument of transfer (o)

The plaintiff's title accrues on payment of the purchase money and not from the date of the sale (p) No registered document is necessary to transfer the property (q) from the date of payment though he cannot obtain possession by reason of the defendant being himself in possession in another capacity (r) or by reason of a usufructuary mortgagee being in possession (s)

Mesne profits —Upon a pre emption decree the property and the right to mesne profits therefrom vest in the pre emptor only from the date when he pays the amount of the purchase price finally decreed until that time the original purchaser retains possession and is entitled to the rents and profits (t)

Extension of time for payment into Court—The High Court of Allahabad has held that a plaintiff who has obtained a decree can appeal within the period of limitation whether or not he has made the payment on or before the day fixed (u). The mere filing however of an appeal does not operate as an extension of the time for payment (v). The appellate Court however may if it thinks fit extend the time for payment (w). When the appellate Court has in the exercise of its discretion extended the time for payment the High Court will not interfere in second appeal (x). See notes to s 148 Act directed or allowed by a decree of Court.

Sub rule (2) Rival pre emptors—Sub r (2) prescribes the form of decree to be passed when there are rival pre emptors. It is based upon the undermentioned rulings of the Allahabad High Court (y).

Pre emption under the Mahomedan law—The Mahomedan law is the only system prevalent in British India which provides substantive rules relating to the right of pre emption in a systematic form (z). The Mahomedan law of pre emption is applied by the Courts of British India to Mahomedans except in the Madras Presidency the Punjab and Oudh. In the Madras Presidency the right of pre emption is not recognised by the Courts even as between Mahomedans on the ground that it places a restriction upon liberty of transfer of property and is therefore opposed to equity and good conscience (a). Pre emption in the Punjab is regulated by the Punjab Laws Act 1872 and in Oudh by the Oudh Laws Act 1876. See Mulla's Principles of Mahomedan Law 9th Ed pp 157 159.

Pre emption by custom—The Sunni Mahomedan law of pre emption applies by custom to Hindus in Behar (b) and Gujarat (c).

Pre emption by contract—A right of pre emption is occasionally given in mortgage deeds to the mortgagee so that in case of a sale of the equity of redemption by the mortgagor the mortgagee shall have the refusal of the property and in such a case the price may or may not be fixed beforehand (d).

Vendor's title in pre emption suit—A pre emptor is not entitled in a pre emption suit to put the vendor to proof of his title to the property which he purports to sell. The reason is that the principle of pre emption is substitution. A pre emptor is therefore bound to take the title which the vendee was ready to take (e).

15 [S 215] Where a suit is for the dissolution of a partnership, or the taking of partnership accounts, the Court, before passing a final decree may pass a preliminary decree declaring the proportionate shares of the parties fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved or be deemed to have been dissolved and directing such accounts to be taken and other acts to be done as it thinks fit.

parties and it should be in form No 21 Sch I App D (f) After the accounts are taken a final decree is passed directing that the partnership assets be applied, first in payment of the partnership debts next in payment of the cost of the suit and lastly in payment to each partner of the amount found due to him on taking the accounts. If it turns out on taking the accounts that there is a balance due to the defendant a decree may be passed in favour of the defendant (g) See Sch. I App. D form No —

Appeal —A preliminary decree in a suit for the dissolution of a partnership or the taking of partnership accounts is appealable under s 96 But the appeal must be filed within the period prescribed by the law of limitation. If no appeal is preferred within the period of limitation the party aggrieved by such decree is precluded by virtue of the provisions of s 97 from disputing its correctness in an appeal from the final decree See s. 97 and notes thereto

Letters Patent appeal —Where a commissioner appointed to take accounts applies to the Court for directions and an order is made giving the directions the order being merely one regulating procedure and not a final adjudication of the rights of the parties is not a judgment within the meaning of cl 13 of the Letters Patent of the High Court of Rangoon and is not appealable as such (h)

Decree in suit for account between principal and agent

16 [S 215A] In a suit for an account of pecuniary transactions between a principal and an agent, and in any other suit not herein before provided for, where it is necessary in order to ascertain the amount of money due to or from any party, that an account should be taken, the Court shall, before passing its final decree, pass a preliminary decree directing such account to be taken as it thinks fit

Shall pass a preliminary decree directing accounts —The provisions of this rule must be strictly followed If the fact of agency is established it is the duty of the Court to direct an account to be taken of the dealing between the parties before passing the final decree It is not proper to pass a final decree at the hearing (i) But the Court must be satisfied before directing an inquiry into accounts that the taking of accounts is necessary (j)

Whether decree can be passed in favour of defendant —In a suit for account between principal and agent a decree can, if necessary be passed in favour of the defendant on payment of the necessary Court fee (k) See notes to r 19 below

Stay of proceedings —Where an appeal is pending against a preliminary decree the Appellate Court may make an order under O 41 r 5 staying the inquiry into accounts pending the hearing of the appeal (l) See notes to O 41 r 5 Stay of proceedings under a decree

Decree in suit for partition of property or separate possession of a share therein

18 [New] Where the Court passes a decree for the partition of property or for the separate possession of a share therein, then,—

(1) if and in so far as the decree relates to an estate assessed to the payment of revenue to the Government, the decree shall declare the rights of the several parties interested in the property, but shall direct such partition or separation to be made by the Collector, or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in this behalf, in accordance with such declaration and with the provisions of section 54,

(2) if and in so far as such decree relates to any other immovable property or to movable property, the Court may, if the partition or separation cannot be conveniently made without further inquiry, pass a preliminary decree declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property and giving such further directions as may be required

Receiver not rendered functus officio—A receiver appointed in a suit for partition does not after the passing of the decree under sub-rule (1) become functus officio as regards agricultural land comprised in the suit The Court may therefore grant an interim injunction restraining a party from interfering with the receiver's possession (m) See s [illegible] and notes thereto

Giving such further directions—These words are wide enough to include a direction for an inquiry into future mesne profits. But under the rule the direction should be in the preliminary decree If no such direction is included in the preliminary decree the Court has no power to direct an inquiry into future mesne profits by its final decree (n)

Joint Hindu family—In a suit for partition of joint Hindu family property the property not being of the kind referred to in sub rule (1) a preliminary decree may be passed as provided by sub rule (2) (o) See notes to r [illegible] above Joint Hindu family is due to the defendant, and shall be for the recovery of any sum

(2) Any decree passed in a suit in which a set off is claimed shall be subject to the same provisions in respect of appeal to which it would have been subject if no set off had been claimed

Appeal from decree relating to set off

(3) The provisions of this rule shall apply whether the set off is admissible under rule 6 of Order VIII or otherwise

Appeal from decree relating to set off—This rule corresponds with s 216 of the Code of 1882 except as regards the provision as to the Court to which an appeal should lie from a decree passed in a suit in which a set off is claimed. The second paragraph of s 216 ran as follows —

The decree of the Court with respect to any sum awarded to the defendant shall have the same effect and be subject to the same rules in respect of appeal or otherwise as if such sum had been claimed by the defendant in a seperate suit against the plaintiff

The present rule provides that appeals from decrees relating to set off shall lie to the Courts to which appeals in respect of the original claim would lie

Decree for defendant where set off is claimed—It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that in a suit by a principal against his agent for account the Court can grant a decree to the agent for the amount found due to him on the taking of accounts between the parties (p) The ground on which the decision is based is that a suit for accounts against an agent necessarily involves an undertaking by the principal to pay to the agent any sum that may be found due to him Commenting on this case Phillips J in a Madras case (q) said This I think is taking a somewhat large view of the intention of a plaintiff in such a suit for it could rarely be his intention to bring a suit in order that a decree might be given against him See notes to O 8 r 6 The amount claimed to be set off must be legally recoverable

20 [S 217] Certified copies of the judgment and decree shall be furnished to the parties on application to the Court, and at their expense

ORDER XXI

Execution of Decrees and Orders

Of execution of decrees in general—The present order is the longest Order in the whole Schedule It consists of 103 rules It is proposed here to give a summary of these rules and at the same time a description of the different modes of execution and the procedure to be observed. The references to the rules given in this summary are to the rules of the present Order

(p) I rmanand v J gat Na (1910) 32 All. 5_5 6 I C 163 See also I m Chan I ulagi (19"4) 22 All L. J 83 83 I C 800 ("4) A A 854

(q) Na mk v Zamindar of Tiruvur (1919) 4 Mad 873, 8 9-850 53 I C 734 [the def ndant s claim for excess ... in this case time-barred].

A obtains a decree against B for Rs 5 000 Here A is the decree holder B is the judgment debtor and Rs 5 000 is the judgment debt If B fails to satisfy the decree A may apply for execution of the decree against B's person or against his property or both (r 30) But the Court may in its discretion refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment debtor (r 21) Execution against the person of the judgment debtor consists in arresting him and detaining him in jail Execution against the property of a judgment debtor consists in attaching and selling his property and paying the decree holder the amount of the judgment debt out of the sale proceeds

Application for execution —All proceedings in execution are commenced by an application for execution (r 10) The application for execution must be in writing [r 11 (2)] and should contain the particulars set forth in rr 11 (2) to 14 The only exception is where the decree is for the payment of money and the judgment debtor is in the precincts of the Court when the decree is passed in which case the Court may order immediate execution on the oral application of the decree holder at the time of passing the decree [r 11 (1)] If the application complies with the requirements of rr 11 (2) to 14 the Court will direct execution to issue (r 24) If he does not the Court may reject it or may require it to be amended (r 17) If the application is rejected the decree holder may present another application properly framed

Who may apply for execution —The application for execution must be made by the decree holder If the decree is transferred by the decree holder the transferee may apply for execution (r 16) If the decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one any one of such persons may apply for execution (r 15) If the decree holder is dead his legal representative may apply for execution (r 16)

Against whom execution may be applied for —If the judgment debtor is living execution will be applied for against him If he is dead execution may be applied for against his legal representative In the latter case the decree may not be executed against the person of the legal representative but only against the property of the judgment debtor which has come to the hands of the legal representative and has not been duly disposed of by him (s 50) As to notice to the legal representative see the next paragraph

Notice before ordering execution —The law does not require any notice to be issued to the party against whom execution is applied for except in the following two cases —

1 Where the application for execution is made more than one year after the date of the decree or more than one year after the date of the last order made on any previous application for execution

2 Where execution is applied for against the legal representative of the judgment debtor

In these two cases the Code provides that the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice (r 22) There is one case in which it is discretionary with the Court to issue a notice before making an order for execution and that is where the decree is for money and execution is sought against the person of the judgment-debtor (r 37)

Execution against person of judgment debtor —

(1) Decrees for the payment of money —A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 5000 and costs [This is a money decree] B fails to pay the amount of the judgment-debt. A applies for execution of the decree against B's person [r 11 (2) cl. (j)]. The decree being a money decree the Court may instead of issuing a warrant for B's arrest issue a notice calling upon him to appear and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison in execution of the decree (r 37) If B appears and satisfies the Court that he is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or other sufficient cause and if there are no circumstances which disentitle B to the indulgence of the Court the Court may make an order disallowing A s application for B s arrest and detention [r 40 (1)] If B does not appear the Court should issue a warrant for his arrest if the decree holder so desires (r 37) If B appears but fails to show cause to the satisfaction of the Court the Court should cause him to be arrested [r 40 (3)]

Where a warrant of arrest is issued it should be executed by an officer of the Court appointed in that behalf (rr 24 25) If when the officer goes to execute the warrant B offers payment of the amount of the judgment debt (which must always be specified in the warrant) the officer should receive the payment and the warrant should not then be executed (r 38) But if no payment is made B should be arrested and brought before the Court as soon as practicable (s 55) If no notice was issued prior to his arrest under r 37 it is open to B to show that he is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or any other sufficient cause [r 40 (1)] If the Court is satisfied that B is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or any other sufficient cause and if there are no other circumstances which would disentitle B to the indulgence of the Court the Court will make an order directing B s release [r 40 (1)] Otherwise the Court will make an order committing B to prison [r 40 (5)] The prison will be a civil prison (s 55) and the term of detention in prison is six months if the amount of the decree exceeds Rs. 50 and six weeks if the amount of the decree does not exceed Rs 50 (s 58) If while in prison, B pays the amount mentioned in the warrant to the officer in charge of the prison or the decree is otherwise fully satisfied as by attachment and sale of the property he will be released from detention (s 58) Otherwise he will be detained in prison until expiration of the term of his detention unless the decree holder requests the Court to release him from detention or omits to pay the subsistence allowance of the judgment debtor A judgment debtor released from detention in any one of the above cases cannot be re arrested in execution of the same decree [s 58 (2)] though the judgment debt has remained unpaid. This does not mean that his liability to pay the debt ceases for the decree still subsist and A may yet execute the decree against B s property [s 58 (2)] though not against his person

No woman can be arrested in execution of a money decree [s 56]

(ii) Decrees other than those for the payment of money—A judgment debtor may be arrested and imprisoned not only in execution of a decree for the payment of money but also in execution of other decrees (rr 31 32 33) The procedure to be followed in these cases is as follows If the application is in proper form the Court will issue a warrant for arrest of the judgment debtor (r 24) If the judgment debtor is arrested in execution of the warrant he must be brought before the Court as soon as practicable (s 55) The Court will then make an order committing him to the civil prison. If while in jail the decree is fully satisfied he will be released from detention [s. 58 (1)]. Otherwise he will be detained in prison until expiration of the term of his detention, unless the decree holder requests the Court to release him from detention, or omits to pay the subsistence allowance of the judgment debtor as provided by r 39

Execution against property of judgment debtor—This subject may be considered under two heads namely (1) attachment and (2) sale The rules relating to attachment may be stated first and then the rules governing sale for attachment precedes sale Attachment is levied and the sale of the property attached is effected by an officer of the Court under a warrant issued from the Court

Before considering the rules relating to attachment and sale it is to be observed that there are certain kinds of property which are not liable to attachment or sale in execution of a decree These are described in s 60 Subject to these exceptions all saleable property which belongs to the judgment debtor or over which he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree against him (s. 60)

I Attachment—Attachable property belonging to a judgment debtor may be divided into two classes (1) movable and (2) immovable

As to attachment of movable property—See rr 43 to 53

Attachment of immovable property—If the property be immovable the attachment is to be made by an order prohibiting the judgment debtor from transferring or charging the property in any way and prohibiting all other persons from taking any benefit from such transfer or charge The order must be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to the property and a copy of the order is to be affixed on a conspicuous part of the property and then upon a conspicuous part of the Court house (r 54)

Where an attachment has been made any private transfer of the property attached whether it be movable or immovable is void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment (r 64)

If a claim is preferred to any property attached in execution of a decree by any person other than a party to the suit the procedure prescribed by rr 58 to 63 must be followed If any questions arise in the course of execution proceedings between the parties to the suit or their representatives they should be dealt with under s 47

If during the pendency of the attachment the judgment debtor satisfies the decree through the Court the attachment will be deemed to be withdrawn (r 55) Otherwise the Court will order the property to be sold (r 64) If the property attached is current coin or currency notes the Court may direct payment to the decree holder in satisfaction of his decree (r 56) for it is not necessary to sell coin or currency notes

II Sale of attached property—If the property attached be movable property which is subject to speedy and natural decay may be sold at once (r 43) Every sale in execution of a decree should be conducted by an officer of the Court except where the property to be sold is a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation which the Court may order to be sold through a broker (r 76)

After the property whether movable or immovable is attached the first step to be taken with a view to its sale is to cause a proclamation to be made stating the time and place of sale and specifying the property to be sold the revenue (if any) assessed upon the property the encumbrances (if any) to which it is liable the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered and such other particulars as the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property (r 66) No sale should take place until after the expiration of at least thirty days in the case of immovable property and of at least fifteen days in the case of movable property calculated from the date on which a copy of the proclamation has been fixed on the Court house of the Judge ordering the sale unless the judgment debtor consents in writing to the sale being held at an earlier date (r 68) The Court may in its discretion adjourn the sale from time to time but if the sale is adjourned for longer period than seven days a fresh proclamation should be made unless the judgment debtor consents to waive it (r 69)

It is important to note that no holder of a decree in execution of which property is sold can bid for or purchase the property without the express permission of the Court (r 72)

Irregularity in the conduct of sale of attached property—No sale of immovable property can be set aside on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the party seeking to set aside the sale has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity (r 90) As regards movable property the rule is that a sale of movable property is not liable to be set aside in any case on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale The only remedy open to the party who has sustained any injury by reason of such irregularity is to institute a suit for compensation against the person responsible for the irregularity But if such person be the purchaser himself the party sustaining the injury may sue for the recovery of the specific property and for compensation in default of such recovery (r 78)

Disposal of sale proceeds—The sale proceeds of property sold in execution of a decree are applied in the manner prescribed by s 73

Resistance to delivery of possession to purchaser—Where immovable property is sold in execution of a decree and the purchaser is resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property he may make an application to the Court complaining of such resistance or obstruction The Court will thereupon fix a day for investigating the matter and summon the party against whom the application is made to appear and answer (rr 97 103)

Payment under decree

Modes of paying money under decree

1 [S 257] (1) All money payable under a decree shall be paid as follows, namely —

(a) into the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree, or

(b) out of Court to the decree holder, or

(c) otherwise as the Court which made the decree directs

(2) Where any payment is made under clause (a) of sub rule (1), notice of such payments shall be given to the decree holder

Retrospective effect of rules contained in this Order—A comparison of this Order with the corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1882 will show that several changes have been introduced in matters of procedure so far as they relate to the execution of decrees. In this connection it is important to note that changes in matters of procedure are retrospective in effect and apply to pending proceedings (r)

Money payable under a decree—It is money payable under a decree that may be paid into Court under this rule Costs of an application awarded by an order under s 47 cannot be said to be money payable under a decree Hence such costs ought to be paid to the party direct and not into Court (s)

Where an order has been made for the payment of money into Court on a certain date and the Court is closed on that day a payment made on the following day is good payment for the purposes of the order (t)

Decree directing payment to decree holder—Payment into Court is a valid compliance with a decree even though the decree directs payment to the decree holder (u)

When rule does not apply—This rule does not apply where a decree is by its terms incapable of execution as where it is provided by a consent decree that if the decretal amount is not paid it may be recovered by suit (v)

Notice of payment into Court—Sub r (2) which requires notice to be given to the decree holder where payment is made into Court is new Payment of the decretal amount into Court operates as a satisfaction of the decree to that extent though no notice of payment is given to the decree holder as provided by sub r (2) Similarly where a decree is assigned by the decree holder and the judgment debtor pays the decretal amount into Court without notice of the assignment the payment operates as a satisfaction of the decree to that extent though no notice of payment is given to the decree holder and the assignee is not entitled to execute the decree (w) But where interest is awarded by the decree on the decretal amount the decree holder is entitled to interest until he receives notice of the payment into Court (x)

Payment out of Court to decree holder

2 [S 258] (1) Where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder the decree holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree, and the Court shall record the same accordingly

(2) The judgment debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment, and apply to the Court to issue a notice to the decree holder to show cause, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, and if, after service of such notice, the decree holder fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly

(3) A payment or adjustment, which has not been certified or recorded as aforesaid, shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree

S 257A C P C 1882 omitted in this Code—With reference to the present rule it is important to note that s 257A of the Code of 1882 has been omitted in this Code That section ran as follows —

Agreement to give time to judgment-debtor

Every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment debt shall be void unless it is made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree and such Court deems the consideration to be under the circumstances reasonable

Agreement for the satisfaction of judgment-debt

Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment debt which provides for payment directly or indirectly of any sum [illegible] the sum due or to accrue due under the decree [illegible] void unless it is made with the like sanction.

Any sum paid in contravention of the provisions of this section shall be [illegible] to the satisfaction of the judgment debt and the surplus if any shall be [illegible] by the judgment debtor

(w) Tata Iron & St I Co Ltd v Vaidyanath (1923) Pat 34 61 C 85 (1923) A I 118 | (x) [illegible] v Sherbet [illegible] I C 410

2 This section was first enacted by Act XII of 1879 with a view to protect judgment debtors from undue pressure by decree holders It gave rise to conflicting decisions and as interpreted by the majority of the High Courts was found in practice to be of little service to judgment debtors It has been therefore omitted in this Code with the result that—

(1) agreements to give time to the judgment debtor and

(2) agreements for the satisfaction of a judgment debt which provide for the payment of any sum in excess of the decretal amount may now be entered into between the decree holder and the judgment debtor without the sanction of the Court and if otherwise valid they may be enforced as any other agreement

Points of difference between old section 258 and the present rule—The present rule corresponds with s 258 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

(1) The words of any kind have been inserted in sub r (1) See notes below Decree of any kind

(2) In para 3 of s 258 the words as a payment or adjustment or the decree followed the word recognized These words have been omitted [see sub r (3)] to make it clear that the Court cannot recognise an uncertified payment or adjustment for any purpose whatever See notes below Uncertified payment and limitation

Scope and application of the rule—This rule provides that—

(1) where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court or

(2) where a decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree holder

the decree holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree so that the same may be recorded by that Court

If the decree holder fails to inform the Court of the payment or adjustment it is open to the judgment debtor to protect himself from execution of the decree by applying to the Court within 90 days from the date of the payment or adjustment (y) to issue a notice to the decree holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified If the payment or adjustment is not certified by either party it shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree This will appear from the following

A obtains a decree against B for Rs 2 000 It is subsequently agreed between A and B that A should accept Rs 1 000 in full satisfaction of the decree B pays A Rs 1 000 out of Court but neither the payment nor adjustment is certified to the Court A applies for execution of the full amount of the decree notwithstanding receipt by him of Rs 1 000 B objects to execution on the ground that the decree has been adjusted and payment has been made The payment not being certified cannot be recognized by the Court executing the decree and the Court must direct execution to issue It will not avail B that A had agreed to certify the payment to the Court but has omitted to do so See notes below under the head Fraud

History of sub rule 3—The Codes of 1859 (s 206) and 1877 (s 258) provided that a payment or adjustment made out of Court should not be recognized by any Court executing the decree unless it had been certified to that Court The Code of 1877 was amended in the year 1879 and the amendment provided that an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognized by any Court and the same provision

occurred in the Code of 1882 (z) In the year 1888 the section was again altered by providing that an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognized by any Court executing the decree and this is the form in which the rule now stands

Sub rule (3) —Sub rule (3) provides that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree The words by any Court executing the decree indicate the extent to which an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognized by a Court These words show that the prohibition to take cognizance of an uncertified payment or adjustment is limited to the Court which is called upon to execute the decree It is in execution proceedings alone that an uncertified payment or adjustment cannot be recognized by a Court The rule does not prohibit a Court from taking cognizance of such payment or adjustment in proceedings other than execution proceedings An uncertified payment or adjustment may therefore be recognized by a Court trying a suit for a relief based upon such payment or adjustment (a) This gives rise to the following questions —

1 Whether if the Court orders execution in the case put in the above illustrations (p 636) B can maintain a suit against A for a declaration that the decree has been adjusted and for an injunction restraining A from executing the decree ?

2 Whether if A executes the decree notwithstanding the adjustment and B s property is sold in execution B can maintain a suit against A to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree having been adjusted A ought not to have caused the same to be executed ?

3 Whether if A executes the decree notwithstanding the adjustment B can maintain a suit against A to recover damages for breach of the contract represented by the adjustment ? In other words whether if B is compelled to pay in execution of the decree the full amount of the decree namely Rs 2 000 he is entitled to recover back that sum from A as damages for breach of the contract on A s part not to execute the decree ?

Each of suits referred to above would involve recognition of an uncertified adjustment and B s success in each would depend inter alia upon the recognition of such adjustment by the Court trying the suit Now it has been made sufficiently clear that the prohibition against the recognition of an uncertified adjustment is confined to Courts executing decrees and does not extend to Courts trying suits Therefore a Court trying any of the above suits would not be precluded from recognizing the adjustment though the adjustment has not been certified But this circumstance is not of itself sufficient to entitle B to a decree for in the first two cases there is an initial difficulty in B s way That difficulty is the bar of s 47 which enjoins that all questions relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of a decree shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit

As regards the first question it is quite true that if B brought a suit for an injunction restraining A from executing the decree the Court trying the suit would recognize the adjustment though it had not been certified But the Court cannot try the suit at all for such a suit is barred under s 47 the principal question in the suit being whether A should be restrained from executing the decree This being a question relating to execution cannot be tried in a separate suit (b) Hence the answer to the first question is in the negative

2 The answer to the second question is also in the negative and for the same reasons The suit being one to set aside the sale in execution the principal question would be whether the proceedings in execution should be set aside and this question is also one relating to execution within the meaning of s 47 and the suit would therefore be barred under that section (c) It is therefore immaterial whether the purchaser at the sale in execution is a stranger or the decree holder himself There are two cases (d) both prior in date to the Allahabad decision cited above in which the property was purchased by a stranger and the suit was to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree had already been satisfied out of Court at the time the sale was held. In both these cases it was held that the person who bought the property having purchased it bona fide at an auction sale the sale to him could not be set aside But the question whether the suit was barred was not raised in either of those cases According to the Allahabad decision cited above the suit would be barred under s 47

The third question stands upon a different footing The suit therein referred to is one for the recovery of damages for breach of the contract represented by the adjustment The contract represented by the adjustment was to accept Rs 1 000 in full satisfaction of the decree and not to execute the decree for its full amount If notwithstanding the payment to A of Rs 1 000 in pursuance of the adjustment A causes the decree to be executed and B is compelled to pay the amount of the decree (that is Rs 2 000) in execution B may sue A to recover back that amount as damages for breach of the contract not to execute the decree Such a suit is not barred under s 47 for the principal question in the suit is not one relating to execution but to the contract its breach and the amount of damages suffered by B in consequence of the breach The answer to the third question is therefore in the affirmative (e) The Court trying the suit will take cognizance of the adjustment and will direct A by its decree to repay Rs 2 000 as and by way of damages to B though the adjustment has not been certified. It may here be noted that if after the decree is satisfied out of Court A assigns the decree to X and Y then proceeds to realize the decree by execution against B B has no cause of action against X and he is not entitled to recover from Y as damages the amount paid by him in execution to X even though Y took the assignment with the knowledge that the decree had been satisfied (f)

The effect of non certification on the rights of parties may be summarised as follows If the adjustment is not certified it will not be recognized by any Court executing the decree and if the decree holder applies for execution notwithstanding the adjustment the Court will direct execution to issue and the judgment debtor will not be heard to say that the decree has been adjusted Nor can he even by instituting a regular suit for injunction obtain a stay of execution for such a suit is barred under s 47 Nor is it open to him if his property be sold in execution to bring a suit to set aside the sale for such a suit also is barred under s 47 His only remedy is to sue the decree holder for damages sustained by him by reason of the breach of the contract represented by the adjustment He need not however wait until the decree against him is executed His cause of action arises on the presentation of an application by the decree holder to execute the decree Therefore where he has paid any money under the adjustment he may sue the decree holder to recover it as soon as the decree holder applies to the Court for execution (g)

Suit by judgment debtor based upon uncertified adjustment—The three kinds of suit referred to above deserve careful consideration for they are typical of the modes in which the question of an uncertified adjustment frequently arises But an uncertified adjustment may result in a conveyance as in the following case—A obtains a decree against B for possession of immovable property A then executes an ekrarnama whereby in consideration of Rs 150 paid to him by B he relinquishes an eight annas share of the property in favour of B Subsequently he sells the remaining eight annas share to B by a kabala Both the ekrarnama and kabala are duly registered but neither of them is certified to the Court A then applies for execution of the decree and obtains possession of the property B sues A upon the two documents for a declaration of his right to the property and for recovery of possession thereof Is the suit barred under s 47? It has been held that it is not barred and that B is entitled to a decree The suit is not one for an injunction and it cannot therefore be said to be directed to interfere with the execution of the decree In fact the decree has already been executed Nor is the suit one for setting aside a sale in execution for there has been no sale The suit is one for the recovery of property conveyed to B by two documents both of which are duly registered The document no doubt constitute an adjustment of the decree but as already explained in sub r (3) do not bar a suit upon an uncertified adjustment (h)

The law on the point may be stated in one sentence An uncertified payment or adjustment may be recognized by any Court except a Court executing the decree and a suit based upon such payment or adjustment is maintainable unless it is barred by the provisions of s 47

Suit by decree holder upon an uncertified adjustment—This is the converse case A obtains a decree against B for Rs 315 and costs B pays A Rs 200 and induces A to give up the cost and accept a bond for the balance to be paid at the end of eight months Neither the payment nor adjustment is certified to the Court This does not preclude A from suing on the bond for as stated above sub r (3) only prohibits a Court executing a decree from recognizing an uncertified payment or adjustment (i) Since the repeal of s 257A of the Code of 1882 it would not matter that the bond provided for payment of a sum in excess of the balance (j)

Money payable under a decree —A decree directing the sale of mortgaged properties in default of payment is a decree for the payment of money whether there is a direction to pay personally or not (k) Income received by a mortgagee decree holder from the mortgaged property in his possession and for which he has to account and give credit for the surplus is not money payable under a decree within the meaning of this rule (l)

The Madras High Court has held that a decree which gives the judgment-debtor an option of paying money in order to secure a reconveyance is not a decree under which money is payable within the meaning of this section (m)

"Decree of any kind —The words of any kind in sub-rule (1) did not occur in sec 258 of the Code of 18 ˜ or of 188. They were inserted by the Code of 1908 Under the Codes of 18 and 188. it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that sec 258 applied to the adjustment of any decree whatever may be the nature of the relief granted by the decree In the Calcutta case the decree was one for possession of immovable property (n) On the other hand it was held by the Madras High Court that the section referred only to decrees under which money was payable and did not apply to other decrees e g decrees for possession of immovable property (o) It was in this state of authorities that the words of any kind were inserted in sub-rule (1) The High Court of Calcutta claims that these words were added to give effect to its rulings and to supersede the Madras rulings (p) The Bombay High Court also holds that the rule applies to the adjustment of any decree as for instance a decree for partition (q) The High Court of Madras holds that the only effect of the addition of the words of any kind is that the decree is not required to be one exclusively for the payment of money as held by that Court under the Code of 1882 but that it may be a complex decree providing partly for the payment of money and partly for any other relief or reliefs g delivery of possession of immovable property in other words one of the reliefs granted by the decree must be for the payment of money and unless this is so the adjustment does not require to be certified under this rule The Madras High Court lays stress on the word the before the word decree and says that the words the decree could only refer to what precedes namely a decree under which money is payable (r) Thus if a decree provides for the payment of money as well as for partition of immovable property the adjustment must be certified as required by this rule (s) but not if it is exclusively for partition

Adjustment —A composition scheme between a judgment debtor and his creditors including the decree holder is an adjustment within the meaning of this rule and may be certified as such (t) An oral agreement not to proceed against the judgment debtor beyond a certain limit is an agreement varying the terms of the decree and is therefore an adjustment which cannot be proved if not certified (u)

Where the decree is adjusted in part —A obtains a decree against B and C A then enters into an agreement with B by which B is discharged from liability under the decree The agreement constitutes an adjustment of a part of the decree within the meaning of this rule (v)

Application for final decree —An application for a final decree in a suit on a mortgage is not an application for execution Therefore the Court to which an application is made for a final decree is not a Court executing the decree Hence such Court may recognize payments made by the mortgagor out of Court though the payments have not been certified (w)

Mode of certifying —Sub rule (_) says that if the decree holder fails to shew cause the Court shall certify payment The Court is not bound if the decree-holder does not appear to certify the payment without requiring proof The Court must be atisfied before it certifies payment that payment has been made (x) See notes below Uncertified payment and limitation

This rule applies only to parties who stand in the relation of decree holder and judgment debtor at the date of payment or adjustment —A obtains a d cree

Fraud —There is an earlier decision of the Madras High Court which lends colour to the view that where a decree is adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree holder and he agrees to certify the adjustment to the Court but omits to do so and subsequently applies to the Court for execution of the decree the judgment debtor may object to the execution and prove the adjustment in execution proceedings and the Court executing the decree may take cognizance of the payment notwithstanding the provisions of this rule the reason given being that the suppression of the adjustment from the Court is not only a fraud upon the judgment debtor but a fraud upon the Court (a) But in later cases the same High Court has said that if that be the effect of that decision it is not good law (b) In a Bombay case (c) a decree for Rs 2 500 was adjusted by the judgment debtor paying and the decree holder accepting Rs 2 000 in full satisfaction of the decree but the adjustment was not certified to the Court The decree holder thereafter applied for execution of the decree He omitted to state in his application as required by O 21 r 11 (e) that the decree was adjusted It was held following an earlier decision of the same Court (d) that it was a case of fraud upon the Court and the application for execution was dismissed But these cases have been overruled by a Full Bench of the same High Court and it has been held that a Court executing a decree can in no case recognize a payment or adjustment not certified as required by this rule (e) The High Court of Calcutta has consistently held that it is not competent to a Court executing a decree to enquire into the fact of a payment or adjustment which has not been certified as required by this rule even if fraud is imputed to the decree holder (f) The same view has been taken by the Chief Court of the Punjab (g) by the High Court of Patna (h) and by the Chief Court of Oudh (i)

The law allows the judgment debtor 90 days to apply to have the payment or adjustment certified [Limitation Act Sch I art 174] If he does not make the application and the decree holder applies for execution within that period he may in answer to the application for execution apply to have the payment or adjustment certified but this must be within 90 days And it has been held that objections filed by a judgment debtor to the decree holder s application for execution may be treated as an application to certify the payment or adjustment provided the objections are filed within 90 days of the adjustment (j) But the judgment debtor is not entitled to an extension of time even if fraud is established on the part of the decree holder Such extension he can claim only under s 18 of the Limitation Act and that section provides only for the case where an applicant has by means of fraud been kept from the knowledge of his right to make the application it does not provide for the case where he has by means of fraud been kept from the exercise of his right to make the application (k)

Uncertified payment and limitation—Sub r (3) of this rule provides that an uncertified payment shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree The third paragraph of the old section provided that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognized as a payment or adjustment of the decree by any Court executing the decree It was accordingly held under that section that there was nothing to prevent an uncertified payment from operating as a part payment within the meaning of s 20 of the Limitation Act so as to extend the period of limitation for applying for execution under that Act (l) The words as a payment or adjustment of the decree have been omitted in sub r (3) Therefore under the present rule the Court cannot recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment for any purpose whatever It follows that an uncertified payment can no longer operate as a part payment so as to extend the period of limitation for an application for the execution of a decree (m) This may be explained by an illustration. A obtains a decree against B in January 1921 for Rs 4 000 B pays A out of Court Rs 2 000 in January 1923 but the payment is not certified A applies for execution of the decree for the balance in January 1925 that is more than three years after the date of the decree but within three years from the date of payment under the decree Under the old section the payment though not certified operated as a fresh starting point for limitation and the application was therefore not barred Under the present rule the payment not being certified cannot be recognized by the Court even for the purpose of limitation and the application must be rejected as barred by limitation

There was at one time a conflict of decision as to the meaning of certify and as to how payments made out of Court should be certified The High Courts of Calcutta (n) Madras (o) Bombay (p) and Rangoon (q) have held that where interest on the decretal amount has been paid by the judgment debtor out of Court or where part payment has been made of the decretal amount by the judgment debtor out of Court the decree holder may apply to certify the payment by an application made expressly for that purpose either prior or subsequent to the application for execution or he may certify the payment by a declaration in an application for execution of the decree that he has received such payment [O 21 r 11 (e)] The Allahabad High Court in a series of decisions (r) maintained that the payment or adjustment must be certified in a separate proceeding distinct from and prior to the application for execution but in the recent Full Bench case of Joti Prasad v Srichand (s) it has fallen into line with the other High Courts

In some cases the decree holder's certification has been treated as an application to take a step in aid of execution and as affording a fresh starting point of limitation under Article 182 (5) so that the application must be made within three years of payment (t) It is submitted that this is not correct The payment must be made within three years of the decree or of the last starting point of limitation to be effectual under section 20 of the Limitation Act (u) but it may be certified at any subsequent time by the decree holder (t)

Uncertified adjustment and estoppel —Since an uncertified adjustment cannot be recognized by the Court executing the decree it cannot operate as an estoppel against the decree holder A obtains a decree against B The decree is adjusted but the adjustment is not certified to the Court A receives payments under the adjustment and then applies for execution of the decree The adjustment being uncertified the fact that A has received payments under the adjustment does not estop him from applying for execution (u)

Restitution of uncertified payment on reversal of decree in appeal —If a decree is reversed in appeal the judgment debtor is entitled to recover back all payments made by him under the decree though the payments have not been certified The decree being reversed in appeal the payment whether certified or not is one made without consideration and the judgment debtor is entitled to a refund by an application to the Court of first instance (x) See s 144

Surety —A surety under sec 145 for the performance of a decree is bound so long as the judgment debtor is bound and is not discharged by a payment which has not been certified (y)

Joint decree holders —See notes to O 21 r 16 Payment by judgment debtor out of Court to one of several holders of a joint decree

Minor —An adjustment of a decree made by a guardian without obtaining the permission of the Court as required by O 32 r 7 cannot be certified under this rule ( )

Assignment of decree —The transferee of a decree cannot execute a decree without first making an application under r 16 below to the Court which passed the decree When such an application is made it is made to the Court as a Court which passed the decree and not as a Court executing the decree within the meaning of sub r (3) It is therefore open to the judgment debtor to object under rule 16 that the decree having been satisfied there was nothing to assign (a) But apparently if an order for execution is made in favour of the transferee after notice to the judgment debtor he cannot afterwards plead an uncertified payment for under rule 16 execution in favour of a transferee is subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by the decree holder (b)

2 Representative—The word judgment debtor in this rule includes persons claiming under him Such persons therefore are as much precluded from setting up an uncertified adjustment in execution proceedings as the judgment debtor himself would be (c) Compare s 146

Limitation for application under this rule—A certificate of payment given by a decree holder to the Court is merely an intimation that he has received a sum of money and that the decree has in that way been wholly or partially satisfied (d) It is not an application for the Court has no judicial duty to perform with respect to it (e) Article 181 does not apply and a decree holder may therefore at any time certify a payment or an adjustment (f) The cases on the subject were reviewed by the Judicial Committee in Prakash Singh v Allahabad Bank Ltd (g) It was there held that certification to the Court under O 31 r 2 by a decree holder of a payment made to him out of Court even if made in the form of an application is not an application within art 181 of the Limitation Act 1908 so as to be barred unless it takes place within three years of the payment certified nor is there any article which limits the time Further certification under r 2 can take place when execution of the decree is barred but for the payment certified But if the judgment debtor requires notice to issue to the decree holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified he must do so by an application made within 90 days from the date of the payment or adjustment See Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 174 The judgment debtor may apply even if the decree is not drawn up (h) Where the right to apply is barred by limitation the judgment debtor is not entitled to agitate the matter as a proceeding under s 47 (i)

Oral adjustment—The High Court of Allahabad has expressed the opinion that where the agreement constituting an adjustment of a decree is oral s 92 of the Evidence Act 1872 is a bar to the proof of such agreement (j)

Appeal—An order allowing or refusing an application to record an adjustment of a decree or a payment made out of Court under a decree is a decree within the meaning of s 2 cl 3 read with s 47 and is therefore appealable under s 96 (k)

Criminal proceedings—The prohibition against the recognition of an uncertified payment or adjustment is confined to civil Courts executing decrees and does not extend to criminal Courts Hence an uncertified payment or adjustment may be recognised by criminal Courts and proof thereof is admissible in the investigation and trial of offences by those Court A holds a decree against B for Rs 1 000 B pays the full amount of the decree to A out of Court but the payment is not certified A then applies for execution of the decree but omits to state in the application for execution though required to do so by r 11 sub r (2) cl (e) of this Order that the full amount of the decree has been paid A is guilty of the offence of giving false evidence within the meaning of ss 191 and 193 of the Indian Penal Code and if the decree is executed he is also guilty of the offence of fraudulently causing a decree to be executed after it has been satisfied within the meaning of s 210 of the Penal Code In either case proof of the uncertified payment may be admitted by a criminal Court (l) It must however be noted that a mere application for execution not followed by execution does not constitute an offence under s 210 of the Penal Code for it is of the essence of the offence under that section that the decree must have been caused to be executed (m)

Land situate in more than one jurisdiction —This rule is new It gives effect to a ruling of the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case (n) The rule when amplified may be stated thus where immovable property attached in execution of a decree forms one estate of which a part is situate within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree and the rest beyond such limits the Court executing the decree has the power to attach and sell the whole estate though only a part thereof is situate within the local limits of its jurisdiction

Procedure where Court desires that its own decree shall be executed by another Court

6 [S 224] The Court sending a decree for execution shall send—

(a) a copy of the decree,

(b) a certificate setting forth that satisfaction of the decree has not been obtained by execution within the jurisdiction of the Court by which it was passed or where the decree has been executed in part, the extent to which satisfaction has been obtained and what part of the decree remains unsatisfied, and

(c) a copy of any order for the execution of the decree, or, if no such order has been made, a certificate to that effect

Clause (b)—The omission to transmit to the Court executing the decree the certificate referred to in cl (b) is not a material irregularity within the meaning of r 90 of this Order Hence it is not a good ground for setting aside a sale in execution (o)

Court receiving copies of decree etc to file same without proof

7 [S 225] The Court to which a decree is so sent shall cause such copies and certificates to be filed, without any further proof of the decree or order for execution, or of the copies thereof, unless the Court, for any special reasons to be recorded under the hand of the Judge requires such proof

Proof of jurisdiction—The old section contained the words or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it after the words or of the copies thereof This gave rise of to a conflict of opinion whether a Court to which a decree was sent for execution had the power to inquire whether the Court that passed the decree had jurisdiction to pass it and to refuse execution if it found that the decree was passed without jurisdiction It was held in some cases that the Court had the power (p) and in others that it had not (q) The effect of the omission of these words is that a Court to which a decree is transferred for execution has now no power to question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree under execution (r) It has been recently held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court that where a decree presented for execution was made by a Court which on the face of it had no jurisdiction to pass it the executing Court is entitled to refuse to execute it on the ground that it was made without jurisdiction (s) It is not clear whether the decision was intended to apply to a case where a decree passed by one Court is transferred for execution to another Court

8 [s 226] Where such copies are so filed, the decree or order may, if the Court to which it is sent is the District Court, be executed by such Court or be transferred for execution to any subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction

Execution of decree or order by Court to which it is sent

Subordinate Court—If a Munsiff in district X sends a decree passed by him for execution direct to a Munsiff in district Y the latter has no jurisdiction to execute the decree The proper course is for the Munsiff in district X to send the decree to the District Court of district Y and the latter Court may then under this rule transfer the decree for execution to the Munsiff in that district (t)

9 [s 227] Where the Court to which the decree is sent for execution is a High Court, the decree shall be executed by such Court in the same manner as if it had been passed by such Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction

Execution by High Court of decree transferred by other Court

Application for Execution

10 [s 230, 1st para] When the holder of a decree desires to execute it, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree or to the Officer (if any) appointed in this behalf, or if the decree has been sent under the provisions hereinbefore contained to another Court then to such Court or to the proper officer thereof

Application for execution

Who may apply for execution—The person appearing on the face of the decree as the decree holder is entitled to execution unless it be shown by some other person under O 21 r 16 that he has taken the place of the decree holder (u)

Court by which decree may be executed—See s 38

Court which passed the decree—See s 37 as to the definition of "Court which passed a decree" and notes thereto

What decrees may be executed—See notes to s 36

If the decree has been sent to another Court—Where the decree of a District Court has been sent to the Court of a Munsiff for execution and has not been returned to the District Court the "proper Court" within the meaning of the Limitation Act 1908 art 182 (5) in which to apply for execution of the decree is the Court of the Munsiff (v)

(2) Save as otherwise provided by sub rule (1), every application for the execution of a decree shall be in writing, signed and verified by the applicant or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and shall contain in a tabular form the following particulars, namely —

Written application

(a) the number of the suit,

(b) the names of the parties,

(c) the date of the decree,

(d) whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree,

(e) whether any, and (if any) what, payment or other adjustment of the matter in controversy has been made between the parties subsequently to the decree,

(f) whether any, and (if any) what, previous applications have been made for the execution of the decree, the dates of such applications and their results,

(g) the amount with interest (if any) due upon the decree or other relief granted thereby, together with particulars of any cross decree, whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed,

(h) the amount of the costs (if any) awarded,

(i) the name of the person against whom execution of the decree is sought, and

(j) the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, whether—

(i) by the delivery of any property specifically decreed,

(ii) by the attachment and sale, or by the sale without attachment, of any property,

(iii) by the arrest and detention in prison of any person,

(iv) by the appointment of a receiver,

(v) otherwise, as the nature of the relief granted may require

(3) The Court to which an application is made under sub rule (2) may require the applicant to produce a certified copy of the decree

Sub rule (1) corresponds with s 256 of the Code of 1882 and sub rule (2) with s 235

Difference between old section 256 and sub rule (1)—Section 256 of the Code of 1882 was as follows —

Power to direct immediate execution of decree for money not exceeding R 1 000

When a decree is passed for a sum of money only and the amount decreed does not exceed the sum of one thousand rupees the Court may when passing the decree on the oral application of the decree holder order immediate execution thereof by the issue of a warrant directed either against the person of the judgment debtor if he is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court or against his movable property within the same limits

Sub rule (1) differs from s 256 in the following particulars —

1 Under s 256 immediate execution could only be issued if the amount of the decree did not exceed Rs 1 000 Under the present rule there is no limit to the amount of the decree But the decree must be one for the payment of money

2 As a general rule a decree holder seeking to arrest the judgment debtor must present an application in writing to the Court and the Court may then direct a warrant to issue for the arrest of the judgment debtor who as a rule cannot be arrested without a warrant S 256 of the Code of 1882 dispensed with a written application and enabled the Court to issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment debtor on an oral application Sub rule (1) goes further and empowers the Court to order immediate arrest of the judgment debtor prior to the preparation of a warrant if he is within the precincts of the Court

3 Execution can no longer issue against the movable property of the judgment debtor on an oral application as it could under s 256

Privilege from arrest—The privilege from arrest under civil process conferred by s. 135 of this Code does not extend to a judgment debtor against whom an order has been made for immediate arrest under this sub rule See s 135 sub s (3)

Alterations in sub rule (2)—Sub rule (2) corresponds with s 235 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

1 In cl (g) the words together with particulars of any cross decree whether passed before or after the date of the decrees ought to be executed are new

2 In cl (j) sub cl (ii) the words or by the sale without attachment are new

3 Cl. (j) sub-cl. (iv) is new

The application shall be verified—An application for execution may be verified by any person acquainted with the facts of the case It may therefore be verified by a person who holds a general power of attorney from the decree holder notwithstanding that the decree holder may be residing within the jurisdiction of the Court (w) Where the application is made by a person other than the decree holder all that is necessary is that the Court should be satisfied that such person is acquainted with the facts of the case It is not necessary that it should be verified after the application for permission to verify it has been made nor is it necessary that the verification should be made in the presence of the Court (x)

The application shall state the date of the decree—The date of the decree means the date on which the judgment was pronounced (y) See O 20 r 7

The application shall specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required—Where an application did not specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court was required, it was rejected (z) See r 17 below

Sub rule (3)—This sub rule is new The Court may under this sub rule require the applicant to produce a certified copy of the decree Such copy however is not a necessary annexure to an application for execution An application therefore which is not accompanied by a copy of the decree cannot be said to be an application not in accordance with law within the meaning of art 18? ( ) of sch I of the Limitation Act (a)

Amendment of application—See r 17 below

12 [S 236] Where an application is made for the attachment of any movable property belonging to a judgment debtor but not in his possession, the decree holder shall annex to the application an inventory of the property to be attached, containing a reasonably accurate description of the same

Application for attachment of movable property not in judgment-debtor's possession

Failure to annex inventory—Where no such inventory as is required by this rule is annexed to the application for execution the application cannot be said to be one in accordance with law within the meaning of art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 (b) When the decree is executed under s 52 against the legal representative of a deceased person no inventory is necessary (c)

13 [S 237] Where an application is made for the attachment of any immovable property belonging to a judgment debtor, it shall contain at the foot—

Application for attachment of immovable property to contain certain particulars

(a) a description of such property sufficient to identify the same and, in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, a specification of such boundaries or numbers, and

Clause (a) —In cl (a) the words and in case such property can be indentified or numbers are new

14 [S 238] Power to require certified extract from Collector's register in certain cases Where an application is made for the attachment of any land which is registered in the office of the Collector, the Court may require the applicant to produce a certified extract from the register of such office, specifying the persons registered as proprietors of, or as possessing any transferable interest in, the land, or its revenue, or as liable to pay revenue for the land and the shares of the registered proprietors

Alterations in the law —Under the old section in the case of an application for the attachment of land registered in the Collector's Office it was necessary that the application should be accompanied by a certified extract from the register of such office Under the present rule the Court may at its option require the applicant to produce such extract The object is to save the applicant the costs of procuring such extract

15 [S 231] Application for execution by joint decree holder (1) Where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one, any one or more of such persons may, unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary, apply for the execution of the whole decree for the benefit of them all, or where any of them has died, for the benefit of the survivors and the legal representatives of the deceased

(2) Where the Court sees sufficient cause for allowing the decree to be executed on an application made under this rule, it shall make such order as it deems necessary for protecting the interests of the persons who have not joined in the application

Alterations in the rule —This rule corresponds with s 231 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

1 The words or his or their representatives which occurred in s. 231 after the words one or more of such persons have been omitted in view of the provisions of s 146 See notes below under the head Any one or more of such persons

2 The words unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary occurring in sub-rule (1) are new See notes below under the same words.

5 What is a joint decree—A decree jointly passed in favour of more persons than one is a joint decree A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs. 5000 this is a joint decree It is not the less a joint decree because the shares of A and B in the decretal amount have been determined by the decree Thus if it is determined by the decree that the share of A is Rs 2000 and the share of B is Rs. 3000 the decree is still a joint decree But though the decree in such a case is a joint decree the interest of A and B being determined by the decree either of them may apply for execution to the extent of his interest (d)

Application by one of several decree holders for execution of the whole decree—Ordinarily all the decree holders in a joint decree must join in an application for execution of the decree The present rule provides for the case in which all decree holders are unable or are unwilling to join in the application and enables one or more of the decree holders to apply for execution of the whole decree for the benefit of them all. Where an application is made under this rule by some only of several joint decree holders the Court may in its discretion grant or refuse the application (e) Similarly it is in the discretion of the Court whether or not to give notice to the other decree holders or to the judgment debtor before making an order for execution under this rule it is not obligatory upon the Court to do so (f) If the application is allowed the Court will under sub r (2) make such order as it deems necessary for protecting the interests of the other decree holders and of the judgment debtor (g)

Unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary—The provisions of this rule do not apply where by the terms of the decree execution has been made dependent on all the decree holders joining in the application (h)

Application by one of several decree holders for execution in respect of his share of the decree—The application under this rule by one of several holders of a joint decree must be for the execution of the whole decree and further it must also be for the benefit of the other decree holders as well as himself A joint decree cannot be executed by one of several joint holders in respect of what the applicant considers to be his share in the decree (i) Thus if a decree is passed for A and B for Rs. 5000 the decree is joint and neither A nor B can apply for execution of his proportionate share of the decree But one of several holders of a joint decree may apply for execution of the decree to the extent of his interest therein if the extent of such interest is determined by the decree Thus if in a suit for possession of land by A and B against C the Court has declared each of the plaintiffs to be entitled to a moiety of the land the Court may allow either plaintiff to execute the decree to the extent of his one half share though the decree is a joint decree (j)

The rule set forth above that one of several holders of a joint decree is not entitled to execution in respect of his share of the decree but that he must apply for execution of the whole decree applies only in those cases where the whole decree has remained unsatisfied That rule does not apply where a joint decree has been satisfied in part before the date of the application for execution In such a case execution cannot issue for the whole decree but only for so much thereof as has remained unsatisfied. An application for execution by a joint decree holder with regard to a certain portion of the decree giving up the rest the other decree holders being parties to the application and standing by is not illegal as contravening the provisions of this rule but there cannot be any subsequent execution for the balance of the same decree (k)

Payment by judgment debtor out of Court to one of several holders of a joint decree—A obtains a decree against C for Rs 5 000 C may pay the amount of the decree into Court (r 1) and the Court will then pay the amount to A on his application If C does not adopt that course and pays the amount to A out of Court (r 1) C must see that A the decree holder certifies the payment to the Court If A fails to certify the payment C may apply to the Court to record the payment as certified If C also fails to do so the Court executing the decree will not recognise the payment and will order execution (r 2) if A notwithstanding payment to him of the amount of the decree out of Court applies for execution of the decree against C

But if there are two or more decree holders and the payment is made by the judgment debtor to one of them the question arises whether the other decree holders have the right to execute the decree ? The following illustrations supply the answer —

I (1) A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs 5 000 C pays B his (B s) share of the decretal amount out of Court and the payment is certified to the Court A then applies under this rule for execution of the whole decree A cannot execute for more than his own share as the decree has been satisfied as to B s share (l)

(2) If in the above case the payment is not certified to the Court but B admits the payment A will be limited to his share in execution (m) But if B does not admit the payment the Court will allow execution to issue for the whole decree

II A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs 5 000 C pays the whole amount of the decree to B out of Court and the payment is certified to the Court A then applies for execution of the decree to the extent of his own share Is A entitled to execute the decree to the extent of his share in spite of the fact that B has certified satisfaction of the whole decree ? It has been held that he is for one of several joint decree holders is not competent to grant full discharge of the decree out of Court or to certify to the Court complete satisfaction of more than his own share of the decree without the concurrence of the other decree holders (n) But A has another remedy besides execution against C and that is a suit against B to recover his share from him for B has by his certificate admitted receipt of the whole amount of the decree (o)

Any one or more of such persons—This expression includes persons claiming under such person A transferee of a decree within the meaning of r 16 below is such a person (p)

Amendment—An application for execution of a joint decree by one only of the decree holders should state that the application is made on behalf of all the decree holders If the application contains no such statement it should be rejected Leave to amend cannot be granted for while O 21 r 17 allows a defect with reference to rr 11 to 14 to be amended it makes no mention of this rule (q)

Appeal —An order determining any question mentioned or referred to in s. 47 is a decree (s 2) and is therefore appealable under s 96 The questions referred to in s. 47 are questions arising between a decree holder on the one hand and the judgment debtor on the other and relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree This is illustrated by the following cases —

(1) A and B obtain a decree against C A alone applies for execution of the whole decree C (the judgment debtor) contends that A alone should not be allowed to execute the whole decree Here the question being one between the decree holder on the one hand and the judgment debtor on the other any order made upon the application is appealable as a decree If A s application is allowed C may appeal from the order and if the application is disallowed A may appeal from the order (r)

(2) But if the objection to execution was raised not by C the judgment debtor but by B the other decree holder the question being between the decree holders inter se no appeal will lie from an order either granting or refusing the application (s)

Limitation —See Limitation Act Sch I art 182 Expln 1

16 [S 232] Where a decree or, if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree holder in the decree, is transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law, the transferee may apply for execution of the decree to the Court which passed it, and the decree may be executed in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by such decree holder

Application for execution by transferee of decree

Provided that, where the decree, or such interest as aforesaid, has been transferred by assignment, notice of such application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections (if any) to its execution

Provided also that, where a decree for the payment of money against two or more persons has been transferred to one of them, it shall not be executed against the others

Alterations in the law —

1 The words or if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons the interest of any decree holder in the decree have been added into the first paragraph to make it clear that the rule is not confined in its application to a transferee of the whole decree but extends to a transferee of the interest of any holder of a joint decree This was in fact the interpretation put upon the old section (t)

2 The words if that Court thinks fit which occurred in the old section in the first paragraph before the words the decree may be executed have been omitted. See notes below Right to execution does not depend upon discretion of Court

Decree —The expression decree in the first paragraph and the first proviso O 21 of this rule is not confined to a money decree It includes a mortgage decree (u) The second proviso is confined to money decrees

Rule of procedure —This rule regulates procedure and does not affect substantive rights The transferee of a decree cannot execute it until he has obtained an order under this rule but the transfer operates from the date of the transfer and the transferee is entitled without obtaining an order under this rule to object to an attachment of the decree made subsequent to the transfer (v) If a liquidator has transferred a decree before the company is dissolved he may execute a written assignment for the purpose of this rule after dissolution and after he has ceased to be liquidator (w)

Application for execution by transferee of decree —No order should be made under this rule for the execution of a decree on the application of a transferee of the decree unless—

I the decree has been transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law [an oral assignment is not sufficient (x)]

II the application for execution is made to the Court which passed the decree and

III where the decree has been transferred by assignment notice of the application has been given to the transferor and the judgment debtor

The rule does not require an independent application by the transferee for recognition as transferee All that the rule enjoins is that a transferee seeking execution should give notice of the application for execution to the transferor and the judgment debtor (y) See notes below Transfer of decree against a company in liquidation On the other hand until an order for execution is made in favour of the transferee he has not acquired the status of decree holder See sec 2 (3)

(a) The transferee of a decree under an assignment in writing [A transferee under an oral assignment has no locus standi to apply for execution under this rule (a)]

(b) The transferee of a decree by operation of law e g the legal representative of a deceased decree holder or the Official Assignee in the case of an insolvent decree holder or the purchaser of a decree at a court sale in execution of a decree against the decree holder (r 53) (b) A transfer of property by A to B which is the subject matter of a suit by A against C does not amount to a transfer by operation of law of a decree subsequently obtained by A against C so as to entitle B to apply for execution under this rule (c) A deed of transfer of property which is the subject matter of a suit may involve a transfer of the decree passed on the very day on which the deed is executed but the transfer in that case is not by operation of law but by an assignment in writing (d) A transfer by operation of law means a

16 transfer on death or by devolution or by succession Therefore the legal representative of a deceased decree holder cannot be substituted on the record of the execution proceeding but he must make an application under this rule (e) This rule does not recognize an equitable assignment of a decree The dicta in a Bombay case recognizing such an assignment (f) have not been accepted by other High Courts (g)

(c) A transferee under an assignment in writing or by operation of law from the transferee mentioned in cls (a) and (b) whether by immediate or mesne assignment (h)

Explanation I—The expression transferee in cls (a) (b) and (c) is not confined to a transferee of the whole decree but includes a transferee of a portion of the decree (i) or where the decree is a joint one the transferee of the interest of any one of the decree holders in the decree (j) The mortgagee of a decree by an assignment in writing by way of mortgage is a transferee of a fractional interest in the decree and is entitled to execution under this rule (k) On the other hand if a decree awards a substantial relief plus costs the decree is one and indivisible and it can be transferred only as a whole (l)

Illustrations of Explanation I

1 A who holds a decree against B for Rs 5 000 transfers his interest in the decree to the extent of Rs 2 500 to X Here X is in the position of a joint decree holder [r 15 above] The application for execution may be made by X or it may be made by A the decree holder or by A and X both together In any case the application must be for execution of the whole decree Kishore v Gisborne & Coy (1890) 17 Cal 341 Gyamonee v Radha (1880) 5 Cal 592 and not merely for the portion transferred.

2 A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs 5 000 A assigns his interest in the decree to X Here X occupies the double character of a transferee within the meaning of this rule and of a transferee of an interest in a joint decree within the meaning of r 15 Hence any application that X may make for execution will be governed by the provisions both of this and the preceding rule Dwar Bux v Fatik (1899) 26 Cal 250

Explanation II—A person to whom a party to a suit agrees to transfer any decree that may be passed in the suit is not a transferee within the meaning of this rule

Explanation III —A person who is entitled under a decree to an assignment of a previous decree obtained by A against B but who has not obtained such assignment is not a transferee of the previous decree so as to entitle him to apply for execution of it But he will be entitled to apply if he has obtained an assignment before the date of the application (m)

Explanation II —A person to whom the holder of a decree for possession of immovable property sells a portion of the property is a not a transferee of the decree within the meaning of this rule and he is not therefore entitled to execute the decree A transfer of property is not the same thing as a transfer of a decree (n)

Explanation I —A transferee of a decree awarding maintenance is entitled to execution under this section The reason is that though a right to future maintenance cannot be transferred having regard to the provisions of s 6 cl. (d) of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 there is no objection to a transfer of such right when it is awarded by a decree The transferee therefore of such a decree is entitled to recover by execution maintenance that has fallen due He cannot of course attach maintenance before it has fallen due (o) See s 60 sub s (1) cl (n) and notes thereto on p 201 above

Benamidar — A obtains a decree against B C purchases the decree from A in the name of D Here C is the real transferee and D is benamidar or ostensible transferee Is D entitled to take out execution of the decree? Yes according to the High Court of Allahabad (p) No according to the High Court of Calcutta but if he has succeeded in taking out execution (as where it is not brought to the notice of the Court that he is a benamidar) the application for execution made by him will save a subsequent application by C from the bar of limitation (q)

Where the alleged transferee of a decree is found to be the benamidar of a judgment debtor the Court is bound by the second proviso to this rule to refuse to allow the decree to be executed against the other judgment debtors in favour of the alleged transferee (r)

It has been held in some cases that the mere fact that an order for execution has been made on the application of a benamidar does not preclude the real transferee from applying under this rule to continue the execution proceedings himself but the real transferee will be bound by proceedings in execution up to that date (s) The High Court of Madras has held that where a decree has been transferred by assignment in writing the transferee alone can apply for execution under this rule though he may be a mere benamidar and that the real transferee is not entitled to apply under this rule (t) But in a latter case in which the real transferee his benamidar the ostensible transferee and the original decree holder or transferor were all dead and there was a contest between their legal representatives the Madras High Court said that rule 16 was not exhaustive and that the Court had power to inquire who was the real owner entitled to execution (u)

II Application for execution by a transferee should be made to the Court which passed the decree —A transferee of a decree must apply for execution

16 to the Court which passed the decree though the decree has been sent for execution to another Court (t) The Court to which a decree has been transmitted for execution has no jurisdiction to make an order for execution on the application of a transferee of the decree If such an order is made it is illegal and it must be set aside in appeal (v) As to the definition of Court which passed the decree see s 37 and notes thereto

III Notice shall be given to the transferor and the judgment debtor— The notice which is required by the first proviso is not notice of the assignment but notice of the application for execution of the decree (x) The provisions of the rule as to notice are mandatory and if execution is issued without notice the proceedings in execution are void (y) The object of the notice is to enable the transferor and the judgment debtor to raise such objections as regards the assignment as may be available to them e g that the consideration money was not fully paid or that the transferee is a benamidar for some of the judgment debtors ( ) The object of issuing notices to the transferor and the judgment debtor is to determine once and for all and in the presence of all parties concerned the validity of the assignment (a) It cannot be said that notice is necessary each time the assignee comes in to get the decree executed (a) for after the first order in his favour he has acquired the status of a decree holder The transferee cannot accept the assignment and at the same time plead fraud to escape paying the consideration for the assignment (b) If the property of the judgment debtor is attached without hearing his objections the attachment is illegal even if the Court subsequently hears his objections and confirms the attachment after such hearing (c) Where the judgment debtor is dead the notice required by this rule should be given to his legal representative (d) Where no notice is given as required by this rule it is in the discretion of the Court to grant time to the transferee to enable him to serve the notice ( ) The Patna High Court has held that the notice required by this rule need not be in writing (f)

Where on an application by the transferee of a decree to have his name substituted as decree holder no objection is taken by the judgment debtor as to the validity of the transfer the judgment debtor will be precluded from questioning the validity of the transfer on an application by the transferee for execution of the decree (g) Similarly where no objection is taken by the judgment debtor that no notice was given to the transferor he will be precluded from raising that objection at a subsequent stage of the execution proceedings (h)

There is nothing to preclude a transferee of a decree from applying under s 39 to the Court which passed the decree to send the decree for execution to another Court (i) But the notice required by this rule must be issued by the Court which passed the decree and not by the Court to which the decree is sent for execution (j)

The High Court of Calcutta has held that the mere issue of a notice under this rule does not operate as a revivor within the meaning of arts 182 and 183 of the Limitation Act (k) but the High Courts of Allahabad and Madras have held that it does According to these Courts a mere application by the transferee for substituting his name for that of the decree holder operates as a revivor of the decree and gives a fresh starting point of limitation for executing the decree (l) And the Madras Court has held that an application by the transferee to bring the representative of the deceased judgment debtor on the record to serve him with notice under this rule has the same effect (m)

Execution does not depend upon discretion of Court—In the old section the words were and if that Court thinks fit the decree may be executed &c It was accordingly held under that section that the Court had a discretion to grant or refuse an application for execution made by a transferee (n) The words if that Court thinks fit have been omitted in this rule Therefore if the conditions specified in this rule are satisfied a transferee of a decree is entitled to execution as of right like the original decree holder

Transfer of decree for the payment of money against two or more persons to one of them—This subject may be considered under the following two heads —

1 Where the whole decree has been transferred

2 Where the decree is a joint one and part only of the decree has been transferred

First as regards transfer of the whole decree—Where a decree for the payment of money has been transferred by assignment or by operation of law to one of several judgment debtors the decree is wholly extinguished The transferee cannot execute the decree against the other judgment debtor but his remedy against them is by a regular suit for contribution as if the decree had been satisfied by him The object of the second proviso to the rule is not to deprive the judgment debtor transferee of all relief but to impose upon him the duty of proceeding by what was considered a more appropriate procedure that is a suit for contribution (o) The provision of this rule cannot be evaded by the judgment debtor who satisfies the decree taking a transfer of the decree in the name of a benamidar (p)

Next as regards transfer of a portion of a joint decree —Where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons and the interest of any decree holder in such decree has been transferred by assignment or by operation of law to one of several judgment debtors the decree is extinguished to the extent of the interest so transferred, and execution can only issue for the rest of the decree

Decree for the payment of money —The expression decree for the payment of money in the second proviso to the rule does not include mortgage decrees (q) Such a decree is not a decree for the payment of money until a personal decree is passed against the mortgagor (r)

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that the expression decree for the payment of money against two or more persons means a personal decree for the payment of money against two or more defendants Hence the proviso does not apply where the decree is not against the defendants personally A obtains a decree against B as the legal representative of X and against C as the legal representative of Y for Rs 20 000 to be paid out of the estate of X and Y A dies leaving B as his heir and on his death the decree passes to him by operation of law The decree not being a personal decree against B and C B is entitled as transferee of A's decree to have the decree executed against the estate of Y (s) The High Court of Madras has dissented from this view According to that Court the fact that one of the defendants is directed by the decree to pay the amount of the decree out of the family property in his hands does not make the decree any the less a decree for payment of money against him (t)

Again the expression decree for the payment of money against two or more persons means a decree against two or more persons jointly Hence the rule laid down in the second proviso does not apply where the decree is not passed against the defendants jointly In a suit by A against B and C A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 90 and against C for Rs 30 A then assigns the decree to C The decree not being a joint decree C may execute the decree passed against B for Rs 90 (u)

decree holder applies for execution and pending execution assigns his interest in the decree an application by the transferee for execution is not a fresh application for execution but one to continue the pending execution proceedings and no notice under this rule is necessary (u) But quaere whether the judgment debtor is not entitled to object to the validity of the assignment It has already been stated that the legal representative of a decree holder cannot be substituted on the record of the execution proceeding but must make an application for execution under rule 16 (x) Under the Code of 1882 the definition of decree holder included a person to whom a decree is transferred whether by assignment or by operation of law and it was possible to hold that he could come in immediately to carry on a pending proceeding (y) Under the present Code the position is different and the transferee does not acquire the status of a decree holder until an order for execution is made in his favour [sec 2 (3)] The dictum in Akhoy v Surendra ( ) that the heirs could have applied immediately to carry on proceedings is perhaps an echo of decisions under the old Code In Muthu Chettiar v Lodd Govindas (a) section 146 was referred to But as that section begins with the words save as otherwise provided it is excluded by O 21 r 16 It is submitted that the conclusion arrived at in Palaniappa v Valliammai (b) is correct and that the transferee in a pending execution if he applies at all must apply for execution and not for substitution

Appeal—An order determining any question between the judgment debtor and the representative of the decree holder (s 47) is a decree (s 2) and is therefore appealable as such (s 96) A transferee of a decree is a representative of the decree holder within the meaning of s 47 Therefore an order refusing to recognize the transferee of a decree or dismissing his application for execution on the objection of the judgment debtor is a decree and appealable as such (c)

Suit by transferee—A transferee of a decree whose application is rejected under this rule on the ground that the transfer is not valid is not precluded from instituting a regular suit for a declaration of the validity of the transfer Such a suit is not barred by the provisions of s 47 (d)

Equities enforceable against original decree holder—See s 49 and notes thereto

Transfer of decree against a company in liquidation—Where a decree against a company in liquidation is transferred pending the winding up proceedings and the liquidator refuses to recognize the transferee the transferee may apply to the executing Court under s 47 (3) to be substituted for the original decree holder to enable him to prove his claim before the liquidator S 171 of the Indian Companies Act 1913 is no bar to the granting of such an application (e)

17 [S 245] (1) On receiving an application for the execution of a decree as provided by rule 11, sub rule (2), the Court shall ascertain whether such of the requirements of rules 11 to 14 as may be applicable to the case have been complied with and, if they have not been complied with, the Court may reject the application, or may allow the defect to be remedied then and there or within a time to be fixed by it

Procedure on receiving application for execution of decree

Provided that in the case of a decree for the payment of money, the value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be correspond with the amount due under the decree

Changes in the law—This rule corresponds with s 245 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

1 The words "may allow the defect to be remedied" in sub rule (1) have been substituted for the words "may allow it [application] to be remedied" as being more comprehensive and covering the case of omission to produce a copy of the decree as now required by r 11 (3)

2 Sub rule (2) is new See notes below "Sub rule (2) limitation."

Sub rule (1)—This rule lays down the procedure to be adopted by the Courts on receiving an application for execution Sub r (1) empowers the Court to reject the application or allow an amendment The Court should in each case exercise its discretion and where an amendment ought to be allowed it should allow the amendment (g) Thus where an application is not signed it should not reject the application, but allow it to be amended (h) The amendment may be allowed even after the application for execution is registered provided the execution of the decree has not at the date of the application for amendment become barred by limitation (i) But the High Court of Madras has held that where an application for amendment is made after the expiration of 12 years provided by s 48 the Court has a discretion either to accept or to reject it (j)

Sub rule (2) limitation—Article 182 of the Limitation Act provides inter alia that the first application for execution must be made within three years from the date of the decree If the decree has not been executed and it is necessary to make further application each successive application must be made within three years from the date of the last application But the last application in each case must have been one in accordance with law otherwise it will not be a fresh starting point for limitation An application which does not comply with the requirements of rules 11 to 14 of this order is not one in accordance with law (k) Sub rule (2) is therefore important with reference to limitation for if an application is defective with reference to rules 11 to 14 and is returned for amendment within a fixed time it will when so amended be an application in accordance with law as from the date when it was first presented Under the old section it was held that where an order was made for amending an application for execution and the amendment was made the application should be deemed to have been presented not on the date when it was first presented but on the date when it was amended The result was that if the amendment was not made until after the expiration of the period of limitation the application was time barred though the amendment was made within the time fixed by the Court (l) Those decisions are no longer law Compare s 149 On the other hand substantial compliance with rules 11 to 14 is all that is necessary and if the application does so comply with these rules it will be in accordance with law and will be effectual to stay the progress of limitation whether the Court admits or rejects or returns it for amendment (m) Sub r (2) applies only if the application is returned for amendment for non-compliance with the provisions of rr 11 to 14 and the application is subsequently amended Sub r (2) does not in terms apply to cases where an application is returned for amendment for some other reason (n)

18 18 [S 246] (1) Where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross decrees in separate suits for the payment of two sums of money passed between the same parties and capable of execution at the same time by such Court, then—

Execution in case of cross decrees

(a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction shall be entered upon both decrees, and

(b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the holder of the decree for the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered on the decree for the larger sum as well as satisfaction on the decree for the smaller sum

(2) This rule shall be deemed to apply where either party is an assignee of one of the decrees and as well in respect of judgment debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment debts due by the assignee himself

(3) This rule shall not be deemed to apply unless—

(a) the decree holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits, and

(b) the sums due under the decrees are definite

(4) The holder of a decree passed against several persons jointly and severally may treat it as a cross decree in relation to a decree passed against him singly in favour of one or more of such persons

(d) A B C D and E are jointly and severally liable for Rs 1 000 under a decree obtained by F A obtains a decree for Rs 100 against F singly and applies for execution to the Court in which the joint decree is being executed F may treat his joint decree as a cross decree under this rule

Changes in the law —

1 The words where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross decree in sub rule (1) are new They give effect to certain decisions noted below under the head Application of the rule

2 The words separate suits in sub rule (1) are new They have been added to show that for the purposes of execution a counter claim is not a separate suit (p)

3 Sub rule (4) and the illustration thereto that is ill (d) are both new This sub rule gives effect to the decisions noted under the head Sub rule (4)

Application of the rule —The meaning of sub rule (1) may be explained by the following illustration A holds a decree against B for Rs 5 000 B holds a decree against A for Rs 3 000 A and B each applies for execution of his decree to Court X which has jurisdiction to execute both decrees The decrees being cross decrees they will be set off against each other Hence B who is the holder of the decree for the smaller amount will not be allowed to take out execution of his decree Execution will only be allowed of A s decree to the extent of Rs 2 000 being the difference between the amount of his and B s decree If the decree held by B was also for Rs 5 000 neither party should be allowed to take out execution and satisfaction should be entered upon both decrees

This rule does not apply unless—

(1) the cross decrees are for the payment of two sums of money

(2) the decrees have been obtained in separate suits [see notes above under the head Alterations in the rule]

(3) both the decrees are capable of execution at the same time [ill (1)] and by the same Court and

(4) the decree holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been passed is the judgment debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both the suits [ills (b) and (c)]

If the cross decrees fulfil the above conditions it is also necessary that both decrees should be before the executing Court for execution and that applications should have been made for execution of both decrees If either decree holder omits to apply for execution of his decree the other decree holder may take out execution of his decree for its full amount (q) Note the words with which the rule begins

Cross decrees in separate suits —An order for payment of mesne profits made under s 144 is a decree by virtue of s 2 (2) Hence it has been held that there is no distinction for the purposes of this rule between a decree in a suit and a decree in a proceeding under s 144 A obtains a decree against B In execution of the decree B s property is sold and it is purchased by A The decree is reversed in appeal and A is directed to deliver possession of the property to B and to pay to B Rs 712 for mesne profits B applies for execution against A in respect of Rs 714 A claims to set off another decree obtained by him against B The set off may be allowed under this rule (r)

8 Cross decrees for the payment of two sums of money —I s e B on a mortgage and obtains a decree for Rs 1 800 to be realized by sale of the mortgaged property B obtains a decree against A for Rs 2 000 Here A s decree though it is one for sale in enforcement of a mortgage and not strictly for the payment of money may be set off against B s decree by virtue of the provisions of r 20 of this order (s).

Where execution is taken out for the smaller sum —This rule provides that where application are made for the execution of cross decrees one for a larger amount and the other for a smaller amount execution should be taken out only for the difference This mean that the decree for the smaller amount cannot be executed at all and no separate execution should is ue of that decree (t) It is to be noted however that if the Court in contravention of the provisions of this rule allows execution to issue of the decree for the smaller sum and a sale is made in such execution the sale is not void the reason being that a purchaser under a sale in execution is not bound to inquire whether the judgment debtor had a cross judgment of a higher amount (u).

Same character in both suits —The provisions of this rule do not apply unless the decree holder in one suit is the judgment debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits A holds a money decree against B B holds a decree for sale passed in a suit brought by him as mortgagee against C the mortgagor and against A a purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property from C A applies for execution of his decree against B B is not entitled to set off his decree against A s decree The reason is that A does not fill the same character in both the suits The decree held by A is in his favour personally which he may execute against B by the arrest of his per on or the attachment of his property This cannot be said of B s decree against A for B is not ordered by the decree personally to pay any sum of money but is only given an option to pay if he wishes to save the property in which he is interested (v) If in the ca e put above C the mortgagor was the holder of the money decree against B instead of A and C applied for execution against B B (the mortgagee) could have set off his decree again t C (w) But a firm name is only a description of the individual partner and so a decree against a firm can be et off against a decree again t a partner (x)

Assignment of decree —If A who has obtained a decree against B attaches in execution of his decree a decree held by B against C A is an assignee of B s decree within the meaning of this rule (y) [See O 21 r 53 (3)] It has been held by the H n Court of Calcutta that a decree obtained against the assignor in a suit pending at the date of the assignment may be set off against the decree assigned if the assignee had notice of such suit ( ) A obtains a decree again t B for Rs 5 000 B then sues A for Rs 2 000 Pending B s suit C obtains a transfer of A s dec ree with notice of the suit A decree is then passed for B in his suit against A C applies for execution against B of the whole decree for Rs 5 000 He is not entitled to execute for more than Rs. 2 000 as the transf r was taken with notice of B s suit See notes to s 49

Sub rule (4) —This sub rule gives effect to the decisions in the undermentioned cases where it was held that the holder of a decree passed jointly and severally against several judgment debtors one of whom holds a decree against such decree holder may treat his joint decree as a cross decree (a) See ill (1) to the sub rule

19 [S 247] Where application is made to a Court for the execution of a decree under which two parties are entitled to recover sums of money from each other, then,—

Execution in case of cross claims under same decree

(a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction for both shall be entered upon the decree, and,

(b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the party entitled to the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered upon the decree

Object of the rule—The object of this rule is to prevent each side executing a decree in respect of sums due whether for costs or otherwise under the same decree (b)

Application of the rule—This rule is not limited in its application to cases in which the remedy of each party against the other is of precisely the same nature A a mortgagor sues B the mortgagee for redemption A decree is passed in the suit ordering that upon A paying to B Rs 1 000 (mortgage debt) on a day fixed by the Court B should reconvey the mortgaged property to A and that if such payment is not made within the time fixed by the Court the property should be sold. At the same time A is awarded costs Rs 100 to be paid by B Here both the sums being payable under the same decree the provisions of the present rule apply though B s remedy if A failed to pay the mortgage debt would be by sale of the mortgaged property and A s remedy if B failed to pay the costs would be against B personally Hence A being entitled to the smaller amount (Rs 100) cannot take out execution against B (c) B being entitled to the larger amount (Rs 1 000) is alone entitled to take out execution But he cannot take out execution for more than Rs 900 which is the same thing as saying that he must reconvey the property to A if A paid Rs 900 and he cannot insist on payment of the full sum of Rs 1 000 as a condition of reconveyance (d) The point to be noted is that in the case of cross claims under the same decree execution may be taken out only by the party entitled to the larger sum The party entitled to the smaller sum is not entitled to take out execution It follows from this that if A is entitled to recover from B mesne profits amounting to Rs 445 under a decree and B is entitled to recover from A under the same decree costs amounting to Rs 855 A being entitled to the smaller sum cannot take out execution against B though B s claim to execute his decree for costs is barred by limitation (e) It may also be noted that if the party entitled to the larger sum executed the decree for the full amount without deducting the smaller sum the party entitled to the smaller sum may be awarded a refund of that sum under s 151 of the Code (f)

Simultaneous execution

21 [S 230 2nd para] The Court may, in its discretion, refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor

Simultaneous execution against person and property—An order refusing execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor amounts to a decree under s 2 cl (2) read with s 47 and it is therefore appealable (h)

But though the Court has a discretion to refuse simultaneous execution it cannot decline to order execution against the person of the judgment debtor on the ground that the decree holder should proceed in the first place against his property (i)

Notice to show cause against execution in certain cases

22 [S 248] (1) Where an application for execution is made—

(b) against the legal representative of a party to the decree,

the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice to the person against whom execution is applied for requiring him to show cause on a date to be fixed why the decree should not be executed against him

Provided that no such notice shall be necessary in consequence of more than one year having elapsed between the date of the decree and the application for execution if the application is made within one year from the date of the last order against the party against whom execution is applied for, made on any previous application for execution, or in consequence of the application being made against the legal representative of the judgment-debtor, if upon a previous application for execution against the same person the Court has ordered execution to issue against him

Changes in the law —Sub rule (2) is new See note below Sub rule (2)

The Court shall issue a notice —It is not enough merely to take out a notice The notice must be served upon the judgment debtor or upon his legal representative (j)

Omission to give notice —This rule provides that except where notice is dispensed with under sub r (2) the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice to the person against whom execution is applied for if the application for execution is made more than one year after the date of the decree or if it is made against the legal representative of the judgment debtor This gives rise to the question whether the omission to give notice as required by this rule renders a sale in execution of the decree absolutely void for want of jurisdiction or whether the omission is a mere irregularity so as to render the sale merely voidable that is valid until it is set aside In Gopal Chunder v Gunamoni Dasi (k) the High Court of Calcutta held that a notice under this rule is necessary in order that the Court should obtain jurisdiction to sell the property by way of execution and that the omission to give notice is by itself sufficient to render the sale void This decision was approved by the Privy Council in Raghunath Das v Sunder Das (l) In Raghunath Das's case the judgment debtor became insolvent pending the attachment No notice was given to the Official Assignee as required by cl (b) of sub r (1) and it was held that the sale was a nullity Since the notice under this rule affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction it follows that where execution is issued without previously issuing a notice required under sub rule (1) and property belonging to the judgment debtor is sold in execution the sale is a nullity whether the property is purchased by the decree holder [O 21 r 72] (m) or by a third party (n) It makes no difference whether the property sold is movable or immovable (o) The Patna High Court has held that where a notice has been issued and the judgment debtor though not served with the notice appears and contests the execution the object of the rule is achieved and the Court has jurisdiction to hold the sale (p)

Notice to wrong person as legal representative —The principle laid down in Raghunath Das's case applies where no notice is given But what if notice is given and served upon a person who proves not to be the legal representative The leading case upon the subject is Mallarjun v Narhari (q) A decree was passed against a person who afterwards died and in executing the decree against his estate a person was served as his legal representative with notice under this rule The person served objected

22 that he was not the legal representative of the deceased The executing Court decided and as it turned out subsequently decided erroneously that he was to be treated as such representative [see s 47] After that the execution proceedings went on with the result that certain property belonging to the deceased judgment debtor was sold and purchased by a third party The question arose whether the sale was void as made without jurisdiction or whether it was merely voidable Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that a notice having been served in fact though upon a wrong person, the Court had jurisdiction to sell the property and the sale was not void Their Lordships further held that the omission to give notice to the right person constituted a serious irregularity and that the sale was therefore voidable that is to say it was valid until it was set aside under O 21 r 90 or by independent suit brought within a year as provided by art 12 cl (a) of the Limitation Act Their Lordships said He (the person served) contended that he was not the right person but the Court having received his protest decided that he was the right person and so proceeded with the execution In doing so the Court was exercising its jurisdiction It made a sad mistake it is true but a Court has jurisdiction to decide wrong as well as right (r) But if the decree holder knows who the legal representative of the deceased judgment debtor is and deliberately serves the notice upon a wrong person as his legal representative and there is no adjudication by the executing Court as to who the legal representative is the sale has been held to be absolutely void (s)

More than one year after the date of the decree—The term decree in sub r (1) cl (a) means the decree capable of execution Thus where an appeal is preferred from a decree and the appeal is dismissed for default under O 41 r 11 the decree of the lower Court is the decree capable of execution and the period of one year is to be calculated from the date of that decree (t) See notes to s 36 What decree may be executed Even where the decretal amount is made payable by instalment the period of one year must be calculated from the date of the decree and not from the date of default (u)

More than one notice—In one case the High Court of Patna held that once the original decree has been put into execution after notice as provided by this rule no fresh notice need be served for every subsequent application for execution made more than one year from the date of the last order for execution (v) but this case was overruled by a Special Bench of the same High Court where it was held that the rule applies to every application for execution and not merely to the first application and that in every case where an application for execution is made more than a year after the last order made against the judgment debtor in any previous application a fresh notice must be served (w)

The High Court of Madras has held that where property is attached on an application for execution no notice need be given to the judgment debtor of the application for sale though the latter application is made more than a year after the previous application for execution (x)

Irregular service of notice—Irregularity in the service of notice as distinguished from non service is a material irregularity within the meaning of O 21 r 90 (y)

Death of judgment debtor pending execution by transferee Court—See O 2 notes to s 50

Court executing the decree —It may either be the Court which passed the decree or the Court to which the decree is sent for execution

Sub rule (2) —This sub rule is new It enables the Court to issue execution without issuing a notice as provided by sub rule (1) in cases where the issue of a notice may involve an unreasonable delay or defeat the ends of justice Where the Court dispenses with notice under sub rule (1) it should record its reasons (z) In a recent Madras case it was said that the omission to record the reasons is a mere irregularity (a)

Limitation to set aside sale for want of notice—An application to set aside a sale which is void e g for want of notice under this rule is governed by art 181 and not art 166 of Sch I of the Limitation Act (b)

Appeal—An application to set aside a sale held without notice as required by sub r (1) falls within s 47 and hence a second appeal lies (c)

Decree against two or more persons jointly—Art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 applies to decrees of Courts oth r than Chartered High Courts Under Explanat on 1 to that article when a decree has been passed jointly against more person than one an application for execution of the decree if made against any one or more of them shall take effect against them all Therefore an order of revivor of a joint decree made under this rule against one or more of the judgment debtors will operate against the other judgment debtors though no notice has been given to them No such Explanation is appended to art 183 which applies to decrees of Chartered High Courts Therefore if a joint decree is passed by a Chartered High Court an order of revivor of such decree made against one of several judgment debtors does not operate against other judgment debtors to whom no notice is given under this rule (d)

Notice under this rule and limitation —One of the starting points for limitation under art 18- of the Limitation Act 1908 for the execution of decrees of Courts other than Charter d High Courts is the date of i sue of notice under this rule The High Court of Calcutta has held that the date of issue of notice means the date when the notice is actually issued and not the date when the Court passes the order for i suing the notice (e) On the other hand the High Courts of Bombay and Allahabad have held that the date of issue of notice means the date when the Court passes the order for i suing the notice and not the date on which the notice is actually issued (f) According to the High Court of Bombay if no notice has been issued a mere order for i suing a notice will not give a fresh starting point for limitation (g) It is not however neces ary that the notice shoul l have been actually served (h)

Art 183 of the Limitation Act which applies to decrees of Chartered High Courts provides inter alia that a decree of such Court can be enforced within twelve years from its date unless the decree has been revive l The High Court of Calcutta has held that an order for execution operates as a revivor within the meaning of this article (i) but mere issue an l service of a notice under this rule does not (j)

23 [S 249] (1) Where the person to whom notice is issued under the last preceding rule does not appear or does not show cause to the satisfaction of the Court why the decree should not be executed, the Court shall order the decree to be executed

Procedure after issue of notice

(2) Where such person offers any objection to the execution of the decree, the Court shall consider such objection and make such order as it thinks fit

24 [Ss 250 251] (1) When the preliminary measures (if any) required by the foregoing rules have been taken, the Court shall, unless it sees cause to the contrary, issue its process for the execution of the decree

Process for execution

(2) Every such process shall bear date, the day on which it is issued, and shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as the Court may appoint in this behalf, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court and delivered to the proper officer to be executed

(3) In every such process a day shall be specified on or before which it shall be executed

Unless it sees cause to the contrary—See notes to O 21 r 37 under the head Whether an executing Court has discretion to refuse or suspend attachment of judgment debtor s property

Delegation of authority to execute—The officer to whom a warrant is delivered for execution under this rule may deliver it to his subordinate for execution It is not necessary that the proper officer should himself execute all warrants sent to him (k) But a warrant addressed to the peon of a Court cannot be executed by a Naib (l)

Arrest without warrant—Where an officer of the Court arrests a judgment debtor without having the warrant in his possession at the time of arrest the arrest is illegal (m)

Shall be sealed—The provisions of this rule being mandatory the omission of the Court s seal on the warrant renders the attachment illegal (n)

Specification of day on or before which warrant should be executed—The warrant should specify the date on or before which it is to be executed Resistance to the execution of a warrant which does not specify such date is not illegal (o) Moreover a warrant cannot be executed after the expiration of the date specified in the warrant

Alterations in the rule—The words "or for the recovery of a wife" which occurred in the corresponding sec 259 of the Code of 1882 after the words "share in a specific movable" have been omitted for there can be no decree under the law for the recovery of a wife as a wife cannot be treated as a chattel to be delivered over to the husband Where any third person prevents the wife from returning to her husband the latter may obtain an injunction against him which may be enforced in case of disobedience either by the imprisonment of the defendant or by the attachment of his property or by both under r 32

Decree for specific movable property—Where a decree directs recovery of specific movable property and for payment of the price thereof if the property be not delivered the decree holder is not entitled to execute the money part of the decree before applying for delivery of the property (a) As to the cases in which a decree may be passed for the delivery of specific movable property see Specific Relief Act I of 1877 s 11

Rule when not applicable—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that this rule does not apply where the property sought to be attached is not in the possession of the judgment debtor (b)

Decree for specific performance for restitution of conjugal right or for an injunction

32 [S 260 R S C, O 42, r 30] (1) Where the party against whom a decree for the specific performance of a contract, or for restitution of conjugal rights, or for an injunction, has been passed, has had an opportunity of obeying the decree and has wilfully failed to obey it, the decree may be enforced in the case of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights by the attachment of his property or, in the case of a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction (c) by his detention in the civil prison, or by the attachment of his property or by both

(2) Where the party against whom a decree for specific performance or for an injunction has been passed is a corporation the decree may be enforced by the attachment of the property of the corporation or, with the leave of the Court, by the detention in the civil prison of the directors or other principal officers thereof, or by both attachment and detention

(3) Where any attachment under sub rule (1) or sub rule (2) has remained in force for one year if the judgment debtor has not obeyed the decree and the decree holder has applied to have the attached property sold, such property may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the decree holder such compensation as he thinks fit, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the judgment debtor on his application

(4) Where the judgment debtor has obeyed the decree and paid all costs of executing the same which he is bound to pay, or where, at the end of the one year from the date of the attachment no application to have the property sold has been made, or if made has been refused, the attachment shall cease

(5) Where a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction has not been obeyed, the Court may, in lieu of or in addition to all or any of the processes aforesaid, direct that the act required to be done may be done so far as practicable by the decree holder or some other person appointed by the Court at the cost of the judgment debtor, and upon the act being done the expenses incurred may be ascertained in such manner as the Court may direct and may be recovered as if they were included in the decree

Illustration

A a person of little substance erects a building which renders uninhabitable a family mansion belonging to B A in spite of his detention in prison and the attachment of his property declines to obey a decree obtained against him by B and directing him to remove the building The Court is of opinion that no sum realizable by the sale of A s property would adequately compensate B for the depreciation in the value of his mansion B may apply to the Court to remove the building and may recover the cost of such removal from A in the execution proceeding

Alterations in the rule—Sub rules (2) and (5) are new See notes below under the head Sub rule (5)

The words or for an order requiring the performance of or abstention from any other particular act which occurred in s 260 of the Code of 1882 have been omitted and in lieu thereof the words or for an injunction have been substituted See notes below under the head Sub rule (1) decree for injunction

Specific performance—As to specific performance of contract see Specific Relief Act I of 1877 ss 12 30

Injunction—As to perpetual injunctions see Specific Relief Act I of 1877 ss 54 57

Restitution of conjugal rights—The words italicized in sub rule (1) were added by Act 29 of 1923 Having regard to those words a decree for restitution of conjugal rights can no longer be enforced by detention in the civil prison whether it be against a husband or a wife As to decree against a husband see also r 33 below

Sub rule (1) decree for injunction—Sub rule (1) applies to both prohibitory and mandatory injunctions (d) Where an injunction has been granted on each successive breach of it the decree may be enforced under this rule by an application made within three years of such breach under art 181 of the Limitation Act (e) A separate suit to enforce the injunction is barred by the provisions of s 47 (f) If the decree is enforced by the imprisonment of the defendant the period of imprisonment should not at any one time exceed six months see s 58

Where a woman who had been directed by a decree to refrain from preventing her daughter returning to her husband, permitted the daughter who was of age to reside in her house it was held that such conduct did not constitute a breach of the direction under the decree so as to render it punishable under this rule (g)

It was held under the old section that an order directing a defendant to render accounts within a specified time was an order requiring the performance of a particular act within the meaning of that section and that disobedience to the order was punishable under that section (h) The words performance of or abstention from any other particular act which occurred in the old section were held to have a very wide general meaning and they have been omitted from this rule and for it the word injunction has been substituted. Hence disobedience to an order directing a party to render accounts can no longer be punished under this rule as such an order cannot be said to be an injunction within the meaning of this rule (i)

Opportunity of obeying the decree—All that the Court has to see before directing execution to issue under this rule is whether the party bound by the decree has had an opportunity of obeying the decree or injunction and has wilfully failed to obey it If the party has had the opportunity and has wilfully failed to obey the decree the Court may order execution to issue under this rule without giving him any further opportunity and it is not obligatory upon the Court in such a case to serve a notice upon the party calling upon him to obey the decree or injunction (j)

Where an application is made under this rule but the party bound by the decree has had no opportunity of obeying the decree the application will be dismissed But the dismissal of the application is no bar to another application made after an opportunity has been afforded to the party of obeying the decree Thus if a decree is made directing the defendant to deliver certain articles necessary for the performance of the duties of priest in a temple to the plaintiff the plaintiff is not entitled to execute the decree under this rule unless it is proved that he went to the temple after notice to the defendant to receive the articles from him (and thereby afforded an opportunity to the defendant to comply with the decree) and that the defendant failed to deliver the articles If such an opportunity has not been afforded the plaintiff s application will be dismissed but its dismissal will be no bar to a subsequent application after such opportunity has been afforded (k)

Party against whom a decree for injunction has been passed — See notes to s 50 Decree for injunction.

Sub rule (5)—This sub rule is new It corresponds to O 42 r 30 of the English Rules In the absence of any provision in the old section similar to the one contained in this sub rule it was held that where a decree directed the defendant to remove an obstruction such as pulling down a wall or opening a path way and the defendant failed to obey the decree it was not competent to the Court to depute any of its officers to remove the obstruction as that was not one of the modes of execution sanctioned under that section (l) Under the present rule the Court may direct the act to be done so far as practicable by the decree holder or some other person appointed by the Court (m) But the Court has no power under this rule to order the police to see that its decree is carried out Thus where a d cree is passed declaring the plaintiff s right to perform certain ceremonies in a temple and restraining the defendant from obstructing the plaintiffs from performing the ceremonies the Court has no power under this rule to order the police to see that the plaintiffs performed the ceremonies without interference on the part of the defendants (n)

The expression "the act required to be done" means what has to be done to enforce the injunction (o) Hence if a defendant is directed by a decree to demolish a certain wall and the wall is demolished he cannot in execution proceedings be directed to remove a new wall built after the date of the decree in a different place The plaintiff's remedy in respect of the new wall is to file a fresh suit against the defendant (p) In a recent Calcutta case (q) Richardson J expressed the opinion that sub r (5) applied to prohibitory as well as mandatory injunctions

Discretion of Court in executing decrees for restitution of conjugal rights

33 [New] (1) Notwithstanding anything in rule 32, the Court, either at the time of passing a decree against a husband for the restitution of conjugal rights or at any time afterwards, may order that the decree shall be executed in the manner provided in this rule

(2) Where the Court has made an order under sub-rule (1), it may order that, in the event of the decree not being obeyed within such period as may be fixed in this behalf, the judgment debtor shall make to the decree holder such periodical payments as may be just, and, if it thinks fit, require that the judgment debtor shall, to its satisfaction, secure to the decree holder such periodical payments

(3) The Court may from time to time vary or modify any order made under sub rule (2) for the periodical payment of money, either by altering the times of payment or by increasing or diminishing the amount, or may temporarily suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again revive the same, either wholly or in part as it may think just

(4) Any money ordered to be paid under this rule may be recovered as though it were payable under a decree for the payment of money

Compare the Matrimonial Causes Act 1884 (47 and 48 Vict c 68)

Amendment of the rule—The italicized words in sub rule (1) were added by Act 29 of 1923 The words "and the decree holder is the wife" which occurred in sub rule (2) after the words "under sub rule (1)" were omitted by the same Act. The effect of this omission is that the present rule applies to a decree for restitution of conjugal rights passed against a husband The words "shall be executed in the manner provided in this rule" in sub r (1) have been substituted for the words "shall not be executed by

5 Resistance to delivery of possession to decree holder—Where the holder of a decree for the possession of immovable property is resisted or obstructed by any person in obtaining possession of the property the procedure to be followed is that prescribed by rr 97 103 of this order

Actual and formal possession—The possession referred to in sub rules (1) and (3) is khas or actual possession while that referred to in sub r (2) and r 36 below is formal or symbolical possession. Formal or symbolical possession is delivered by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property and proclaiming by beat of drum or other customary mode at some convenient place the substance of the decree.

Rules 35 and 36 refer to cases where a suit is brought for possession of immovable property and a decree is passed in the suit for the delivery of the property to the decree holder Rules 95 and 96 refer to cases where immovable property belonging to a judgment debtor is sold in execution of a decree passed against him and possession of the property is sought by the auction purchaser In both cases the possession may be either actual or symbolical. If the immovable property of which possession is directed by the decree to be delivered to the decree holder is in the possession of the judgment debtor actual possession must be delivered to the decree holder under r 35 (1) Where it is in the possession of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same only symbolical possession can be delivered, and that is to be done under r 36 Likewise where immovable property is sold in execution of a decree and possession is sought by the auction purchaser actual possession must be delivered to him under r 95 if the property is in the possession of the judgment debtor But if the property is in the possession of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same only symbolical possession can be delivered and that is to be done under r 96

There are thus three cases in which the law allows symbolical possession to be given namely the cases contemplated by sub rule (2) of the present rule by r 36 and by r 96 of this Order Symbolical possession given in such cases operates as actual possession against the judgment debtor but not against third persons who were not parties to the decree (y) In other words symbolical possession is no possession at all as against third parties. This distinction is of great importance in the law of limitation. The rule to be deduced from the cases on the subject is that where in execution of a decree symbolical possession is delivered of immovable property to the person entitled to possession thereof and such person subsequently institutes a suit for actual possession, the symbolical possession is to be treated as actual possession where the suit is against the judgment-debtor or his representatives and the period of 12 years allowed for such a suit is to be calculated not from the date of sale but from the date of the subsequent dispossession [ill (2)] But where a suit for actual possession is instituted against a third party claiming to be in possession of the property adversely to the judgment-debtor no account is taken of the symbolical possession of the plaintiff in determining the period of limitation and the period of 12 years is to be calculated, not from the date on which symbolical possession was delivered to the plaintiff but from the date on which the possession of such third party became adverse as against the judgment-debtor [ill. (1)].

operty adversely to D for 10 years prior to the date on which A is placed in symbolical possession C continues to be in possession of the property as before After three years sues C for possession The defence is that C has been in adverse possession for more than twelve years and the suit is therefore barred under art 144 of the Limitation Act contends that his symbolical possession operated to break the continuity of the adverse possession of C and that the period of twelve years allowed by art 144 for a suit for possession should be calculated from the date on which symbolical possession was delivered to him The suit is barred for A s possession being merely symbolical did not operate at all as possession as against C who was not a party to the suit and it could not therefore break the continuity of C s possession (z) In other words delivery of symbolical possession to A did not amount to a dispossession of C

(2) A obtains a decree against B for possession of certain immovable property the property being in the occupancy of B s tenants symbolical possession is delivered to under r 36 Subsequently B dispossesses A by receiving the rents and profits A thereupon sues B for actual possession The period of limitation for such a suit is twelve years from the date of dispossession (a) The same principles apply where a person is placed in symbolical possession under sub rule (2) of this rule in cases where the decree is one for joint possession and also where he is placed in symbolical possession under r 96 of this Order (b)

Note—It will be observed that in ill (2) the suit is against the judgment debtor and in ill (1) it is against a third person who was not a party to the suit Symbolical possession operates as actual possession against the judgment debtor that being the only means by which as between the parties the order of the Court can be effectively carried out But it does not operate as actual possession against third persons who were not parties to the suit and the reason for this is very plain. A suit might be brought and a decree obtained by a person who has neither title nor possession against another person who has neither title nor possession and if the delivery of symbolical possession in such a suit were to constitute actual possession as against the true owner who had been in actual possession for many years and who was no party to the suit it would operate most unjustly (c)

It has already been stated that where a judgment debtor himself is in possession actual possession must be delivered to the person entitled to possession under sub r (1) of this rule or under r 95 as the case may be If symbolical possession is delivered in a case where actual possession ought to have been delivered the question arises whether it will operate as actual possession against the judgment debtor? It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that it does The delivery of symbolical possession even erroneously is not a nullity and it operates as actual possession against the judgment-debtor and his representatives for it is said that after all it is possession obtained through an officer of the Court and by process of law and the judgment debtor must be taken to be a party to the proceeding relating to the taking of possession. From this point of view a suit for actual possession may be brought at any time within 12 years from the date on which symbolical possession is given (d) On the other hand a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that symbolical possession given in circumstances in which actual possession ought to have been given is a nullity and the period of limitation for a suit for actual possession is 12 years from the date of sale The reason given by the High

Court of Bombay is that symbolical possession is not actual possession nor is it equivalent to actual possession except where the Code expressly or by implication provides that it shall have that effect and there is no section of the Code which provides that where symbolical possession is given in a case in which actual possession ought to have been given such possession should be treated as equivalent to actual possession (e) The High Court of Allahabad has taken the same view as the Bombay High Court (f) In an earlier case (g) the Madras High Court took the same view as the High Court of Calcutta but in later ca s it has followed the Bombay ruling (h)

Discretionary power to permit judgment debtor to show cause against detention in prison

(2) Where appearance is not made in obedience to the notice, the Court shall if the decree holder so requires, issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment debtor

Discretionary power to issue notice under this rule—When a decree is for the payment of money and execution is applied for against the person of the judgment debtor the Court may issue a notice to the judgment debtor calling upon him to show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison in execution of the decree As to the procedure to be followed when the judgment debtor appears in pursuance of the notice see r 40 below

(c) any undue preference given by the judgment debtor to any of his other creditors ,

(d) refusal or neglect on the part of the judgment-debtor to pay the amount of the decree or some part thereof when he has, or since the date of the decree has had, the means of paying it,

(e) the likelihood of the judgment debtor absconding or leaving the jurisdiction of the Court with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree holder in the execution of the decree

(3) While any of the matters mentioned in sub rule (2) are being considered, the Court may, in its discretion, order the judgment debtor to be detained in the civil prison, or leave him in the custody of an officer of the Court, or release him on his furnishing security, to the satisfaction of the Court, for his appearance when required by the Court

(4) A judgment debtor released under this rule may be re arrested

(5) Where the Court does not make an order under sub rule (1), it shall cause the judgment debtor to be arrested if he has not already been arrested and, subject to the other provisions of this Code, commit him to the civil prison

Sub rule (1) Unable to pay—Where a decree is passed against A B and C and the Court is satisfied that A is unable to pay and that B and C each possess property which may be realized by the decree holder in execution of the decree the Court may reject an application made by the decree holder for the arrest of A (n)

Sub rule (3)—The security should not be personal security (o)

Appeal—An order rejecting an application for the arrest of a judgment debtor falls within s 47 and is appealable as a decree (p)

Object of the rule—The object of this rule is to obtain discovery for purposes of execution to avoid unnecessary trouble in obtaining satisfaction of money decrees It is a useful rule but orders for discovery may operate harshly against the party directed to give discovery and must not be lightly made (q)

Any and what other property—This refers to property which is liable to attachment and sale under the decree against the judgment debtor Property of a judgment debtor which he has mortgaged is prima facie liable to be seized in execution of a decree against him and the fact that he has mortgaged it will not prevent its being attached and sold in execution of the decree subject to the mortgage debt (see s 73) If the mortgagee claims that he is in possession as mortgagee he may be examined under this rule (r) See note to r 62 below

What property may not be attached—See s 60

42 [S 2ɔɔ] Where a decree directs an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits or any other matter, the property of the judgment debtor may, before the amount due from him has been ascertained, be attached, as in the case of an ordinary decree for the payment of money

Attachment in case of decree for rent or mesne profits or other matter amount of which to be subsequently determined

Attachment under a preliminary decree—In a suit by A against B for the recovery of possession of immovable property and for mesne profits a preliminary decree is passed against B for the delivery of the property to A and an inquiry is directed as to the mesne profits due by B to A B delivers possession of the property to A Subsequently while the inquiry as to mesne profits is still pending A applies for attachment of certain property belonging to B The attachment may be allowed under this rule (s) See O 20 r 12

43 [S 269] Where the property to be attached is movable property, other than agricultural produce, in the possession of the judgment debtor the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the attaching officer shall keep the property in his own custody or in the custody of one of his subordinates, and shall be responsible for the due custody thereof

Provided that, when the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody is likely to exceed its value, the attaching officer may sell it at once

Movable property in possession of judgment debtor—This rule provides for attachment of movable property in the possession of the judgment debtor. As to movable property not in possession of the judgment debtor see r 46 below.

Attachment by actual seizure—Where a warrant of attachment is executed by affixing it to the outer door of the warehouse in which goods belonging to the judgment debtor are stored, it amounts to actual seizure within the meaning of the present rule (t).

Security bond to produce attached property—Goods attached under this rule by an Amin are made over by him to a third person for safe custody on his passing a bond undertaking to produce them in Court. The surety fails to produce the goods when required by the Court. Is the decree holder entitled to proceed against the surety under s 145 (c)? No according to the Madras High Court there being no order of the Court as contemplated by cl (c) of s 145 (u). Yes according to the Allahabad High Court (v).

Rateable distribution—See notes to s 73 Assets held by a Court Case H.

44 [New] Where the property to be attached is agricultural produce, the attachment shall be made by affixing a copy of the warrant of attachment,—

Attachment of agricultural produce

(a) where such produce is a growing crop, on the land on which such crop has grown, or

(b) where such produce has been cut or gathered, on the threshing floor or place for treading out grain or the like or fodder stack on or in which it is deposited, and another copy on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the judgment debtor ordinarily resides or, with the leave of the Court, on the outer door or on some other conspicuous part of the house in which he carries on business or personally works for gain or in which he is known to have last resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain, and the produce shall thereupon be deemed to have passed into the possession of the Court.

Attachment of agricultural produce—This and the following rule provide for the attachment of agricultural produce. Both these rules are new. Growing crops are under this Code included in the category of movable property [see s 2 cl (13)]. But the procedure relating to the actual seizure of movables cannot be applied in its entirety to growing crops for considerable injury would result to both parties if such crops were allowed to be removed on attachment like other movable property. With a view to prevent such injury and to secure to both parties the fullest value from the property attached, it is enacted by the next following rule that where agricultural produce is attached the Court should make such arrangements for the custody thereof as it may deem sufficient and subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the Court the judgment debtor should be allowed to continue to perform all acts of husbandry and if he endeavours to defeat the attachment by neglecting the crop the decree holder should be allowed to intervene and protect his interests O 21

45 [New] (1) Where agricultural produce is attached, the Court shall make such arrangements for the custody thereof as it may deem sufficient, and, for the purpose of enabling the Court to make such arrangements, every application for the attachment of a growing crop shall specify the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered

Provisions as to agricultural produce under attachment

(2) Subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the Court in this behalf either in the order of attachment or in any subsequent order, the judgment debtor may tend, cut, gather and store the produce and do any other act necessary for maturing or preserving it, and if the judgment debtor fails to do all or any of such acts the decree holder may, with the permission of the Court and subject to the like conditions, do all or any of them either by himself or by any person appointed by him in this behalf, and the costs incurred by the decree holder shall be recoverable from the judgment debtor as if they were included in, or formed part of, the decree

(3) Agricultural produce attached as a growing crop shall not be deemed to have ceased to be under attachment or to require re attachment merely because it has been severed from the soil

(4) Where an order for the attachment of a growing crops has been made at a considerable time before the crop is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered, the Court nay suspend the execution of the order for such time as it thinks fit, and may, in its discretion, make a further order prohibiting the removal of the crop pending the execution of the order of attachment

(5) A growing crop which from its nature does not admit of being stored shall not be attached under this rule at any time less than twenty days before the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered

Time at which the crop is likely to be cut or gathered—The decree holder should specify in the application for attachment the time at which the crop is likely to be cut or gathered. The object is to enable the Court to make necessary arrangements for the custody of the crop [sub r (1)] If the application is presented within twenty days before the maturity of a crop not lending itself to storage it should be refused [sub r (5)] See notes to r 44 above

Attachment of debt share and other property not in possession of judgment debtor

46 [S 268] (1) In the case of—

(a) a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument,

(b) a share in the capital of a corporation,

(c) other movable property not in the possession of the judgment debtor, except property deposited in or in the custody of, any Court, the attachment shall be made by a written order prohibiting,—

(i) in the case of the debt, the creditor from recovering the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof until the further order of the Court,

(ii) in the case of the share, the person in whose name the share may be standing from transferring the same or receiving any dividend thereon,

(iii) in the case of the other movable property except as aforesaid, the person in possession of the same from giving it over to the judgment debtor

(2) A copy of such order shall be fixed on some conspicuous part of the Court house, and another copy shall be sent in the case of the debt to the debtor in the case of the share to the proper officer of the corporation, and, in the case of the other movable property (except as aforesaid), to the person in possession of the same

(3) A debtor prohibited under clause (i) of sub rule (1) may pay the amount of his debt into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same

Attachment of debt.—A debt cannot be attached unless it is actually due from the garnishee (judgment debtor's debtor) to the judgment debtor It may be either presently payable or payable in the future by reason of a present obligation (w) As stated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the undermentioned case (x) an existing debt though payable at a future day may be attached But only such debts can be attached as the judgment debtor could deal with properly and without violation of the rights of third persons (y) For instances of attachable debt see notes to s 60 Debts

The following are some of the more important rules relating to the attachment of debts —

1 It is not necessary for the purpose of attaching a debt that the exact amount of the debt should be stated, provided there is a debt actually due at the time of attachment B delivers certain goods to his agent C for sale The goods are sold by C and the sale proceeds are received by him In execution of a decree obtained by A against B A may attach the sale proceeds in the hands of C though the exact amount due to B may not then have been ascertained ( )

2 The attachment of a debt does not prevent the judgment debtor from suing his debtor or from taking any other step necessary for the recovery thereof but he is not entitled to receive payment thereof from his debtor unless the claim in respect of which the debt is attached is first satisfied C owes a debt to B The debt is attached in execution of a decree obtained by A against B This does not preclude B from suing C to recover the debt or from prosecuting the suit if a suit has already been instituted but he cannot receive payment of the debt from C unless he first satisfies A s decree (a) See sub rule (1) cl (i)

Attachment of mortgage debt — A executes a mortgage of immovable property to B to secure payment of Rs 5 000 lent to him by B It is provided by the mortgage bond that if A fails to pay the mortgage debt on the due date B should have the right to sue A personally for the debt and also to realise the debt by the sale of the mortgaged property In such a case B s interest in the mortgage bond comprises (1) the right to sue A personally for the mortgage debt and (2) the right to realise the debt by sale of the mortgaged property If C obtains a decree against B for Rs 000 and seeks in execution of the decree to attach the mortgage debt due to B how is the attachment effected? Is the mortgage debt a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument within the meaning of this rule and attachable in the mode prescribed by this rule or being secured by a mortgage of immovable property is it immovable property within the meaning of r 54 and attachable in the mode prescribed by that rule? The answer afforded by the decisions on the subject eliminating what are merely obiter dicta (b) is that a mortgage debt is a debt within the meaning of this rule and it is therefore to be attached in the manner prescribed by this rule Again if the mortgage debt due to B is attached under this rule in execution of C s decree and sold in execution and purchased by P what are the rights of P? The answer is that they are the same as those of B the mortgagee P may sue A for a personal decree against him He may also sue him for a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property (c) It does not make any difference that the mortgage bond gives a right to the mortgagee to enter into possession and that he is in possession at the date of the attachment (d) The cases referred to above were all cases either of a simple mortgage or of a hypothecation bond As regards usufructuary mortgage it was held by the High Court of Bombay in a case where the bond provided that the mortgagee was to enjoy the profits in lieu of interest for ten years and that the mortgage was to be redeemed on the expiration of the term by payment of the mortgage debt that there was no debt which the mortgagee was entitled to recover at the date of the attachment and that the interest of the mortgagee could only be attached in the mode prescribed by r 54 for attachment of immovable property (e) This case was distinguished in a Madras case where the period having already expired the amount of the loan had become payable which it was said could only be attached as a debt (f)

Attachment of debt after delivery of cheque—A gave a cheque to B for work done Before the cheque was presented by B for payment X who had obtained a decree against B attached in A's hands the amount due by him to B Held that A having handed over the cheque to B the payment was complete and that there was no debt due by A to B which could be attached (g)

Procedure where garnishee denies debt—Where the garnishee denies the debt it is not the business of the Court to inquire if the debt is really due (h) and the decree holder may have it sold, or he may have a receiver appointed under s 51 with power to him to sue the garnishee to recover the debt from him (i) As to release of debt from attachment see notes to O 21 r 58 Rules 58 to 63 apply to debts also A decree holder is not entitled to recover from the garnishee more than what the judgment debtor himself could recover from the garnishee (j)

Procedure when garnishee admits debt—If the garnishee admits the debt the Court may order payment of the debt or so much of it as is admitted to be due into Court (k) But the Court cannot make an order on the garnishee before the debt has become payable (l) If a cross debt is due to the garnishee from the judgment debtor at the date of the attachment the garnishee is entitled to set it off against the amount due by him (l)

In a case where the debt was fraudulently sold at an undervalue with the connivance of the judgment debtor although the garnishee was willing to pay the amount into Court it was held that the remedy of the decree holders claiming rateable distribution was a suit for compensation (m)

Procedure where garnishee resides outside jurisdiction and debt also is payable outside jurisdiction—It is not competent to a Court under this rule to issue a prohibitory order upon a person resident outside the limits of its jurisdiction in respect of property which also is beyond such limits Thus where A obtains a decree in the Court of Bardwan against B residing in Bardwan and there is a debt due to B from C who resides in Calcutta the debt being also payable in Calcutta the proper course for A to adopt if he seeks to attach the debt is to apply to the Bardwan Court to issue a prohibitory order upon B prohibiting him from recovering the debt and also to apply to that Court to transfer the decree for execution to the Calcutta Court and, after the decree is so transferred to apply to the Calcutta Court to issue a prohibitory order upon C prohibiting C from paying the debt to B (n)

Claims over which Courts in British India have no jurisdiction e g a debt due to the judgment debtor from a non resident foreigner in respect of which no suit could be brought by the judgment debtor in a British Indian Court are not debts liable to be attached under this rule (o) But where a judgment is recovered in the High Court of Bombay against a foreign corporation which submitted to jurisdiction and a bank in Bombay owes the Corporation a debt payable in Bombay the High Court of Bombay has jurisdiction to attach the debt and direct the bank to pay the amount of the debt into Court (p)

Shares—A deed of transfer of shares in a company which does not comply with the formalities prescribed by the Indian Companies Act and the Articles of Association of the Company is invalid as against a subsequent purchaser of the shares in execution of a decree against the shareholder (q) See rr 79 and 80 below

Life policy—Where a life policy is payable on proof to the satisfaction of the directors of the death of the assured the policy amount cannot be said to be a debt due by the company before such proof is given (r)

Sub rule (3) payment into Court—A obtains a decree against B In execution of the decree A attaches a debt due ostensibly from C to D but alleged by A to be in reality due from C to B In such a case if the Court orders the amount of the debt to be paid into Court it is incumbent upon the Court to provide by its order that the money when deposited should not be paid to the decree holder [A] until adjudication of the question as to who is entitled to the money B or D (s)

Garnishee order—Company in liquidation—Where a judgment is recovered against a company which is in voluntary liquidation the invariable practice of the Courts is to stay execution of the judgment unless there are very exceptional reasons for exercising its discretion otherwise Thus if A obtains a decree against a limited company and the company thereafter goes into liquidation and a debt is due by D to the company the debt forms part of the general assets of the Company and is divisible among the creditors pari passu and for this reason A is not entitled to a garnishee order against D (t)

47 [New] Where the property to be attached consists of the share or interest of the judgment debtor in movable property belonging to him and another as co owners, the attachment shall be made by a notice to the judgment debtor prohibiting him from transferring the share or interest or charging it in any way

Attachment of share in movables—This rule is new It provides for the attachment of a share or interest in movable property belonging to the judgment debtor and others in co ownership Such a share or interest is obviously incapable of actual seizure and provision has therefore been made for the issue to the judgment debtor of a notice prohibiting him from transferring his share or interest in any way

(2) Where the attachable proportion of such salary or allowances is already being withheld and remitted to a Court in pursuance of a previous and unsatisfied order of attachment, the officer appointed by the Government in this behalf shall forthwith return the subsequent order to the Court issuing it with a full statement of all the particulars of the existing attachment

(3) Every order made under this rule, unless it is returned in accordance with the provisions of sub rule (2), shall, without further notice or other process, bind the Government or the Railway Company or local authority as the case may be, while the judgment debtor is within the local limits to which this Code for the time being extends and while he is beyond those limits if he is in receipt of any salary or allowances payable out of His Majesty's Indian revenues or the funds of a railway company carrying on business in any part of British India or local authority in British India, and the Government or the railway company or local authority, as the case may be, shall be liable for any sum paid in contravention of this rule

Attachment of salary of public officer etc—This rule is new It provides a special procedure for the attachment of the salary of public officer railway servants and servants of local authorities The rule follows upon the lines of section 151 sub section (3) of the Army Act (44 and 45 Vict c 58) which it may be observed applied only to officers of the army Under the Code of 1882 the salary of a public officer or railway servant could not be attached unless the disbursing officer was within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree (u) This led to considerable inconvenience in the execution of decrees and put the decree holder in many cases to an enormous expense The present rule substitutes a less expensive and at the same time more effective machinery for the execution of decrees against this class of judgment debtors Under it the salary of a public officer or a railway servant of a local authority may be attached whether the judgment-debtor or the disbursing officer is or is not within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree A Court to which a decree is transferred for execution has the same power (v) As to how much of the salary of such persons may be attached see s 60 cl (h) and (i)

Execution of decree against firm

50 [New R S C O 43A r 8] (1) Where a decree has been passed against a firm execution may be granted—

(a) against any property of the partnership,

(b) against any person who has appeared in his own name under rule 6 or rule 7 of Order XXX, or who has admitted on the pleadings that he is, or who has been adjudged to be, a partner,

(c) against any person who has been individually served as a partner with a summons and has failed to appear

(x) The same was the law before the present Code came into force Karimbha v Co ervator of Forest (18 9) 4 Bom ??

(a) Wild v Southwood [189] 1 Q B 31 Provincial Insolvency Act 19 0 s 55

Provided that nothing in this sub rule shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the provisions of section 247 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 O 2

(2) Where the decree holder claims to be entitled to cause the decree to be executed against any person other than such a person as is referred to in sub rule (1), clauses (b) and (c) as being a partner in the firm, he may apply to the Court which passed the decree for leave, and where the liability is not disputed, such Court may grant such leave, or where such liability is disputed, may order that the liability of such person be tried and determined in any manner in which any issue in a suit may be tried and determined

(3) Where the liability of any person has been tried and determined under sub rule (2), the order made thereon shall have the same force and be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise as if it were a decree

(4) Save as against any property of the partnership, a decree against a firm shall not release, render liable or otherwise affect any partner therein unless he has been served with a summons to appear and answer

Scope of the rule—This rule is new It is a reproduction of O 48A r 8 of the English Rules Execution under this rule can only be granted where a decree has been passed against a firm A decree passed against a firm must perforce be in the firm's name Under this rule execution may be granted against the partnership property It may also be granted against the partners in which case the decree holder may proceed against the separate property of the partners It must not be supposed however that where a decree has been passed against a firm execution will be granted as a matter of course against all the partners in certain cases special leave is necessary to issue execution against a partner It is only when execution is applied for against a person referred to in sub r (1) cls (b) and (c) that it will be granted as of course But where execution is sought against any other person alleged to be a partner the decree holder must apply to the Court which passed the decree for leave to execute the decree against him Thus if in a suit against a firm a person has been individually served as a partner with the writ of summons but fails to appear at the hearing and a decree is passed against the firm the decree holder is entitled to execution against him as a matter of course see cl (c) of sub r (1) But a decree holder is not entitled to execution as of course against a person who is sought to be made liable as a partner but who was not served with the summons and who did not appear at the hearing In such a case the decree holder must apply for leave to execute the decree against such person If such person admits the liability the Court may grant leave without further inquiry (b) But if he disputes the liability the Court may direct an issue to determine whether he was a partner or held himself out to be a partner in the defendant firm (c) These rules follow from the peculiar nature of a suit against a firm and from the special rules as to service of summons in such a suit To understand the present rule it is necessary to peruse rules 3 6 and 7 of Order 30 The important point to note is that where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm it is not necessary that the summons should be served upon each one of them or indeed upon any one of them it may be served upon any one or more of the partners or at the principal place of the firm s business upon any person having the control or management of the business though he may not be a partner

Where a decree has been passed against a firm —Execution under this rule can only be granted where a decree has been passed against a firm in the firm s name A decree cannot be passed against a firm unless the suit is against partners in the name of their firm And conversely where a suit is against partners in the name of their firm the decree must be against the firm in the firm s name See O 30 r 6 and notes

Against any property of the partnership — Property belonging to a partner hip shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree other than a decree passed against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such See r 49 (1) above

Against any person who has appeared —See O 30 rr 3 5 6 and 7 and notes

Against any person who has been individually served —See O 30 r 5 and notes

Sub rule (2) Leave to issue execution —Order 30 deals with suits by or against firms Rule 1 provides that two or more persons being liable as co partners may be sued in the firm s name It does not matter that the firm is dissolved at the date of the suit so long as the claim in respect of which the suit is brought arose during the continuance of the partnership (d) But where a firm is dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit the plaintiff is bound to serve the summons upon every per on within Briti h India whom it is sought to make liable as provided by O 30 r 3 No order can be made under sub rule (2) against a former partner who has to the knowledge of the plaintiff left the firm before the institution of the suit The rea on is that O 30 r 3 override sub r (2) of the pr ent rule Sub r ( ) applies only where there has been no di solution or none to the knowledge of the plaintiff Where there has been a di olution to the knowledge of the plaintiff an outgoing partner cannot be made liable unle s he has been served with the summons in accordance with the provi o to rule 3 of Order 30 (e)

O 21 r 50 is not controlled by O 30 r 2 (3) A suit is brought by a firm against A On A s application the names of the partners of the firm ar disclosed by the attorneys for the firm under O 30 r 2 A then files a counter claim against the firm The firm s suit is di missed and a decree is passed against the firm on the counter claim A takes out execution against X whose name was given by the firm s attorneys as one of the partners of the firm X denies that he was a partner and says that he did not instruct the firm s attorneys to give his name as a partner There is nothing in the provisions of O 30 r 2 (3) to preclude X from raising this contention and the question whether he is a partner or not should be decided in the manner provided by O 21 r 50 (2) (f)

Execution against legal representatives —If a partner has died the suit against firm cannot include the legal representatives of the deceased partner though they may be added as defendants and served with summons under O 30 r 3 if it is sought to make the eparate estate of the deceased partner liable Sub rule (2) which is subject to O 30 r 3 does not empower the Court to give leave to execute the decree against the legal representatives (g) If a decree against a firm makes a partner personally liable under

sub rule (1) (a) or (1) (b) it may be executed against his legal representatives after notice under r 22 (h)

Issue to determine liability —See notes above Scope of the rule

Court which passed the decree —See notes below Award

Where decree transferred for execution —An ex parte order under sub rule (2) granting leave to execute the decree and transferring the decree for execution to another Court does not preclude the transferee Court from determining the question whether the decree transferred was a nullity (i)

Sub rule (3) —An ex parte order made under sub rule (2) above is not within sub rule (3) Sub rule contemplates an order where the liability has been tried and determined (j)

Sub rule (4) —This sub rule relates to persons other than those referred to in sub r (1) cls (b) and (c) The summons to appear and answer in sub r (4) does not mean the writ of summons It means a summons or a notice to appear and answer the application specified in sub r (2) The object of sub r (4) is to give an opportunity to a person against whom the decree holder seeks to execute the decree other than such a person as is referred to in sub r (1) cls (b) and (c) of disputing his liability as a partner if he desires to do so (k)

Minor partner —The proviso to sub r (1) declares that nothing in that sub rule should be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the provisions of section 247 of the Contract Act The combined effect of that section and the present rule is that where a decree has been passed against a firm containing a minor who is admitted to the benefits of a partnership execution may be granted against the property of the firm including the share of such minor in the property of the firm but it cannot be granted against the separate property of the minor Having regard to the definition of a firm in s 239 of the Contract Act and to a minor s inability to contract the share of such minor in the property of the firm mentioned in s 247 is merely his right to participate in the property of the firm after its obligations have been discharged (l)

Award —It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (m) and Allahabad (n) that an award against a firm filed under s 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act 1899 stands on the same footing as a decree and that the provisions of this rule apply to such an award In the case of an award the Court which passed the decree referred to in sub r (2) is the Court in which the award is filed (o) The High Court of Allahabad has held relying on s 42 of the Code that where an award is sent for execution by one Court to another the latter Court has the power to try the issue as to partnership under sub r (2) (p)

Insolvency of firm —Where a decree has been passed against a firm execution may be taken out against any partner who was served with the summons The insolvency of the firm is no bar to execution against individual partners (q)

53 53 [S 273] (1) Where the property to be attached is a decree, either for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, the attachment shall be made,—

Attachment of decrees

(a) if the decrees were passed by the same Court, then by order of such Court and,

(ii) the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment-debtor applies to the Court receiving such notice to execute its own decree

(2) Where a Court makes an order under clause (a) of sub-rule (1) or receives an application under sub-head (ii) of clause (b) of the said sub-rule it shall on the application of the creditor who has attached the decree of his judgment-debtor proceed to execute the attached decree and apply the net proceeds in satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed

(4) Where the property to be attached in the execution of a decree is a decree other than a decree of the nature referred to in sub-rule (1) the attachment shall be made by a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, to the holder of the decree sought to be attached prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way and, where such decree has been passed by any other Court also by sending to such other Court a notice to abstain from executing the decree sought to be attached until such notice is cancelled by the Court from which it was sent

sub rule (1) (a) or (1) (b) it may be executed against his legal representatives after notice under r 22 (h)

Issue to determine liability —See notes above Scope of the rule

Court which passed the decree —See notes below Award

Where decree transferred for execution —An ex parte order under sub rule (2) granting leave to execute the decree and transferring the decree for execution to another Court does not preclude the transferee Court from determining the question whether the decree transferred was a nullity (i)

Sub rule (3) —An ex parte order made under sub rule (2) above is not within sub-rule (3) Sub rule contemplates an order where the liability has been tried and determined (j)

Sub rule (4) —This sub rule relates to persons other than those referred to in sub r (1) cls (b) and (c) The summons to appear and answer in sub r (4) does not mean the writ of summons It means a summons or a notice to appear and answer the application specified in sub r (2) The object of sub r (4) is to give an opportunity to a person against whom the decree holder seeks to execute the decree other than such a person as is referred to in sub r (1) cls (b) and (c) of disputing his liability a a partner if he desires to do so (k)

Award —It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (m) and Allahabad (n) that an award against a firm filed under s 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act 1899 stands on the same footing as a decree and that the provisions of this rule apply to such an award In the case of an award the Court which passed the decree referred to in sub r (2) is the Court in which the award is filed (o) The High Court of Allahabad has held relying on s 4? of the Code that where an award is sent for execution by one Court to another the latter Court has the power to try the issue as to partnership under sub r (2) (p)

51 [S 270] Where the property is a negotiable instrument not deposited in a Court, nor in the custody of a public officer, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the instrument shall be brought into Court and held subject to further orders of the Court

Attachment of negotiable instruments

The proper method of attaching a promissory note in the hands of an individual is by its actual seizure and not by the issue of a prohibitory order for if it is not seized the promisee may negotiate it and mere notice will not avail against a holder in due course (r) But notice of the order of attachment to the debtor or promisor is sufficient protection against his paying the amount due to the promisee or anyone else (s)

52 [S 272] Where the property to be attached is in the custody of any Court or public officer, the attachment shall be made by a notice to such Court or Officer, requesting that such property, and any interest or dividend becoming payable thereon, may be held subject to the further orders of the Court from which the notice is issued

Attachment of property in custody of Court or public officer

Provided that where such property is in the custody of a Court, any question of title or priority arising between the decree holder and any other person, not being the judgment-debtor, claiming to be interested in such property by virtue of any assignment attachment or otherwise, shall be determined by such Court

Attachment of dividends in the hands of Official Assignee—The Official Assignee is a public officer within the meaning of this rule and moneys in his hands payable by way of dividend to a creditor of an insolvent may be attached in execution of a decree against the creditor in the manner provided by this rule (t)

Attachment of property in the hands of a receiver—A receiver is an officer of the Court. No attachment therefore of money in the hands of a receiver can be made without leave of the Court (u)

It was held by the High Court of Bombay in some of the earlier cases that in the case of a decree against a firm the assets of which are in the hands of a receiver appointed in a previous partnership suit the proper course for the decree holder to follow is to ask the Court for a charging order undertaking by the order to deal with the charge according to the order of the Court (v) On the other hand it has been held in a recent case that the proper course is to issue a notice to the receiver under this rule and not a charging order (w)

Anticipatory attachment—This rule does not permit an anticipatory attachment of money expected to reach the hands of a public officer but applies only to money

Priority —There is a conflict of decisions as to whether if a fund in Court is attached by several decree holders they are entitled to hare rateably or whether they are to be paid in the order of their attachments As to partnership a sets in the hands of a receiver the High Court of Bombay held in one case that no one judgment creditor of the firm is entitled to priority over others by attaching the partner hip asset and that they should be di tributed pro rata among all the judgment creditors (y) On the other hand it was hel l in a recent case that the judgment creditor who first tool out execution again t the as ets was entitled to have his decree satisfied to the full in priority over other non attaching creditors ( ) It is submitted with great respect that the latter decision is incorrect Where a receiver is appointed in an administration suit and a creditor of the deceased obtains a decree against the legal representative of the deceased after such appointment he is not entitled to execute the decree again t the estate of the deceased (a)

The following propo itions have been laid down by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in Visvanadhan v Arunachelam (b) overruling Katum v Haji Mahomed (c) an earlier decision of the same High Court

(1) Where the property attached is in the custody of a Court it is the duty of such Court to hold it at the di po al of the attaching Court and it is the duty of the attaching Court if the property attached is money to call upon the custody Court to pay it into the attaching Court and in other cases to provide for the realisation of the property and to divide the money or proceeds rateably between the attaching decree holder and the o her decree holders who are entitled to distribution under s 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure i.e. those who have applied to it for execution before the receipt of such as ets

(2) Where the property in the custody Court is the subject of several attachments in execution of several decrees the custody Court must award priority to the first in point of time If the other decree holders want to share in the rateable di tribution they must apply in time to the first attaching Court The power conferred on the cu tody Court by the proviso to O 21 r 52 to determine claims to priority etc does not entitle the custody Court itself to distribute the assets rateably among the attaching decree holders

(3) When the attaching Court and the custody Court are the same there is a receipt of a ets within the meaning of s 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure only when so much of the money standing to the credit of the judgment debtor as is neces ary to sati fy the decree holders who have applied to it for execution is ordered to be trans f rred to the credit of th first attaching creditor s suit

53 53 [S 273] (1) Where the property to be attached is a decree, either for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, the attachment shall be made,—

Attachment of decrees

(a) if the decrees were passed by the same Court, then by order of such Court, and,

(b) if the decree sought to be attached was passed by another Court, then by the issue to such other Court of a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, requesting such other Court to stay the execution of its decree unless and until—

(i) the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed cancels the notice, or

(ii) the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment debtor applies to the Court receiving such notice to execute its own decree

(2) Where a Court makes an order under clause (a) of sub rule (1), or receives an application under sub head (ii) of clause (b) of the said sub rule, it shall, on the application of the creditor who has attached the decree of his judgment debtor, proceed to execute the attached decree and apply the net proceeds in satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed

(3) The holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree of the nature specified in sub rule (1) shall be deemed to be the representative of the holder of the attached decree and to be entitled to execute such attached decree in any manner lawful for the holder thereof

(4) Where the property to be attached in the execution of a decree is a decree other than a decree of the nature referred to in sub rule (1), the attachment shall be made by a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, to the holder of the decree sought to be attached, prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way, and, where such decree has been passed by any other Court, also by sending to such other Court a notice to abstain from executing the decree sought to be attached until such notice is cancelled by the Court from which it was sent

(5) The holder of a decree attached under this rule shall give the Court executing the decree such information and aid as may reasonably be required O 21,

(6) On the application of the holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree, the Court making an order of attachment under this rule shall give notice of such order to the judgment debtor bound by the decree attached, and no payment or adjustment of the attached decree made by the judgment debtor in contravention of such order after receipt of notice thereof, either through the Court or otherwise, shall be recognized by any Court so long as the attachment remains in force

Alterations in the rule—This rule corresponds with s 273 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

1 The words or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge in sub r (1) are new See notes below Attachment and realization of decrees

2 The words or his judgment debtor in sub r (1) cl (b) sub head (ii) are new These words give effect to the opinion expressed by Maclean C J in the undermentioned case (e)

3 Sub rules (3) and (6) are also new See notes below under the e sub rules

Attachment and realization of decrees—For the purpose of this rule decrees have been divided into two classes namely —

(1) decrees for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge and

(2) other decrees

First as to attachment of decrees—Decrees of the first class are attached in the manner prescribed by sub r (1) Decrees of the second class are attached in the manner prescribed by sub r (4)

Next as to realization of attached decrees—Decrees of the first class are realized in the manner prescribed by sub r (2) There is no provision in this rule for the realization of decree of the 2nd class e g a decree for partition (f) or for foreclosure of a mortgage (g) These decrees are realized by a sale of the decree itself But decrees of the first class that is money decrees (h) and mortgage decrees are not realized by sale (i) They can only be realized in the manner prescribed by sub r (2) The reason of this distinction is as follows —

Decrees are not expressly mentioned in s 60 as property liable to attachment and sale Hence they are attachable and saleable as comprised in the expression all other saleable property which occurs in that section Being liable to attachment as saleable property they can be sold in execution of another decree But money decree and mortgage decrees must not be sold because the present rule prescribes special procedure for the realization of such decrees [sub r (2)] But for this provision money decrees and mortgage decrees would have to be realized by sale like other decrees The special procedure prescribed by sub r (2) is an exception to the general rule that property when attached can only be realized by sale

Under the old section decrees were divided into two classes namely —

(1) decrees for the payment of money and

(2) other decrees

There was no specific provision for decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage Hence the question arose whether such decrees belonged to the first class or the second class The decisions on the subject were conflicting (j) To remove this doubt the words or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge have been inserted in sub r (1) These words made it clear that mortgage decrees should be attached and realized in the same manner as money decrees [see sub rules (1) and (2)]

Decree for dissolution of partnership —A decree for the dissolution of a firm and for the taking of accounts where a receiver has been appointed by the decree for the sale of the assets of the firm and for the payment of the partnership debts is a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule though part of the partnership assets consists of immovable properties (k)

Decrees other than money decrees and mortgage decrees —D1 holds a decree against J for partition of certain property passed in Court Y D2 obtains a decree against D1 for Rs 6 000 in Court X If D1 fails to satisfy the decree obtained against him by D2 D2 may apply to Court Y to execute his decree by attachment and sale of the decree held by D1 against J The decree held by D1 being neither a money decree nor a mortgage decree the only mode of realizing it in execution of D2 s decree is by attachment and sale

Money decrees and mortgage decrees —Where the decree attached is a money decree or a mortgage decree it can only be realized by execution it cannot be sold in execution For this purpose two applications must be made one for attachment of the decree and the other for its execution The application for attachment must be made by the holder of the decree sought to be executed to the Court which passed it. But the application for execution of the attached decree must be made to the Court which passed the decree attached and it may be made either by the holder of the decree sought to be executed or by the holder of the decree attached as in the following illustrations

(a) Where the decree sought to be executed and the decree sought to be attached are passed by the same Court —D1 holds a decree against J for Rs 5 000 passed by Court Y This is a money decree D2 obtains a decree against D1 also in Court X for Rs 6 000 If D2 seeks to attach D1 s decree in execution of his decree he should apply to Court Y for attachment and either he or D1 may then apply to that Court for execution of the decree held by D1 against J D2 can apply for execution for he is deemed to be the representative of D1 [see sub r (3)]

(b) Where the decree sought to be executed and the decree sought to be attached are passed by different Courts —D1 sues J on a mortgage and obtains a decree for sale of the mortgaged property under O 34 r 5 in Court Y This is a mortgage decree D2 obtains a decree against D1 for Rs 6 000 in Court X and in execution of his decree applies to Court X for attachment of the mortgage decree held by D1 against J The attachment

(j) See Delhi and London Bank Ltd v Partab Singh (1906) 8 All 71 (mortgage decree held not to be a money-decree) Vaidhinadasamy v Somasundaram (1905) 8 Mad 4 3 (mortgage decree held to be a money decree) is to be made by the issue to Court X of a notice by Court Y requesting Court X to O 21 stay execution of D1 s decree against J unless and until—

(i) the notice is cancelled by Court Y or

(ii) an application is made to Court X by D2 or D1 to execute the decree held by D1 against J

If an application is made by D2 or D1 to Court X to execute the decree held by D1 against J Court X will proceed to execute the decree and the nett proceeds that may be realized in execution will be applied in satisfaction of D2 s decree

If in the case put above Court X does not stay execution of D1 s decree on receiving the notice from Court Y and proceeds with the execution in spite of the notice the proceedings will be deemed to be ultra vires and a sale held in execution of that decree will be set aside as void (l)

Sub rule (1) Stay —The stay under sub r (1) (b) is only a limited stay and does not prevent either the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment debtor from seeking to execute the original decree (m)

Sub rule (3) Representative —This sub rule is new It gives effect to the undermentioned decisions (n) under the Code of 1882 It declares in effect that one who attaches a decree is a representative of the decree holder within the meaning of s 47 Thus in the cases put above D2 is the representative of D1

A holds a money de ree against B B holds a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage against C A attaches in execution of his own decree the decree held by B against C C brings into Court from time to time sums of money for satisfaction of the decree held against him by B Since A is the representative of B the payments made by C become forthwith available to A and operate from their respective dates as partial sati faction also of the decree held by A again t B Hence interest on the decree held by A runs only up to the dates of the deposit and not up to the date when A with draws the moneys from Court (o)

Sub rule (6) Adjustment of attached decree —This sub rule is new The latter part of the rule gives effect to a Bombay decision that where a decree is attached no adjustment of the decree subsequent to the attachment can be recognized by the Court (p) See O 2 r 2 A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has held that though the attachment is effected by notice to the Court under sub rule (1) yet a payment or adjustment made by the judgment debtor in ignorance of the attachment and before he has received notice of the order of attachment under sub rule (6) is valid This sub rule merely provides in cases of bona fide transactions by judgment debtors an exception to the general rule laid down in s 64 above (q)

Decree —A decree whereby B was compelled to deliver up po se sion of certain lands to C is rever ed in appeal and B is declared to be entitled to recover back po se sion from C with me ne profits A obtains a decree again t B and applie in execution of hi decree to attach B s right to recover mesne profits from C The right i not attachable for it is not a decree The language [of this rule] seem to apply only to cases where the right attached is a right expressly settled by the decree and not a right arising from the decree by way of restitution (r)

54 [S 274] (1) Where the property is immovable, the attachment shall be made by an order prohibiting the judgment debtor from transferring or charging the property in any way, and all persons from taking any benefit from such transfer or charge

(2) The order shall be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to such property by beat of drum or other customary mode, and a copy of the order shall be fixed on a conspicuous part of the property and then upon a conspicuous part of the Court house, and also, where the property is land paying revenue to the Government, in the office of the Collector of the district in which the land is situate

Immovable property—The equity of redemption of a mortgagor is immovable property within the meaning of this rule (s) The life interest taken by a Parsi widow under her husband's will in the income of his immovable property is not movable but immovable property and is attachable under this rule (t)

Proof of service of prohibitory order—Where it is found as a fact that a prohibitory order was duly served on all the judgment debtors the destruction of part of the record which afforded proof of the service of notice does not render the execution sale invalid (u)

Mortgage debt—The sale of a mortgage debt in execution of a decree carries with it the security and an attachment of the property under this rule is not necessary see notes to r 46 Attachment of mortgage debt

Omission to beat drum—Such an omission is a material irregularity within the meaning of r 90 of this Order (v)

Land paying revenue to Government—Shrotriyam villages in the Madras Presidency are land paying revenue to Government within the meaning of this rule (w)

Proclamation of sale—See r 64 below and note thereto See also notes to s 64 Where an attachment has been made

Removal of attachment after satisfaction of decree

55 [S 275] Where—

(a) the amount decreed with costs and all charges and expenses resulting from the attachment of any property are paid into Court, or

(b) satisfaction of the decree is otherwise made through the Court or certified to the Court, or

(c) the decree is set aside or reversed,

O rr 5

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words or certified to the Court in cl (b) are new The effect of these words is to place satisfaction certified under r 2 of this Order on the same footing as satisfaction made through the Court

2 The latter part of the rule commencing with the words the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn etc is new Under the old section an express order was necessary for the withdrawal of the attachment No such order is necessary under the present rule The attachment is to be deemed to be withdrawn on the happening of any of the events specified in cls (a) (b) and (c)

Relation of this rule to s 73 —See notes to s 73 Assets not available for rateable distribution

The attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn —*A*s property is attached in execution of a decree obtained against him by B C another judgment creditor of A applies for execution of his decree but no attachment is issued upon his application On the date fixed for the sale A pays into Court the amount payable under *B*s decree The next day C applies for sale of the property C is not entitled to have the property sold because the effect of the payment into Court was the withdrawal of the attachment under this rule and there being no attachment under *C*s decree no sale can be ordered in execution of his decree (x)

56 [S 27] Where the property attached is current coin or currency notes, the Court may at any time during the continuance of the attachment, direct that such coin or notes, or a part thereof sufficient to satisfy the decree, be paid over to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same

Order for payment of coin or currency notes to party entitled under decree

57 [New] Where any property has been attached in execution of a decree, but by reason of the decree holder's default the Court is unable to proceed further with the application for execution it shall either dismiss the application or for any sufficient reason adjourn the proceedings to a future date Upon the dismissal of such application the attachment shall cease

Determination of attachment

Object of the rule —The object of the rule is to put a stop to the practice of making orders striking off proceedings or removing proceedings from the file

(x) So bji K I (1916) 36 I m I I C 911 I ... f ... b (1 0) 8 Mal 3 0 ... c c ll ... el in the notes to s 3 under the head Assets held by a Court

57 a form of order for which there was no justification under any of the earlier Codes (y) and which made it doubtful whether the effect of the order was whether the attachment ceased or whether it still continued This subject has already been di cus ed in the notes to s 64 under the head Effect of striking off execution proceedings or of removing them from the file

By reason of the decree holder s default—The provisions of this rule that the attachment should cease upon the dismis al of the application for execution do not apply unless the dismis al was on the ground of default on the part of the decree holder (z) The word default is not confined to default in appearance or in payment of process fees or in production of documents but includes failure to do what a decree holder is bound to do that is to proceed with his application for execution Failure therefore to give notice to the judgment debtor prior to the drawing up of the proclamation as required by r 66 of this Order is default within the meaning of this rule (a) Where a sale in execution of a decree is set aside for any reason other than this default on the part of the decree holder the antecedent attachment is revived so as to support a second application for execution of the decree by sale of the same property and no fresh attachment is necessary (b)

Upon the dismissal of such application the attachment shall cease—These words are imperative A Court therefore has no power while dismissing an application for default on the part of the decree holder to direct by its order that the attachment shall continue Thus where an executing Court made an order that the execution case is accordingly dismissed the properties will remain under attachment it was held that the order being one dismissing the application for execution the attachment ceased by virtue of the provisions of this rule notwithstanding the direction that the attachment should continue (c) In an Allahabad cas the order ran in these terms The execut on case should for th time being be dismis ed but the attachment shall remain in force The Court held that it was in effect an order adjourning the proceedings and was therefore valid (d) In a later Allahabad ca e the executing Court struck off the file an application of its own motion and without any default on the part of the decree holder It was held that there was no dismissal of the application within the meaning of thi rule and that the attachment had not ceased (e) These questions derive importance from the fact that an alienation of property after the attachment has ceased is not within the prohibition contained in s 64

Attachment before judgment—A Full Bench of the High Court of Madras has held that the words property attached in execution of a decree apply to property attached before judgment So when an execution applicat on for the sale of property attached before judgment was dismissed for default the attachment though it was made before judgment ceases (f) A sues B and obtains an order for attachment before judgment A then obtains a decree in the suit against B Thereafter A applies for execution of the decree but the application is dismissed for default of prosecution The dismissal of the application puts an end to the attachment before judgment This is directly oppo ed to the deci ions of the High Courts of Allahabad (g) and Calcutta (h) where it was held that the words attached in execution of a decree do not include an attachment before judgment The High Court of Bombay has followed the Madras deci ion It is submitted that the view taken by the High Courts of Calcutta and Allahabad is the correct one (i)

Investigation of Claims and Objections

58 [S 278] (1) Where any claim is preferred to, or any objection is made to, the attachment of, any property attached in execution of a decree on the ground that such property is not liable to such attachment, the Court shall proceed to investigate the claim or objection with the like power as regards the examination of the claimant or objector and in all other respects, as if he was a party to the suit

Investigation of claims to and objections to attachment of attached property

Provided that no such investigation shall be made where the Court considers that the claim or objection was designedly or unnecessarily delayed

(2) Where the property to which the claim or objection applies has been advertised for sale, the Court ordering the sale may postpone it pending the investigation of the claim or objection

Postponement of sale

Rules 58 to 63—These rules deal with investigation of claims preferred to property attached in execution of a decree and of objections to the attachment of such property

Scope of the rule—Objections to attachment raised by a party to the suit in which the decree under execution was passed or his representative fall within the scope of s 47 Objections to attachment raised by a third party come under the present rule This distinction is important in two ways —

1 Where an objection to attachment is made by a party to the suit or hi representative the objector should proceed by an application under s 47 a separate suit for the purpose is barred But where an objection to attachment is made by a third party the objector may either proceed by an application under this rule or he may bring a regular suit to establish his objection failure to proceed by an application under this rule is no bar to a separate suit The object of this rule is to give a claimant a speedy and summary remedy but the rule does not deprive him of his remedy by suit The summary remedy given by this rule is alternative to the remedy by way of suit (j) See notes to 47 Objections to attachment or sale by third parties and notes to r 63 below Payment by claimant under protest

58 2 An order made under s 47 allowing or disallowing an objection to attachment is a decree (s 2) and is therefore appealable But orders under rr 60 61 or 62 made upon an application under this rule are not appealable under the Code (k) and the remedy of the party against whom the order is made is by a regular suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute (r 63) Such suit must be brought within one year from the date of the order [Limitation Act art 11] (l) but subject to such suit the order is conclusive (m) see r 63

The following illustration shows the operation of rr 58 62 In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property alleged to belong to B is attached If the property attached is claimed by C C may bring a regular suit for a declaration that the property attached belongs to him and for removal of the attachment Or if he desires to avail himself of the speedy remedy provided by this rule he may present an application to the Court executing the decree claiming that the property belongs to him and praying for the removal of the attachment If *C*s claim is allowed (r 60) A may bring a suit under r 63 for a declaration that the property belongs to B and is therefore liable to attachment And if *C*s claim is disallowed (r 61) he may bring a suit for a declaration that the property attached belongs to him and is therefore not liable to attachment If no such suit is brought within one year from the date of the order under r 60 or 61 the order will be conclusive

Objections to attachment though made by a party to a suit or his representative come within the scope of this rule if property attached is held by the objector on behalf of a third party as a trustee guardian or in any other fiduciary capacity See notes to s 47 under the heads Parties to the suit p 154 above and Objection by party or his representative that property attached is not liable to attachment

On the ground that such property is not liable to attachment —The Allahabad High Court has held that these words refer to the case only of an objection made to attachment and not to the case of a claim preferred to the property attached Therefore any claim such as that of a mortgagee which would be inconsistent with the continuance of an unqualified attachment is liable to adjudication by the Court (n)

Where objection to attachment is raised after sale —The application for removal of attachment under this rule should be made before the property attached has been sold The executing Court has no power to entertain such an application after sale (o)

Mortgage decree – This rule does not apply where the property in dispute is directed to be sold under a mortgage decree The reason is that the property directed to be sold under a mortgage decree does not require to be attached by way of execution (p) and the benefit of the summary procedure afforded by the present rule is limited to claims and objections arising in respect of an attachment A obtains a decree against B for sale of certain property mortgaged to him and applied in execution for the sale thereof If the property is claimed by C he must proceed by a suit for a declaration that the property belongs to him and not by an application under this rule (q)

Whether rules 58 to 63 apply if the property attached is a debt—A obtains a decree against B for Rs 5 000 and attaches in execution of the decree a debt alleged to be due by C to B. Can C apply under this rule to have the attachment removed? Yes and if the attachment is not removed he may institute a suit for a declaration that no debt is due from him to B within a year from the date of the order against him. If no such suit is filed the order will be conclusive against him (r). In an earlier Bombay Case the opinion was expressed that the procedure laid down in the sections of the Code of 1882 corresponding to rr 58 to 63 did not apply to a debt attached in execution of a decree the reason given being that a debt was not property capable of possession within the meaning of rr 60 and 61 and that if C alleged that no debt was due the proper course was for the Court to satisfy itself as to its existence (r 66) and if it was satisfied that no debt existed it should abstain from proceeding to sell the debt (s). But this view has since been dissented from and it has been held that the words possessed of in rr 60 and 61 are not restricted to object capable of physical possession but apply also to object capable of constructive possession such as a debt. Moreover the word property in the present rule is wide enough to include a debt. As to a garnishee s right to set off see notes to r 46 above.

Appeal—No appeal lie under the Code from an order made in a claim case [see notes to s 47 Objections to attachment or sale by parties or their representatives and Objections to attachment by third parties. But it has been held by the High Court of Madras that an appeal lies from such an order under cl 15 of the Letters Patent and that where such an appeal is preferred the period of limitation for the suit contemplated by r 63 below is to be calculated from the date of the order made on appeal (t). The High Court of Rangoon has held that there is no appeal from an order under this rule under the Letters Patent (u).

59 [S 279] The claimant or objector must adduce evidence to show that at the date of the attachment he had some interest in, or was possessed of the property attached.

Evidence to be adduced by claimant

Some interest—These words mean such an interest as would entitle the possession of the judgment debtor possession not on his own account but on a [illegible] or in trust for the claimant (v).

Or was possessed of—These words mean was possessed of for [illegible] and not as trustee for the judgment debtor. See the next rule and the notes the[illegible].

Limits of inquiry under rules 59 to 61—In Sardhari Lal v Ambika Prasad (w) their Lordships of the Privy Council said the Code does not prescribe the extent to which the investigation should go and though in some cases it [illegible] be very proper that there should be as full an investigation as if a suit were [illegible] the very purpose of trying the question in other cases it may also be the [illegible] and proper course to deliver an opinion on such facts as are before the [illegible] time leaving the aggrieved party to bring the suit which the law allows [illegible]. Rules 59 to 62 provide for a summary investigation into possession as distinguished from a thorough trial of ultimate right. It is impossible to separate altogether [illegible] possession and of title. Thus if the judgment debtor was in possession [illegible] been in possession as agent or trustee for another [rr 60 61] and the [illegible]

into To that extent the title may be part of the inquiry in a claim case but no ultimate questions of trust are intended to be thrashed out (x) In execution of a decree obtained by A against B three pieces of Government securities are attached The securities stand in the name of C C applies for removal of the attachment under r 58 alleging that the securities belong to him and they are held by him on his own account A alleges that the securities are held by C benami for B It is not open to the Court under these circumstances to inquire whether C in whose name the securities stand is merely a benamidar for B The property must therefore be released from attachment (y) and the question whether C is merely a benamidar is a question of title which should be the subject of a suit under r 63 Similarly if the property attached is claimed by a person as a Mutawali under a deed of wakf and it is proved that he has been in possession as Mutawali for upwards of 20 years the property must be released from attachment The Court has no power under these rules to decide whether the deed of wakf is valid (z) The words possession of the judgment debtor or of some person in trust for him in rr 60 and 61 refer to cases in which the possession of a claimant as a trustee is of such a character as to be really the possession of the judgment debtor and not to cases in which very intricate questions of law may arise as to whether or not valid trusts may result in particular instances (a) If instead of determining the question of possession the Court determines the question of title and disposes of the application on the question of title the order is open to revision under s 115 of the Code (b) Similarly where a Court ought to inquire into the question whether the possession of the judgment debtor was on his own account or on account of some other person but it refuses to do so the order is open to revision The word conclusive in r 63 means non appealable it does not mean not capable of revision (c)

60 [S 280] Where upon the said investigation the Court is satisfied that for the reason stated in the claim or objection such property was not when attached, in the possession of the judgment debtor or of some person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, or that being in the possession of the judgment debtor at such time it was so in his possession, not on his own account or as his own property, but on account of or in trust for some other person, or partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person, the Court shall make an order releasing the property, wholly or to such extent as it thinks fit from attachment

deceased father and in execution of the decree attached certain money in the hands of C due to the estate of the deceased Prior to the date of the decree an order had been made by the High Court under ss 17 and 18 of the Administrator General s Act 2 of 1874 [now Act 3 of 1913 ss 10 and 11] authorising the Administrator General to collect the assets of the deceased It was held on the application of the Administrator General that the attachment should be removed As the order under the Administrator General s Act authorised the Administrator General to realise the debt from C as part of the assets of the deceased the amount in the hands of C could not be said to be property in the possession of a third person in trust for the judgment debtor (B) (d) See notes to r 62 below

Property in possession of a judgment debtor not on his own account but on account of or in trust for some other persons—Such property if attached should be released from attachment under this rule A consigned goods by railway to B and B had made specific advances against them and the goods on arrival at the railway station were attached in execution of a decree against A it was held that the goods though in the hands of the Railway Company were in the possession of A but on account of or in trust for B and should therefore be released from attachment on B s application (e)

Effect of order of release—An order made under this rule releasing the property attached from attchment is only provisional and liable to be set aside by a regular suit (r 63) It is not conclusive a suit may be brought to claim the property notwithstanding the order (f) It has not the effect therefore of putting an end to an attachment duly made so as to leave the claimant free to deal with the property as he likes If a suit is brought by the decree holder to establish his right to attach the property and the decree is in his favour it has the effect of setting asid the order of release and of maintaining the attachment originally made The result is that any private transfer of the property by the claimant though made after an order under this rule releasing the property from attachment will be void under s 64 if the right to attach is subsequently established by suit under r 63 (g) In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property standing in the name of C (B s son) is attached C objects to the attachment and the property is released from attachment under this rule C afterwards mortgages the property to M A then sues B and C for a declaration that B and not C is the real owner of the property and a decree is passed in his favour The property is then re attached and sold in execution of A s decree and purchased by P The mortgage to M is a transfer contrary to the attachment within the meaning of s 64 and P takes the property free from the mortgage The second attachment in such a case relates back to the date of the first attachment Similarly any payment made by a debtor to his creditor though after the attachment on the debt has been raised cannot prevail over the attaching decree holder who eventually succeeds in a suit brought by him under this rule (h) In the case however of an attachment before judgment it is obligatory upon the Court to withdraw such attachment upon the dismissal of the suit [O 38 r 9] and the reversal of the judgment of dismissal in appeal does not operate to revive the attachment which has been withdrawn (i)

Effect of order under this rule—An order in favour of a decree holder made under this rule does not enure for the benefit of other decree holders who are not parties to the proceedings (j)

Disallowance of claim—An order disallowing a claim under this rule is not a nullity and cannot be said to have been made without jurisdiction merely because the Court erroneously omits to decide the question of possession but disallows the claim on some other ground Such an order therefore is conclusive unless a suit is filed by the claimant as provided by r 63 of this Order (k)

62 [S 282] Where the Court is satisfied that the property is subject to a mortgage or charge in favour of some person not in possession, and thinks fit to continue the attachment, it may do so, subject to such mortgage or charge

Continuance of attachment subject to claim of encumbrancer

Scope of the rule—This rule is an enabling rule empowering the Court to make an order continuing the attachment subject to a mortgage if the Court is satisfied that the property attached is subject to a mortgage in favour of some person not in possession The decisions are conflicting as to whether an order which refuses to recognize a mortgage or a charge and directs the continuance of an attachment free from such mortgage or charge is to be referred to rule 66 or to this rule The Bombay High Court and an old Allahabad case refer it to rule 66 (l) But the Madras High Court and a recent Allahabad case decide that rule 58 applies (m) The latt r view cuts down the mortgagee s time for suing to one year see s 63

Subject to a mortgage—The Code clearly makes a distinction between the case in which property is expressly sold subject to a mortgage and the case in which notice of an alleg d mortgage is given in the proclamation of sale The former is provided for by the present ru e and the latter by r 66 below In the former case the Court after being satisfied of the existence of the mortgage sells only the judgment debtor s equity of redemption that is to say the purchaser buys the property subject to the mortgage In the latter case he buys the property with notice of the mortgage and subject to such risk as the notice might involve the executing Court does not decide whether the mortgage subsists or not Such being the case if there is in reality a subsisting mortgage then purchaser has to redeem it If on the other hand the mortgage specified in the proclamation of sale turns out invalid the purchaser acquires the property free from liability for the mortgage The point to be noted is that mere notice of an alleged mortgage in the proclamation of sale does not preclude the purchaser from questioning the validity of the mortgage (n) And it is also to be noted that if the mortgage specified in the proclamation proves to be invalid the judgment debtor is not entitled to claim from the purchaser the amount alleged to have been due on the mortgage (o)

Mortgage in favour of some person not in possession —It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that where a mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property at the time of attachment he can claim to have the attachment removed under r 60 the reason given being that a mortgagee cannot be said to be in possession as a trustee for the judgment debtor (p) The High Court of Patna has taken the contrary view (q) See notes to r 41 above See also s 73 (1)

Attachment of property agreed to be sold —An agreement for a sale of immovable property does not create any interest in or charge on the property even if earnest money has been paid The property may therefore be attached after the agreement and a sale thereof in execution will pass a good title to the auction purchaser (r) But it is otherwise where the purchase money has been paid and possession delivered for the purchaser is in that case entitled to a charge on the property (s)

Saving of suits to establish right to attached property

63 [S 283] Where a claim or an objection is preferred, the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute, but, subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive

Alteration in the rule —S 283 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows The party against whom an order under sections 280 281 or 282 [now rr 60 61 or 62] is passed may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims etc The present rule on the other hand says that where a claim or an objection is preferred the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claim etc The specific reference to the previous sections or rules has been omitted A corresponding change has also been made in the Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art II See notes below Ord r against party to a claim or objection

Parties to suits under this rule —This rule provides that unless the party against whom an order is made institutes a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute [within the period of a year from the date of the order as provided by art 11 of the Limitation Act 1908] the order made against him shall be conclusive Now the party against whom an order may be made may be the decree

53 holder (r 60) or the claimant including an incumbrancer (r 61) or even the judgment debtor The result therefore is as follows —

1 The decree holder against whom an order is made under r 60 may sue the successful claimant for a declaration of his right to attach and sell the property released from attachment (t) To such a suit the judgment debtor is not a necessary party (v)

2 The claimant whose claim has been disallowed under r 61 may sue the decree holder to establish his right to the property attached (t) To such a suit the judgment debtor is a necessary party (w) And since the right conferred by this rule is not a personal one confined to the original claimant a purchaser of the interest of the original claimant can also bring a declaratory suit under this rule (x)

3 A attaches a house in execution of a decree against B The property is claimed by C The Court allows C s claim and the property is released from attachment This is an order against A the decree holder (r 60) Does it also amount to an order against the judgment debtor? In other words can it be said by reason of the fact that C s claim to the property is allowed that the order operates also against B the judgment debtor? Assuming that the order does operate against B it can only do so if B is deemed to be a party against whom an order is made within the meaning of this rule If so B must bring a declaratory suit against C within a year from the date of the order otherwise the order against him would be conclusive But it has been held that a judgment debtor who is not in fact a party to the claim proceedings does not in the eye of the law become such by reason solely of his being the judgment debtor Unless therefore he is a party in fact the order is not binding upon him and he may institute a suit even after the lapse of one year from the date of the order provided he does so within the ordinary period of limitation applicable to the suit to establish his title to and recover possession of the property from the claimant [C] (y) But if he was a party in fact the order would be binding on him unless he brought the suit within the period of one year

Alienation by claimant after order in his favour—A purchaser of property from a claimant after an order has been passed in the claimant s favour removing the attachment on the property but before the institution of a suit by the decree holder against the claimant under this rule is an alienee pendente lite and is not therefore a necessary party to the suit The alienee however takes the property subject to the provisions of s 52 of the Transfer of Property Act (z) In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property alleged to belong to B is attached C claims the property C s claim is allowed and the attachment is removed C then sells the property to D A then sues B and C for a declaration that at the date of attachment the property belonged to B and that he was entitled to attach it D is not a necessary party to the suit But the alienation by C to D will be affected by the doctrine of lis pendens as laid down in s 52 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882

Period of limitation for suit under this rule—The period of limitation for a suit under this rule is one year from the date of the order [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 11] In Sardhari Lal v Ambika Pershad (a) the Judicial Committee said It [that is the order] is not conclusive a suit may be brought to claim the property notwithstanding the order but then the law of limitation says that the plaintiff must be prompt in bringing his suit The policy of the Act evidently is to secure the speedy settlement of questions of title raised at execution sales and for that reason a year is fixed as the time within which the suit must be brought Where an appeal is preferred from the order the period of one year is to be calculated from the date of the appellate order (b) But although the period of limitation runs from the date of the order Article 11 of the Limitation Act does not apply unless the attachment has actually been effected in pursuance of the order (c)

Suit not necessary if the property is released from attachment within the period of limitation—Where after an order disallowing a claimant s claim and directing the attachment to continue the attachment ceases within the period of one year from the date of the order e g by reason of the dismissal of the application for execution under r 57 above for default of prosecution (d) or by reason of the withdrawal of attachment on payment by the judgment debtor to be decree holder of the amount of the decree (e) it is not incumbent upon the claimant to institute a suit under this rule or to prosecute the suit if he has already brought one and he will not be affected by any of the consequences which result from a failure to institute a suit under this rule In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property alleged to belong to B is attached C claims the property as his own but the claim is disallowed Within one year from the date of the order A s application for execution is dismissed under r 7 above C is not bound to bring a suit under this rule

Scope of suit under this rule Consequential relief—This rule provides that a party against whom the order referred to in this rule is made may institute a suit to e tablish his right to the property in dispute The words to e tablish his right to the property are it has been held wide enough to cover a suit not only for a decla ration but a suit for a declaration and consequential relief (f) Thus a plaintiff may under this rule sue to e tablish his right to the goods attached and for damage in re pect of the wrongful attachment Where the goods have already been sold he may sue for the value of the goods (g) He may also claim the full value of the good where the goods have depreciated owing to a fall in the market between the date of attachment and the date of sale (h) But he is not bound to claim any consequential relief (i) If he sues for a declaration of his title and obtains a decree he is entitled to bring a suit for po se sion against the auction purcha er Such a suit i not barred by the provi ions of O - r - above (j)

A suit under this rule is not limited by any special standard of evidence or of law The claimant may if nece sary thrash out his title in the fullest and most ultimate sense But if the title which he claims is not the ultimate full title to the property then of course he must be content to assert whatever the title claimed may be So too the decree holder may make out his debtor s title exactly as if it were a suit for po ession by the debtor (k)

Subject to the result of such suit the order shall be conclusive — This means that unless the suit is brought as provided by this rule the party against whom the order is made cannot assert either as plaintiff or as defendant in any other suit or as a party to any other proceeding the right denied to him by the order (l) A obtains a decree against B and in execution of the decree attaches certain property alleged to belong to B C claims that he is in possession of the property under a sale from B of a date prior to the attachment and applies that the property be released from attachment The executing Court finds that C was in possession at the date of the attachment but that the sale to him was fictitious and disallows C s claim No suit is brought by C within the period of a year to establish his right to the property The property is then sold in execution and purchased by P P then sues C for possession C is precluded in this suit from again asserting his right as purchaser from B No suit having been brought by him within the period of limitation the order disallowing his claim became conclusive against him under this rule Similarly if A in execution of a decree against B attaches a debt alleged to be due by C to B and C objects to the attachment on the ground that no such debt is due and C s objection is over ruled but C brings no suit under this rule he will be precluded in a suit against him by the execution purchaser of the debt from contending that no debt was due by him to B (m) The result would be the same even if C had brought a suit against A and B to establish his right to the debt and the suit was dismissed The result of failure to file the suit as also of the dismissal of the suit if one is filed is that the order becomes conclusive not only as regards the parties to the order or the suit but also as regards the auction purchaser In either case C cannot assert his claim in a substantive suit against the auction purchaser nor can he set it up by way of defence to a suit against him by the auction purchaser (n)

The order is conclusive as against the party against whom it is made — A obtains a decree against B and attaches B s property in execution of his decree C claiming to be a mortgagee of the property puts in a claim under r 58 A contends that the mortgage is not valid but his contention is disallowed No suit is instituted by A as required by the present rule and the order becomes conclusive against him The property is then sold subject to C s mortgage and it is purchased by A Subsequently C sues A (purchaser) and B (mortgagor) to recover the mortgage debt by sale of the mortgaged property B not being a party to the claim proceeding may contend in C s suit that the mortgage is not valid but A cannot for the order became conclusive against him The fact that B the judgment debtor can impeach the validity of the mortgage and that the property purchased by A is the property which belonged to B does not entitle A to be placed in B s position so as to give him the same right to attack the mortgage as B has (o) See notes above Parties to suits under this rule para 3 may institute a suit etc It was accordingly held in some cases that the order referred to in s 283 must be one made after investigation of the claim as contemplated by sections 280 281 and 282 and that an order dismissing a claim for default and without investigation did not come under that section Accordingly it was held that an order dismissing a claim for default did not become conclusive against the party against whom it was made so as to preclude him from instituting a suit more than one year after the date of the order provided the suit was within the ordinary period of limitation (r) The language of the present rule is more comprehensive than the language of s 283 This rule make no reference to the previous rules namely rules 60 61 and 62 and a corresponding change has also been made in art 11 of the Limitation Act The result is that the rule applies to every order made against a party to a claim preferred or an objection made under r 58 even if the order was made for default and without investigation (s) But this does not take away the right of the party to apply to have the order of dismissal for default set aside (t)

3 Order refusing to investigate a claim on the ground of delay —Where a claim or objection is preferred under r 58 and the Court rejects it under the proviso to that rule on the ground that it was designedly or unnecessarily delayed the order is one made against the claimant or objector within the meaning of this rule (u)

4 An order on a claim petition stating that as the petition was filed late the claim will be notified to the bidders is in effect an order rejecting the claim Such an order is one made against the claimant within the meaning of this rule (v) But an order in these terms namely Sale stopped the claim cannot be investigated by this Court petition dismissed has been held not to be an order against the claimant (w) Similarly where a mortgagee applied that the sale proceeds should be kept in Court to satisfy his mortgage but the application was dismissed on the ground that the sale had already taken place and the Court had no jurisdiction to hear the application it was held that there was no order against the mortgagee (x) Where A preferred a claim to the property attached on the ground that he was entitled to a share in the property and the Court made an order in these terms namely Whatever right the judgment debtor has will pass by the sale the claim does not require any further investigation the claim put forward will be noted in the sale proclamation it was held that it was not an order against the claimant (y)

5 If in point of fact there has been no attachment art 11 of the Limitation Act cannot apply for unless there has been an attachment there can be no order made on an objection lodged to it nor can any claim be made to the property so attached and without such an order there can be no terminus a quo for the running of limitation and with this limitation itself is non existent So when a mortgagee preferred a claim in the belief that there was an attachment over the property mortgaged and it is subsequently proved that the order of attachment had never been carried out the Privy

3 Council held that the order passed rejecting the claim was a nullity and art 11 did not apply to the mortgagee s subsequent suit on his mortgage (z)

6 See also notes to r 62 above Scope of the rule

7 There is a material difference between an order which falls under this rule and an order which fall under r 66 below In the one case if the party affected does not sue within 12 months to set it aside it becomes conclusive In the other ca e it ha no such effect (a)

8 No suit can lie under this rule unless there has been an order either allowing or disallowing an objection to attachment A person is not entitled to object to an attachment and then to withdraw the attachment and bring a suit under this rule (b)

Orders in proceedings for attachment before judgment—Rules 58 to 63 apply to claims preferred to property attached before judgment (c) But a Provincial Court of Small Causes has no power to attach immovable property before judgment and an order made by such a Court adjudicating a claim to property so attached is ultra vires (d) See notes to s 7 on p 21 above

Suit for refund of purchase money—This rule applies to a suit to establish the plaintiff s right to the property in dispute It does not apply to a case where a plaintiff whose claim to the property is disallowed under r 61 sues the judgment debtor for a refund of the money paid by him for the purchase of the property A sells certain property to B C obtains a decree against A and attaches the property in execut on. B claims the property as purchaser but his claim is disallowed. B sues A for a refund of the purchase money more than a year after the date of the order but within the ordinary period of limitation The suit is not barred by limitation The reason is that r 63 does not apply to such a suit (e)

Revival of attachment on the suit being decreed—See notes to r 60 above Effect of order of release

Payment by claimant under protest—If the claimant fails and the attachment i not removed he is not compelled to bring a suit under this rule for a declaration of his title to the property he may prevent the sale of the property by paying the decretal amount to the decree holder and then sue for it as money paid under compulsion of law i e under pres ure of execution proceeding (f) Further the claimant is not bound to take proceedings at all under the Code to set aside the attachment He may pay the amount of the decree under protest and then sue as stated above (g) See notes to r 64 below

Jurisdiction—In a suit for a declaration that property is not liable to attachment and sale in executi n of a decree where the value of the property is in exce s of the amount claimed in execution of the decree the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is not the value of the property but the decretal amount (h) But where the plaintiff seeks not only for a declaration that the property is not attachable but for a declaration of his title to the property as against the decree holder and the judgment debtor the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is the value of the property (i)

Burden of proof—The burden of proof in a suit under this rule lies on the plaintiff as in other cases and not on the defendant (j)

Effect of attachment on adverse possession—The High Court of Madras has held that attachment of property in execution of a decree does not arrest the running of time in favour of a party holding the property adversely to the judgment debtor (k) A obtains a decree against B In June 1921 A attaches certain property alleged to belong to B C objects to the attachment and the attachment is raised in April 1922 In January 1923 A sues C under this rule for a declaration that the property belongs to B and that he is entitled to attach it C contends that he has been in possession of the property adversely to C for upwards of 12 years and that A s suit is barred by limitation At the date of the attachment C s possession was for 11 years only and at the date of the suit it was for upwards of 12 years According to the Madras High Court the period of C s possession is to be counted up to the date of the suit and A s suit is therefore barred the reason given being that attachment could not prevent the running of time in favour of C On the other hand according to the Bombay High Court the period of C s possession must be counted only up to the date of attachment and hence A s suit is not barred the reason given being that the real question in such a case was whether the judgment debtor [B] had a subsisting right to the property at the date of attachment (l) According to the Calcutta High Court also the material date is the date of attachment (m)

Fraudulent transfer by judgment debtor—Where a claim is made to the property attached by one claiming to be a transferee from the judgment debtor and the claim is disallowed and the claimant subsequently institutes a suit under this rule to establish his title to the property it is open to the attaching creditor to plead in defence that the transfer was in fraud of the general body of creditors (n) In execution of a decree obtained by A against B B's property is attached C claims the property as having been purchased by him from B before A obtained the decree against B but the claim is disallowed C then sues A and B under this rule to establish his right to the property A is entitled to plead in defence that the transfer by B to C was made with intent to defraud B's creditors If the claim is allowed and a suit is brought by the attaching creditor under this rule he is entitled to sue on his own behalf He is not bound to sue on behalf of himself and all other creditors of the judgment debtor (o) Thus if in the case put above C s claim is allowed and the attachment is raised it is competent to A the attaching creditor to sue B and C under this rule to establish his right to attach the property and he may prove in such suit that the transfer by B to C was fraudulent A is not bound to bring a representative suit on behalf of all the creditors of B

Damages for wrongful attachment—Where goods attached as belonging to the judgment debtor are claimed by a third party and his claim is disallowed he may sue under this rule not only for a declaration of his title to the goods but also for the value

Sale generally

64 [S 284] Any Court executing a decree may order that any property attached by it and liable to sale, or such portion thereof as may seem necessary to satisfy the decree, shall be sold, and that the proceeds of such sale, or a sufficient portion thereof, shall be paid to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same

Sale of goods not belonging to judgment debtor —A obtains a decree against B In execution of the decree A points out to the sheriff s agent goods belonging to C as the property of B C's goods are thereupon attached by the sheriff s agent and sold in execution C is entitled to claim from A the market value of his goods as on the date of attachment The sheriff is not liable in such a case (t)

65 [S 286] Save as otherwise prescribed, every sale in execution of a decree shall be conducted by an officer of the Court or by such other person as the Court may appoint in this behalf, and shall be made by public auction in manner prescribed

Sales by whom conducted and how made

66 [S 287] (1) Where any property is ordered to be sold by public auction in execution of a decree, the Court shall cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be made in the language of such Court

Proclamation of sales by public auction

(2) Such proclamation shall be drawn up after notice to the decree holder and the judgment debtor and shall state the time and place of sale, and specify as fairly and accurately as possible—

(a) the property to be sold,

(b) the revenue assessed upon the estate or part of the estate, where the property to be sold is an interest in an estate or in part of an estate paying revenue to the Government,

(c) any incumbrance to which the property is liable,

(d) the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered,

(e) every other thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property

(3) Every application for an order for sale under this rule shall be accompanied by a statement signed and verified in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for the signing and verification of pleadings and containing, so far as they are known to or can be ascertained by the person making the verification the matters required by sub rule (2) to be specified in the proclamation

(4) For the purpose of ascertaining the matters to be specified in the proclamation, the Court may summon any person whom it thinks necessary to summon and may examine him in respect to any such matters and require him to produce any document in his possession or power relating thereto

1 The provision in sub r (2) for notice to be given to the decree holder and the judgment debtor is new

2 Sub r (3) is also new

; Incumbrances to which the property is liable—Where a decree holder who held a simple money decree stated in his application [sub r (3)] that the property to be old was subject to a mortgage in his favour but no mention was made of the mort gage in the proclamation the omission not being due to any fraud on his part it was held that he was not estopped from enforcing his mortgage against the auction purchaser (x) But he would be so estopped if he omitted to mention his mortgage in the application (y) See notes to r 62 of this order

Value of the property—Clau e (e) of the rule provide that the proclamation shall specify as fairly and accurately as possible every other thing which the Court con iders material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property There can hardly be any doubt that the value of the property to be put up for ale is a material fact within the meaning of cl (e) As said by the Judicial Com mittee in Saadatmund Mohan v Phul Kuar ( ) Whatever material fact is stated in the proclamation (and the value of the property is a very material fact) must be consi dered as one of the e things which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know and it is enacted in terms (though express enactment is hardly necessary for such an object) that those things shall be stated as fairly and accurately as possible If any enquiry into the value of the property is nece sary the Court should hold an enquiry (a) If the value is understated in the proclamation and the understatement is such as is calculated to mislead bidders and to prevent them from offering adequate price and the sale results in a price altogether inadequate the sale must be set aside on the ground of material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale within the mean ing of r 90 below (b) In a Calcutta case it was said that the Court was not bound to investigate the value of the property (c) but these remarks were obiter dicta (d) and it was held in a later case that the Court is bound under this clause to inve tigate the value and insert it in the sale proclamation (e) In view of the decision of the Judicial Com mittee in the ca e cited above there is no doubt that the value of the property should be stated as fairly and accurately as pos ible in the sale proclamation. The Court may in an exceptional case state in the proclamation the values stated both by the decree holder and the judgment debtor instead of attempting itself to value the property (f) The Madras High Court has held that the Court is under no obligation to fix in the proclamation of sale its own valuation of the property to be sold (g)

Duty of Court in respect of Court Sales—In a case in which the terms of the proclamation were not clearly explained by the officer of the Court conducting the sale to a bidder who asked for an explanation and who was thus misled into buying property which was subject to mortgages amounting to more than its value the Judicial Committee in setting aside the sale observed In sales under the direction of the Court it is incumbent on the Court to be scrupulous in the extreme and very careful to see that no taint or touch of fraud or deceit or misrepresentation is found in the conduct of its ministers It would be disastrous it would be absolutely shocking if the Court were to enforce against a purchaser misled by its duly accredited agents a bargain so illusory and so unconscientious as this (i)

Non compliance with provisions of this rule—See notes to r 90 below Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale nos 1A and 2

Appeal—An order under this rule not being included in the list of appealable orders given in O 43 is not appealable as an order The question then arises whether an order under this rule is an order in execution proceedings within the meaning of s 47 Now an order in execution proceedings may be a final order that is it may conclusively determine the rights of parties or it may be interlocutory In the former case the order operates as a decree and is appealable as such [s 2 (2)] but not in the latter case [see notes to s 47 Interlocutory orders in execution proceedings] The question therefore in each case is whether a particular order made under this rule conclusively determines the rights of the parties or not

A Full Bench of the High Court of Madras in Sivagami v Subrahmania (j) which was a case under the corresponding section 287 of the Code of 1882 held that no proceeding of a Court under that section in relation to the proclamation of sale is an order within s 244 (now s 47) so as to be appealable as a decree In the course of the Order of Reference the learned Judges said We are disposed to think that the preliminary objection is well founded and that under section 287 Civil Procedure Code the proceedings are in themselves administrative and not judicial but that if and when a sale does take place if ever and it has to be judicially confirmed objection may be taken to the confirmation of the sale on any of the grounds mentioned in section 311 Civil Procedure Code [now O 21 r 90] some of which may relate to the contents of the proclamation This view receives strong corroboration from the provision enacted by section 288 Civil Procedure Code that no Judge or other public officer shall be answerable for any error misstatement or omission in any proclamation under section 287 Civil Procedure Code unless the same has been committed or made dishonestly a provision which in view of Act XVIII of 1850 would have been quite superfluous if proceedings under section 287 Civil Procedure Code were judicial and not administrative In delivering their opinion the Full Bench said We concur in the reasons given in the Order of Reference and we may add that the view that the proceedings in themselves under section 287 are of an administrative and not of a judicial character is further supported by the fact that special provision is made in section 287 [now O 21 r 66 (4)] to summon witnesses and make enquiry into the matters referred to in the section a provision which would be superfluous if the proceedings were judicial It has accordingly been held by that Court that an order under this rule determining the value of the property to be sold the place where the sale is to take place the lot in which it is to be sold and the amount for the recovery of which the property is to be sold is not a judicial but an administrative order and that it does not come within s 244 (now s 47) and is not

6 appealable (k) It may here be stated that s 288 of the Code of 1882 has not been reproduced in the present Code In a case under this Code (l) the High Court of Madras observed that the Full Bench decision was good law even under the pre ent Code notwith standing the omi sion of s 288 though in another case (m) Schwabe C J expre ed a doubt on that point As to a decision as to the order in which the properties are to be put up for sale the Madras High Court has held that such a decision is an order within sec 47 and that it is appealable if it affects the rights of co defendants inter se for example in a case of execution of a decree on a mortgage where the interests of the owners of the items of the mortgaged properties will be seriou ly affected by the order in which the properties are sold (n) In a recent case the same High Court held that the Court is under no obligation whatever under this rule to fix and state in the proclamation of sale its own valuation of the property to be sold (o)

The Bombay High Court follows the Madras Full Bench Case (p)

The High Court of Calcutta has held that an order under this rule may be either final or interlocutory If it is final it falls within s 47 and is appealable as a decree but it is not appealable if it is interlocutory It has accordingly been held that an order determining the value of the property to be sold is merely interlocutory and is not appealable (q) An order in the following term let sale proclamation be issued in the meantime I shall hear the objection of the judgment debtor is also interlocutory (r) But an order adju dicating upon a dispute as to the boundaries of the property sold and determining that certain accreted land should be included in the property to be sold is final and is appeal able as a decree (s) It may be observed that it is not safe to follow such decisions under the Code of 1882 as they proceeded on points in which the definition of decree differed from that in the present Code

The High Court of Allahabad has also held that an order under this rule determin ing the value of the property to be sold does not fall within s 47 and is not appealable The reason given is that in such a case the Court judicially decides nothing (t)

In two earlier cases the High Court of Patna held that an order under this rule deter ming the value of the property to be sold was merely interlocutory and was not therefore appealable (u) In a recent Patna case a Bench of three Judges held that an order of the Court determining any of the particulars to be stated in the sale proclama tion under this rule is not a final order and is not appealable It was accordingly held in that case that an order refusing to notify a lease in the sale proclamation was not final and was not appealable (v)

Letters Patent appeal—An order of a single Judge of the High Court sitting on the Original Side refu ing to alter the upset price fixed in a proclamation of sale or to direct the sale of the property in lots or to postpone the date of sale is not a judgment

Death of judgment debtor pending execution —If the judgment debtor has died before issue of notice to him under this rule his legal representatives must be brought on the record If the legal representatives are not brought on the record the sale would be void (x)

Non appearance of legal representative and res judicata —The failure of the legal representative of a deceased judgment debtor to attend pursuant to a notice under sub r (2) [App E form no 28] at the hearing of an application to settle the terms of a sale proclamation does not estop him on the principle of res judicata from contending thereafter that the property attached belongs to him personally and that it does not form part of the estate of the deceased judgment debtor The notice under sub r (2) is merely to settle the terms of the proclamation it is not for determining questions of title to the property (y)

Mode of making proclamation

(2) Where the Court so directs, such proclamation shall also be published in the local official Gazette or in a local newspaper, or in both, and the costs of such publication shall be deemed to be costs of the sale

(3) Where property is divided into lots for the purpose of being sold separately, it shall not be necessary to make a separate proclamation for each lot, unless proper notice of the sale cannot in the opinion of the Court, otherwise be given

Sub rule (1) —If the property to be sold consists of several villages which are all close together it is not necessary to make proclamation in every village (z)

Sub rule (3) property divided into lots for separate sale – This sub rule is new It incorporates the decision in the undermentioned case (a)

Non compliance with the rule —Omission to carry out the provisions of this rule does not render the sale ipso facto void But such omission amounts to a material irregularity within the meaning of r 90 below and the sale will be set aside if the Court is satisfied that substantial injury has resulted from the irregularity (b) See the proviso to r 90 below

Time of sale

Non compliance with the rule—If a sale is held before the expiration of the period prescribed by this rule it is not void but the case is one of material irregularity within the meaning of r 90 and the sale will be set aside if the Court is satisfied that substantial injury has resulted from the irregularity (d)

69 [s 291] (1) The Court may, in its discretion, adjourn any sale hereunder to a specified day and hour, and the officer conducting any such sale may in his discretion adjourn the sale, recording his reason for such adjournment

Adjournment or stoppage of sale

Provided that, where the sale is made in, or within the precincts of, the Court-house, no such adjournment shall be made without the leave of the Court

(2) Where a sale is adjourned under sub rule (1) for a longer period than seven days, a fresh proclamation under rule 67 shall be made, unless the judgment debtor consents to waive it

(3) Every sale shall be stopped if, before the lot is knocked down, the debt and costs (including the costs of the sale) are tendered to the officer conducting the sale, or proof is given to his satisfaction that the amount of such debt and costs has been paid into the Court which ordered the sale

Saving of certain sales

70 [Cf s 287, last para] Nothing in rules 66 to 69 shall be deemed to apply to any case in which the execution of a decree has been transferred to the Collector

Execution of decree by Collector—See ss 68 to 72 and Sch III below

Defaulting purchaser answerable for loss on re sale

71 [s 293] Any deficiency of price which may happen on a re sale by reason of the purchaser s default, and all expenses attending such re sale, shall be certified to the Court or to the Collector or subordinate of the Collector, as the case may be by the officer or other person holding the sale, and shall, at the instance of either the decree holder or the judgment debtor, be recoverable from the defaulting purchaser under the provisions relating to the execution of a decree for the payment of money

Application of the rule—This rule extends to all sales whether of movable or of immovable property and also to re sales made under the Code whether made in consequence of default of payment of deposit under r 84 or of purchase money under rr 85 and 86 (l) But the re sale should only cover the property sold at the prior sale and any substantial difference of description at the sale and re sale in any of the matters required by r 66 will deprive the decree holder of the right to recover the deficiency of price under this rule Thus where the defaulting purchaser had been induced to bid for the property as unincumbered by reason of the fact that the incumbrances were not mentioned in the proclamation of sale and the re sale was on a proclamation in which the incumbrances were mentioned it was held that he was not liable for the deficiency on re sale under this rule (m) The same was held where the property was described as that of A at the first sale and as that of B at the second (n) The case is different however if the property re sold is substantially the same as that put up for sale at the first sale The reasonable construction to place on rule 71 is that the re sale should be within a reason

It is to be noted that on the happening of any of the events that render a re ale neces ary the decree holder i not b und to lave the same property re sol l He may proceed against any other property of the judgment debtor leaving the latter to his remedy against the defaulting purcha er (q)

Who may apply under this rule —The only person who can apply under this rule i the decree holder who brought the property to sale or the judgment debtor No other person is entitled to apply (r)

By reason of purchaser s default —These word cover a default not only in pay ment of the balance of the price but in making the depo it of 25 per cent as provided by r 84 below (s)

At a Court sale A bid Rs 5 000 B bids Rs 6 000 and C bids R 7 000 C dies before his bid is accepted by the Court Can B be said in the circum tances to be the highest bidder ? No C s bid was revoked by his death before acceptance by the Court B s bid lapsed on the making of the higher bid by C and A s bid lapsed on the making of the higher bid by B The property should therefore be put up afresh for sale (t)

Certificate —The certificate as to the deficiency can be executed as a decree and can therefore also be attached as a decree (u)

Interest on deficiency —A defaulting purchaser i liable for interest on the deficiency from the date on which an order is made against him under this rule and not from the date of sale (v)

Rateable distribution —Where a decree holder who has brought the property to sale applies under this rule and attaches the amount of the deposit lying in Court other decree holders who have applied before the amount was depo ited in Court are entitled to a rateable distribution of uch amount The amount in depo it in Court represents the assets realised by the Court within the meaning of sec 73 above (w)

Where defaulting purchaser merely an agent —The mere fact that the defaulting purchaser acted as the agent of another is no ground for exempting him from liability und r this rule unless he informed the officer conducting the sale that he was merely an agent The fact that the judgment debtor knew that he was merely an agent does not di entitle the judgment debtor to an order under this rule (x)

Decree holder not to bid for or buy property without permission

(2) Where a decree holder purchases with such permission, the purchase money and the amount due on the decree may, subject to the provisions of section 73, be set off against one another, and the Court executing the decree shall enter up satisfaction of the decree in whole or in part accordingly

Where decree holder purchase amount of decree may be taken as payment

(3) Where a decree holder purchases, by himself or through another person, without such permission, the Court may if it thinks fit, on the application of the judgment debtor or any other person whose interests are affected by the sale, by order set aside the sale, and the costs of such application and order, and any deficiency of price which may happen on the re sale and all expenses attending it shall be paid by the decree holder

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words subject to the provisions of section 73 are new See notes below under the head Amount due on the decree

2 The words any other person whose interests are affected by the sale in sub r (3) have been substituted for the words any other person interested in the sale This is merely a verbal alteration

No separate suit —Where a decree holder without leave of the Court buys the property of the judgment debtor at a Court sale the remedy of the latter is by application under this rule and s 4 and not by a separate suit a separate suit is barred under s 47 The question whether the sale should be set aside or not is a question between the parties to the suit relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s 4 and it must therefore be decided by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit ( ) Note the words may by order set aside the sale in sub r (3)

The Court may if it thinks fit set aside the sale —In P u Ra lha Kri hna v Bi h l i Sahay (a) their Lordships of the Privy Council in dealing with the corresponding s 294 of the Code of 1882 said Upon the construction of this section it is evident that a purchase by a decree holder who has not obtained permission is not void nor a nullity but is only to be avoided on the application of the judgment debtor or some other person interested It would be injurious to those interested in the sale if a decree holder who had been forced up in the bidding to give a large sum of money could escape from fulfilling his contract by getting the sale declared a nullity and it would make all titles under such sales insecure if at a later period they were liable to be treated as nullities A sale is to be set aside upon application and upon cause shown Where a decree holder purchases without the permission of the Court the sale as stated above the sale shall be postponed accordingly and shall be then completed, whatever price may be offered for the produce

Place of sale of movable property—Except in the case of agricultural produce for which provision has been made by this rule a sale of movables in execution of a decree should ordinarily be held at some place within the jurisdiction of the Court ordering the sale Good and sufficient reasons ought to be shown for directing otherwise A mere contention that a higher price is likely to be bid in some other place is not a good and sufficient reason (a)

75 [New] Special provisions relating to growing crops (1) Where the property to be sold is a growing crop and the crop from its nature admits of being stored but has not yet been stored, the day of the sale shall be so fixed as to admit of its being made ready for storing before the arrival of such day, and the sale shall not be held until the crop has been cut or gathered and is ready for storing

82 [S 304] Sales of immovable property in execution of decrees may be ordered by any Court other than a Court of Small Causes

What Courts may order sales

83 [S 305] (1) Where an order for the sale of immovable property has been made, if the judgment debtor can satisfy the Court that there is reason to believe that the amount of the decree may be raised by the mortgage or lease or private sale of such property, or some part thereof, or of any other immovable property of the judgment debtor, the Court may, on his application, postpone the sale of the property comprised in the order for sale on such terms and for such period as it thinks proper, to enable him to raise the amount

Postponement of sale to enable judgment debtor to raise amount of decree

(2) In such case the Court shall grant a certificate to the judgment debtor authorizing him within a period to be mentioned therein, and notwithstanding anything contained in section 64, to make the proposed mortgage, lease or sale

Provided that all monies payable under such mortgage lease or sale shall be paid, not to the judgment-debtor, but, save in so far as a decree holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72, into Court

(j) Toolsee Das v East India Ry Co (186) — Ind Jur N S 133

33 Provided also that no mortgage, lease or sale under this rule shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court

(3) Nothing in this rule shall be deemed to apply to a sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage of, or charge on, such property

Alterations in the rule—The words save in so far as a decree holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72 in sub r (2) have been added to make it clear that where a decree holder is entitled to a set off under r 72 he should not be required to pay in the monies A similar saving has been introduced into r 84 sub r 2 and r 85

Postpone the sale for such period as it thinks proper—The postponement of sale under this rule is discretionary with the Court (k) But the postponement should be for a reasonable period (l)

The amount of the decree can be raised—No sale should be postponed and no certificate should be granted under sub r (2) unless the whole amount due on the decree can be raised by mortga e lease or sale (m)

Notwithstanding anything contained in section 64—On compliance with the conditions of this rule a private alienation notwithstanding s 64 becomes absolute not only against the claim of the decree holder but against all claims enforceable under the attachment (n)

Confirmation of sale by Court—Where permission to raise the amount of decree by private sale has been granted to the judgment debtor by two Courts in each of which a decree has been passed against him it is enough if the sale is confirmed by one Court it is superfluous to apply to the other Court for confirmation of the same ale (o)

Guardian and Wards Act 8 of 1890 s 29—A private alienation of property though confirmed by the executing Court under this rule is not valid if such alienation is made by a guardian and the sale is not confirmed by the Court by which the guardian was appointed (p)

Decree for the enforcement of a mortgage—This rule does not apply to a sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a decree for the enforcement of a mortgag The reason is that in the case of a mortgage decree the right of sale does not depend upon the attachment in execution but is confirmed by the decree itself (q)

Rateable distribution—Money paid into Court under the provi o to sub r (2) is liable to ratable distribution under s 73 as it is paid under a pending execution application (r)

Revision —No appeal lies from an order refusing to postpone a sale under this rule But the party aggrieved may apply to the High Court under s 115 for a revision of the order and the High Court may in a proper case set aside the order (s)

84 [S 306] (1) On every sale of immovable property the person declared to be the purchaser shall pay immediately after such declaration a deposit of twenty five per cent on the amount of his purchase money to the officer or other person conducting the sale and, in default of such deposit, the property shall forthwith be re sold

Deposits by purchaser and re sale on default

(2) Where the decree holder is the purchaser and is entitled to set off the purchase money under rule 72, the Court may dispense with the requirements of this rule

Declared to be the purchaser —An execution sale is not complete until the presiding officer has accepted the bid and declared the purchaser (t)

Material irregularity —It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that failure to deposit the 25 per cent immediately as required by this rule is no more than a material irregularity within the meaning of r 90 which would render the sale voidable if substantial injury has resulted by reason of such irregularity (u) It was at one time held by the High Court of Allahabad that such failure rendered the sale altogether void (v) but these decisions have now been overruled by a Full Bench the view taken by the Full Bench being the same as that of the Calcutta and Madras High Courts (w)

Sub rule (2) —This sub rule is new See notes to r 83 Alterations in the rule

Ratable distribution —See notes to s 73 Before the receipt of the assets

85 [S 307] The full amount of purchase money payable shall be paid by the purchaser into Court before the Court closes on the fifteenth day from the sale of the property

Time for payment in full of purchase money

Provided that, in calculating the amount to be so paid into Court the purchaser shall have the advantage of any set off to which he may be entitled under rule 72

On the fifteenth day from the sale —The purchaser is bound to see that the money reaches the Court in time to satisfy the requirements of this rule If the purchase-money is not received by the Court in time it will not avail him that he had posted the money in time for the Post Office is not the agent of the Court (x)

Material irregularity —The time for payment cannot be extended without the consent of the decree holder and the judgment debtor If it be extended without their consent the case is one of material irregularity within the meaning of r 90 below (y)

Where the Court or office is closed on the fifteenth day—In such a case the payment may be made on the next day on which the Court or Office is open See General Clauses Act 10 of 1897 s 10

86 [s 308] In default of payment within the period mentioned in the last preceding rule, the deposit may, if the Court thinks fit, after defraying the expenses of the sale, be forfeited to the Government, and the property shall be re sold, and the defaulting purchaser shall forfeit all claim to the property or to any part of the sum for which it may subsequently be sold

Procedure in default of payment

Alteration in the rule—The words may if the Court thinks fit have been substituted for the word shall See notes below

Forfeiture of deposit to Government—The old section provided that the deposit shall be forfeited to Government This provision led to hardship in certain cases (z) To obviate the hardship the words may if the Court thinks fit have been substituted for the word shall It is no longer obligatory upon the Court to forfeit the deposit

87 [s 309] Every re sale of immovable property, in default of payment of the purchase money within the period allowed for such payment, shall be made after the issue of a fresh proclamation in the manner and for the period hereinbefore prescribed for the sale

Notification on re sale

Fresh notification—A fresh notification is only necessary where the re sale is in default of payment of the purchase money within the time allowed by r 85 No fresh notification is necessary for a re sale in default of payment of the 25 per cent deposit required by r 84 (a)

88 [s 310] Where the property sold is a share of undivided immovable property and two or more persons, of whom one is a co sharer, respectively bid the same sum for such property or for any lot, the bid shall be deemed to be the bid of the co sharer

Bid of co-sharer to have preference

See as to movable property r 77 sub r (3) above

Co sharer—A defeasible title to a share is not sufficient to support a claim for pre emption under this rule (b) The Allahabad High Court has held under the rules framed under s 70 of the Code that where a sale is confirmed by the Collector in favour of one bidder in default of appearance of the other bidder of the same sum claiming a preferential right as a co sharer he is not entitled to maintain a separate suit to set aside the sale by virtue of a right of pre-emption (c)

89 [S 310A] (1) Where immovable property has been sold in execution of a decree, any person, either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale, may apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in Court,— O [illegible]

Application to set aside sale on deposit

(a) for payment to the purchaser, a sum equal to five per cent of the purchase money, and

(b) for payment to the decree holder, the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, less any amount which may, since the date of such proclamation of sale, have been received by the decree holder

(2) Where a person applies under rule 90 to set aside the sale of his immovable property, he shall not, unless he withdraws his application, be entitled to make or prosecute an application under this rule

(3) Nothing in this rule shall relieve the judgment-debtor from any liability he may be under in respect of costs and interest not covered by the proclamation of sale

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale have been substituted for the words any person whose immovable property has been sold under this Chapter See notes below Who may apply under this rule

2 The words unless he withdraws his application and the words or prosecute in sub r (2) are new See notes below under the head Sub rule (2)

Immovable property —This rule applies only to sales of immovable property A simple mortgage bond is movable and not immovable property The provisions of this rule do not therefore apply to a sale of such a bond in execution of a decree (d)

This rule applies to sales under money and mortgage decrees —This rule obviously applies to sales in execution of decrees for the payment of money The transfer into this Code (see O 34) of the sections of the Transfer of Property Act [illegible] to decrees in suits on mortgage shows that the provisions of the present rule apply [illegible] to sales under mortgage decrees Hence a mortgagor whose immovable property [illegible] been sold in execution of a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property [illegible] O 34 r [illegible] may apply under this rule to set aside the sale (e) As to the [illegible] it was doubtful whether its provisions applied to mortgage decree [illegible]

Calcutta holding that they did not (f) while the other Courts holding that they did (g) The Calcutta decisions are no longer law In a Calcutta case it was held that the present rule applies also to sales under a mortgage decree on the original side of the Calcutta High Court (h) In a recent case it was held that this rule though well adapted to mofussil practice is not in terms applicable to the practice of the Court on its original side inasmuch as no amount is specified in any proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered nor are sales ordered for recovery of the amount of costs before they are taxed A mortgagor can therefore apply to set aside the sale on deposit of a sum equivalent to 5 per cent of the purchase money and the amount of the decree (i)

Whether the rule applies to other sales —This rule has been held to apply when the sale is under a decree passed in terms of an award made on an order of reference in a partition suit (j) The High Court of Madras has held that this rule does not apply to a sale by a receiver of partnership property for realising the partnership assets (k)

Who may apply under this rule —Under the old section the application to set aside a sale could only be made by any person whose immovable property has been sold under this Chapter that is the Chapter relating to execution These words it was held included—

(1) the judgment debtor

(2) any person though not a party to the suit or decree (l) whose interests were affected by the sale

A person whose interests were not affected by the sale could not it was held apply under that section (m)

Under the present rule the application to set aside a sale of immovable property held in execution of a decree may be made by—

(1) any person owning the property or

(2) any person holding an interest in such property by virtue of a title acquired before the sale

Any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale —Under the old section the application to set aside a sale on deposit could be made by any person whose immovable property has been sold Under the present rule the application may be made by any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale There is no doubt that a judgment-debtor whose immovable property has been sold may apply under this rule as a person owning such property But what if the judgment debtor has transferred his interest in the property? Now a judgment debtor may transfer his interest in the property before the Court sale or he may do so after the Court sale Is he entitled after a transfer in either case to apply under this rule? Is the transferee from the judgment debtor entitled to apply under this rule? The cases give the following answers to these questions

First as regards transfers before Court sale —Under the old section there was a conflict of decisions whether if the judgment debtor had transferred his interest in the property before the Court sale the transferee could apply under that section to have the same set aside In Srinivasa v Ayyathorai (n) for instance it was held that the transferee could apply while the contrary was held in Ramchandra v Rakhmabai (o) Under the present rule it is clear that a transferee acquiring title before the Court sale is competent to apply to have the sale set aside Further it was held under the old section that a judgment debtor who had effected a private sale of his property subsequently to the attachment and prior to the Court sale was entitled to apply under that section to set aside the sale (p) This ruling is still good law (q)

Next as regards transfers after Court sale — A obtains a decree against J In execution of the decree certain immovable property belonging to J is sold to C for Rs 166 After the sale to C but before its confirmation under r 92 J sells the property to P for Rs 500 It is clear that if J could apply under this rule to have the sale set aside on payment of the amount mentioned in the rule the pecuniary benefit to him would be great for while the property was sold at the Court sale for Rs 166 it fetched Rs 500 at the private sale Is J the judgment debtor entitled to apply under this rule to have the sale set aside ? Is P the purchaser at the private sale entitled to apply under this rule ? It was at one time held by the Allahabad High Court (r) that neither the judgment debtor nor the subsequent purchaser was entitled to apply under this rule the reason for the decision being that the present rule gives the judgment debtor a last chance of saving the property for himself and that it was no part of the intention of the Legislature that the property should be saved for persons to whom it might be privately sold after the Court sale had taken place The Madras High Court held in its earlier decision that the judgment debtor is not entitled to apply (s) but that the subsequent purchaser is entitled to apply (t) The ground of these decisions was that the judgment debtor having parted with his interest in the property before the application under this rule and so having no interest in the property at the date of the application he was not entitled to apply under this rule unless the sale to the subsequent purchaser was by an unregistered document in which case the judgment debtor would continue to be the owner of the property and could as such owner apply under this rule (u) On the other hand the High Court of Bombay held that the judgment debtor is entitled to apply under this rule but that the subsequent purchaser is not so entitled (v) The ground of the Bombay decision is that as the sale to the auction purchaser has not been confirmed the judgment debtor remains the owner of the property and that he is therefore entitled to apply as a person owning the property within the meaning of this rule As regards the Allahabad decision the Bombay Court said that the object of the present rule was not only to preserve the property in the hands of the judgment debtor but also to save the judgment debtor from monetary loss that might be occasioned to him if the property was sold at the auction sale at an inadequate price As regards the reasoning of the Madras High Court in its earlier decisions the Bombay Court observes that it was not necessary for the purposes of this rule that the judgment debtor should own or have an interest in the property at the date of the application under this rule and that it was sufficient if he owned the property or had an interest in it at the date of the Court sale The High Court of Patna has followed the Bombay decision (w) In a recent case a Full Bench of the Madras High Court overruled its earlier decision and agreeing with the Bombay and Patna decisions held that the judgment debtor was entitled to apply but

89 that the subsequent purchaser was not entitled to apply under this rule (x) The Allahabad High Court also has overruled its earlier decisions and held that the judgment debtor can apply but not the purchaser (y) The High Court of Calcutta has held that the subsequen tpurchaser is not entitled to apply under this rule The reason given is that the interest if any which he held in the property was not by virtue of a title acquired by him before the execution sale and consequently he is excluded by the very terms of the rule ( ) Where two applications are made one by the judgment debtor and another by a mortgagee from him after the sale and each applicant deposits a portion of the aggregate amount required by this rule the deposits and the applications may be treated as made by the judgment debtor and therefore within this rule (a)

Miscellaneous cases —Under the old section it was held that a Mahomedan co heir was not entitled to apply to set side the sale (b) This would seem to be the law under the present rule But it was held that a co sharer was entitled to apply (c) It is doubt ful whether a co sharer is a person entitled to apply under this rule A coparcener in a joint and undivided Hindu family can apply for he has an interest in the whole of the property (d) It has been held under the old section that a durmukaridar can apply (e) The purchaser of a portion of a non transferable occupancy is entitled to apply although the landlord is the auction purchaser (f)

A person who has obtained a mortgage of the property before the Court sale may apply under this rule (g) So also a usufructuary mortgagee in possession (h) But a person who has merely agreed to purchase the property cannot apply under this rule for a mere agreement for sale of immovable property does not of itself create any interest in the property (i) Similarly a person who is out of possession of the property and is litigating to establish his right thereto is not entitled to apply under this rule (j) A lessee subject to whose interest the property is sold is entitled to apply under this rule (k)

Unsuccessful application to stop sale —The mere fact that the applicant had already unsuccessfully applied to stop the sale on payment of the decretal amount and had also put in a claim petition under r 58 above does not preclude him for applying under this rule (l)

Deposit without application —An application is necessary before the Court can act under this rule Mere deposit of the required amount is not enough (m) See notes below Limitation

Deposit of five per cent —The deposit of 5 per cent must be made even though the purcha er may be the decree holder The 5 per cent is intended as a compensation to the purchaser for his trouble and disappointment for the loss of that which was perhaps a good bargain (n)

Mistake in calculating amount to be deposited —No sale will be set aside under this rule unless the whole amount specified in sub r (1) is deposited by the applicant within thirty days from the date of sale If the full amount is not deposited within the aforesaid period even though the default was due to a mistake of an officer of the Court in calculating the amount the sale cannot be set aside But it will be set aside if the officer was charged by the Court to make the calculation and to inform the parties as to the amount to be deposited (o) See notes below Limitation

Less amount received by decree holder—The term received contemplates an actual receipt of the amount by the decree holder A mere payment into Court of the sale proceeds does not constitute receipts within the meaning of this rule (p)

In determining what amount has been received by the decree holder the Court should not give credit to the judgment debtor for any amount paid by a co judgment debtor who has not joined in the application under this rule (q)

Failure to deposit full amount—Where a judgment debtor brought into Court not the amount for the recovery of which the sale was ordered but only the amount realized by the sale plus five per cent with an undertaking to pay the balance it was held that he had not complied with the provisions of this rule and the Court refused to set aside the sale (r) In a Pangoon case the deposit was one day late and a few rupees less than the full amount and the Court said that the small shortage did not vitiate the deposit but that the delay could not be excused (s)

Conditional deposit—A deposit under this rule must be unconditional (t)

For payment to the decree holder*—*Rateable distribution—The expression decree holder in sub sec (1) (b) refers only to the decree holder for satisfaction of whose decree the sale has been ordered It does not include other decree holders who would have a right to claim rateable distribution out of the sale proceeds under sec 73 It is therefore enough if the judgment debtor deposits such amount as is sufficient to satisfy the claim of the decree holder at whose instance the property was sold It is not necessary that the amount deposited by him should be sufficient to satisfy decrees held against him by other decree holders also (u) Again when a judgment debtor deposits in Court a sum sufficient to satisfy the claim of the person for satisfaction of whose decree the property was ordered to be sold the other decree holders are not entitled to a rateable distribution thereof under s 73 (v)

Sub rule (2)—Where a judgment debtor applies to set aside a sale under this rule and subsequently applies under r 90 also he is not entitled to prosecute the application made by him under this rule (w) But the Court should in such a case put the judgment debtor to his election whether he would withdraw the application under r 90 and if he refuses to do so it should dismiss the application made under this rule (x) An application though purporting to be made under r 90 may not really be one under that rule but one under s 47 the provisions of sub r (2) do not apply to such a case (y)

Court—The word Court in this rule means the Civil Court and not in the case of decrees transferred to the Collector for execution the Collector ( ) Hence an

39 application under this rule must be made to the Court and not to the Collector If the judgment debtor applies to the Collector he cannot stop limitation running against him It is the duty however of the Collector in such a case to return the application to the applicant and tell him that the application should be made to the Court (a) See notes Limitation below

Sale of property by separate lots—Where property is sold in separate lots in execution of a decree it is not open to the judgment debtor to apply under this rule to set aside the sale of some only of such lots The application must be to set aside the sale of all the lots (b)

Necessary parties—The auction purchaser as well as the decree holder are necessary parties to an application under this rule (c) See the proviso to r 92 sub r (?)

Limitation—The application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 166] The Court has no power to extend the time under s 148 (d) The words date of sale means the date on which the property is put up for sale and knocked down to the highest bidder and not the date on which the sale is confirmed by the Court [r 92] (e) At the same time it is to be remembered that if for any reason the final bid remains unaccepted for some days by the sale officer the period of 30 days does not begin to run until such bid is accepted by him (f)

The words may apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in Court etc show that not only the application but also the deposit should be made within 30 days from the date of sale It is not enough to make the application within 30 days (g) Nor is it enough to make the deposit within 30 days (h) Both the application and the deposit must be made within 30 days from the date of sale

The law does not impose any period of limitation for the issue to the parties of notice of the deposit (i)

Appeal—The law as regards appeal from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale passed on an application under the present rule is quite different from what it was under the Code of 1882 Such an order under the Code of 1882 [s 310A] was not appealable as an order for it was not included in the list of appealable orders given in s 588 of that Code [now O 43 r 1] But the order being one made in proceeding in execution (j) it was appealable as a decree if the question as to whether the sale should be set aside or not was one between the parties to the suit or their representatives within the meaning of s 244 [now s 47] (k) and in such a case a second appeal also lay from the order passed in first appeal And it was held that if the question was one between the judgment debtor and the decree holder in other words between the parties to the suit it did not cease to be so merely because the auction purchaser (not a party to the suit) was interested in the result (l) But where the question was one between a party to the suit on the one hand and the auction purchaser on the other there was a conflict of opinion as to whether an appeal lay from the order (m) In those cases however in which it was held that no appeal lay from the order it was held that the party aggrieved might apply to the High Court for a revision of the order (n) Under the present Code however an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale [r 92] passed on an application under this rule [r 89] is appealable as an order for it is included in the list of appealable orders given in O 43 r 1 [see cl (j)] The result is that under the present Code only one appeal lies from such an order (o) [see s 104 sub s (1) (i) and sub s (2)] An auction purchaser also can now appeal from an order under this rule Only one appeal is allowed in his case also (p)

Dismissal of application for default—Where an application under this rule is dismissed for default of appearance and the Court refuses to restore it to the file no appeal lies from the order refusing to restore the application (q)

Revision—The High Courts of Patna (r) and Madras (s) have held that the High Court can interfere in revision if an application under this rule has been dismissed on the ground that it was made by a person who was not entitled to apply the reason given being that the decision in such a case is the very foundation of jurisdiction and that the action of the lower Court in refusing to deal with the application in such a case amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction within the meaning of s 115 On the other hand the Allahabad High Court has held that no revision lies in such a case the reason given being that the Court has jurisdiction to decide whether or not the applicant was entitled to apply to set aside the sale and a decision arrived at in the exercise of jurisdiction though wrong is no ground for interference in revision (t)

No revision lies from a decision that an application under this rule was made within time (u)

90 [S 311] (1) Where any immovable property has been sold in execution of a decree, the decree holder, or any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets, or whose interests are affected by the sale may apply to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground of a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting it

Application to set aside sale on ground of irregularity or fraud

Provided that no such sale be set aside on the ground of irregularity or fraud unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity or fraud

90 2 The words any person whose interests are affected by the sale have been substituted for the words any person whose immovable property has been sold under this chapter The expression now substituted is what the Courts held in several cases was the meaning of the expression any person whose immovable property has been sold See notes below Who may apply under this rule

3 The words or fraud have been added after the word irregularity The addition of these words affects the right of appeal as will be seen from the notes below under the head Fraud in publishing or conducting sale "

4 The words unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied have been substituted for the words unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court This alteration has been made with a view to set at rest the doubts raised under the old section as to the evidence upon which the Court could act See notes below Unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied etc

Who may apply under this rule—The only persons that may apply under this rule are—

(1) the decree holder

(2) any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets under s 73

(3) any person whose interests are affected by the sale—an expression obviously of a wider import than the expression a person holding an interest in the property sold used in r 89 above (v)

The words any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets did not occur in the old section but it was held that the expression decree holder included such person (w)

The expression any person whose interests are affected by the sale has been substituted for the expression any person whose immovable property has been sold which occurred in the old section The latter expression was construed as meaning any person whose interests are affected by the sale in the Full Bench case of Asmutunnissa Begum v Ashruff Ali (x) and this interpretation has now been substituted for the original expression Where an application therefore is made by a person other than a decree holder or one entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets such person must be one whose interests are affected by the sale It cannot be said of a person claiming by title paramount to the judgment debtor that his interests would be affected by the sale inasmuch as his title to the property cannot be effected by the sale whether it were regular or irregular Hence a person who claims to be a purchaser of immovable property from the judgment debtor prior to the attachment cannot apply under this rule for the sale being prior to the attachment his interest cannot be legally affected by the sale (y) It has similarly been held that where joint Hindu family property is sold in execution of a decree against a member of the joint family another member claiming the whole property on the death of the judgment debtor by survivorship is not entitled to apply under this rule (z) A co sharer cannot apply under this rule for his share does not pass under the sale (a) But a reversioner entitled to succeed on the death of a

Hindu widow has been held to be entitled to apply under this rule (b) A person who claims to be the purchaser of a tenure prior to attachment from the judgment debtor whose interest in the tenure has been sold in execution of a decree for its own arrears of rent is entitled to apply under this rule for his interests are affected by the sale (c) Where immovable property has been sold in execution of a decree against the ostensible owner as his property a person claiming to be the beneficial owner is entitled to apply under this rule (d) unless his right to the property is in dispute and a suit by him for a declaration of his right is still pending at the date of the application (e)

It has been recently held by the High Court of Calcutta that the expression persons whose interests are affected by the sale is not limited to persons whose proprietary or possessory title is affected by the sale and that it includes persons whose pecuniary interest is affected by the sale Hence it has been held that a decree holder who has attached the property of the judgment debtor in execution of his decree has such interest as would entitle him to apply under this rule to set aside a sale of the property held in execution of a decree obtained by another creditor (f) But a plaintiff who has obtained an attachment before judgment is not entitled to apply under this rule (g)

Auction purchaser —In a case under s 311 of the Code of 1882 their Lordships of the Privy Council held that an auction purchaser was not entitled to apply under that section as he was not a person whose immovable property has been sold within the meaning of that section (h) There is a conflict of opinion whether an auction purchaser is entitled to apply to have the sale set aside under the present rule He is so entitled if he is a person whose interests are affected by the sale within the meaning of this rule The High Court of Madras has held that he is entitled to apply under this rule The Court said If an auction purchaser s interests are affected by an order setting aside the sale it is difficult to see why his interests are not also affected by the sale (i) The High Court of Patna has dissented from this view and held that an auction purchaser is not entitled to apply under this rule In the view taken by that Court the expression interests affected by the sale means interests in the property existing before the sale (j) The Allahabad High Court has declined to follow the Patna decisions and has held that an auction purchaser is entitled to apply under this rule The Court said In the ordinary use of the word [interests] in the English language it is a term covering every sort of interest recognized by law such as in the case of an auction purchaser liability to pay the money liability to complete and take a transfer of the property, and from his own point of view the necessity of finding the necessary funds and also the necessity of carrying through to fruition the provisional contract into which he has entered If the expression were interests in the property it would of course be confined to an interest in the property sold antecedent to the sale If the word were merely interest without the plural and without the words in the property it might be possible to hold that the word interest was confined to interest in the thing itself at the time of the sale But that is not the expression (k) The High Court of Rangoon has held that an auction purchaser is not entitled to apply under this rule (l)

Persons entitled to rateable distribution—It is expressly provided by this rule that a person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets under s 73 is entitled to apply under this rule Hence a person who is not entitled to a rateable distribution as where the application for execution is not made until after the receipt of assets by the Court cannot come in under this rule a a person whose interests are affected by the sale (m)

Conditions of applicability of the rule—A sale held in execution of a decree can be set aside under this rule only if the following conditions concur —

1 There must be a material irregularity or fraud
2 The material irregularity or fraud must be in publishing or conducting the sale
3 The applicant must have sustained substantial injury
4 Such injury must have been caused by reason of the material irregularity or fraud

Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale—The following are instances of material irregularity in publishing or conducting a sale in execution —

1 Service of notice under O 21 r 22 upon a wrong person as legal representative see notes to O 21 r 22 Notice to wrong person as legal representative

1A Omission to specify in the proclamation of sale the extent of the property to be sold or the revenue assessed on it (n) or the amount of income derived from it or the incumbrances to which the property is subject (o) But it has been held that where a sale is held at an earlier hour than that stated in the proclamation (p) or at a place different from that specified in the proclamation (q) the case is not merely one of material irregularity within the meaning of this rule but that the sale is void altogether See r 66 of this Order

2 Misstatement of the value of the property or of Government revenue in the proclamation of sale such as is calculated to mislead intending bidders (r) See r 66 of this Order

3 Omission to affix a copy of the sale proclamation as required by r 67 of this Order (s)

4 Omission to have a drum beaten as required by r 67 of this Order read with r 54 (t)

5 Holding a sale of immovable property before the expiration of 30 days from the date on which the copy of the proclamation has been affixed on the Court house of the Judge ordering the sale (u) See r 68 of this Order

6 Non specification of the hour to which a sale is adjourned (v) See r 69 of this Order

6A Holding a sale on a day other than the one to which it is adjourned (w) See r 69 of this Order

7 Omission to issue a fresh proclamation where a sale is adjourned (x) unless the proclamation has been waived (y) Where a sale proclamation had been issued at the instance of the judgment debtor six times and a fresh proclamation was subsequently issued notifying that in the absence of any order of postponement the sale would be held at the monthly sales commencing on 13th July 1903 at Monghyr but the monthly sales did not begin until 17th July owing to the absence of the presiding officer from the station and the sale in question was held on 20th July in the course of the monthly sales without a fresh proclamation their Lordships of the Privy Council expressed the opinion that in holding the sale on 20th July the Court did not act in contravention of the provisions of the Code and that there was no irregularity in publishing the sale and held that assuming there was irregularity there was no evidence of substantial injury and that the sale was therefore valid ( ) See r 69 of this Order

8 Default in payment of the deposit of 25 per cent as required by r 84 of this Order (a) See notes to r 84

9 Omission on the part of the plaintiff to have a guardian ad litem appointed of a defendant where after decree but before sale the defendant has been adjudged to be of unsound mind (c) See O 32 r 15

10 In a case that went to Privy Council the following irregularities occurred (1) property belonging to a judgment debtor was attached and the judgment debtor died pending the attachment leaving a widow and a minor son but no notice of the subsequent proceedings in attachment was served on any person representing the minor (2) though the property consisted of 109 mouzahs the proclamation of sale was read out without beat of drum in one only of the mouzahs and affixed to a tree in that village and (3) the proclamation did not specify the encumberances to which the property was liable but stated merely the annual profit income and the value of the property with the result that the property was sold at a gross undervaluation Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the above irregularities were all material irregularities and they accordingly set aside the sale (d)

It is to be noted in this connection that if the act or omission complained of amounts to a material irregularity the sale is not void but voidable Being voidable it is liable to be set aside under this rule on the application of any of the persons mentioned in the rule but it cannot be set aside unless it is proved that substantial injury has resulted from the irregularity see the proviso to the rule But where the act or omission complained of amounts to an illegality it render the sale void ab initio and no proof of injury is required In cases (3) (5) (8) and (9) above it was contended that the omission complained of amounted to an illegality and that the sale was therefore void ab initio and that it should therefore be declared void without proof

r 90 of substantial injury But it was held that the omission amounted to a material irregularity only and that the sale was not void but voidable only and it could not therefore be set aside unless substantial injury was proved For instances of sales void ab initio see notes to s 65 Sale when void and when voidable See also notes to O 21 r 22 Omission to give notice and Notice to wrong person as legal representative

No material irregularity—No notice of a sale need be given to a receiver who is not in possession of the property sold. A sale therefore without notice to him is not irregular (e)

Publishing or conducting the sale—Where property not covered by the decree has been proclaimed and sold the case is one of material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale within the meaning of this rule (f) So is an irregular preparation of the proclamation of sale (g)

The expression conducting the sale refers only to the action of the officer who holds the sale The expression does not apply to anything done antecedent to the order of sale (h)

Omission to attach property before sale—The question whether an irregularity in attaching the property as where the attachment is not properly notified effects the sale or is merely an irregularity in conducting the sale within the meaning of this rule was left open by the Judicial Committee in the undermentioned case (i) in Mahadeo v Bhola Nath (j) a full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad held that a regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple decrees for money and when there has been no such attachment the sale is not merely voidable but void In a later case (k) however the same High Court held that the omission to attach immovable property prior to sale amounted to a material irregularity in conducting the sale within the meaning of this rule An attachment it was said is a step towards the sale of the judgment debtor s property As to Mahadeo s case the Court said that it could no longer be treated as good law since the decision of the Privy Council in Tasaddul v Ahmad (l) where it was held with reference to a proclamation of sale issued in violation of the provisions of O 21 r 68 that it was nothing more than a material irregularity and did not ipso facto vitiate the sale On the other hand in a case decided under the Code of 18 0 the High Court of Calcutta expressed the opinion that an attachment is not an essential preliminary in sales in execution of decrees it is merely a measure for the protection of the decree holder and the purchaser of the property and the absence of attachment is not therefore an objection which the judgment debtor is competent to raise (m) This view was adopted by the same High Court in later cases where it was held that after a sale had been confirmed the sale was not to be considered a nullity merely by reason of the absence of attachment (n) The same High Court has held that where an objection that the property proclaimed for sale has not been attached is taken before the sale it is the duty of the Court not to proceed with the sale and to direct an attachment (o) In the more recent case of Panchanan v Kunja (p) decided in 1917 the High Court of Calcutta held that the Court had no jurisdiction to sell property in execution which had not been duly attached and that omission to attach rendered the sale void ipso facto This decision it is submitted is not good law In a Bombay case where the property was sold without previous attachment the sale was set aside the case being treated as one under s 47 (q) The High Court of Rangoon has held that though the absence of attachment is an irregularity it does not render the sale absolutely void but merely voidable and further that the objection as to the absence of attachment does not come within this rule but within s 47 the substantial question involved being one of notice to the judgment debtor (r) The High Court of Patna has taken the same view as was taken in the earlier Calcutta decisions and refused to follow the decision in Pacchanan s case In the Patna case the application to set aside the rule was made before the sale was confirmed while in the Calcutta cases the application was made after the sale was confirmed As to this the Patna Court said that it did not make any difference because if the sale was in fact a nullity by reason of the absence of attachment its subsequent confirmation could not make it valid (s) The High Court of Madras has held that a sale without an attachment is an irregularity within this rule (t) O 21

Fraud in publishing or conducting sale—The words or fraud are new The present rule requires that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale should be made under this rule In the absence of these words in the corresponding s 311 of the Code of 1882 it was held that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud could only be made under s 244 [now s 47] Had it not been for the newly added words or fraud in this rule such applications would have to be made under s 47 of this Code The result would then have been as under the Code of 1882 that a second appeal would lie from an order made on such application for an order made under s 47 has the force of a decree (s 2) and every decree is open to second appeal subject of course to the provisions of ss 100 102 (u) The effect of adding the words or fraud into the present rule is to transfer applications setting up fraud in publishing or conducting the sale from s 47 to the present rule The result is that no second appeal will now lie from an order made on such application whether the order be one setting aside the sale or refusing to set aside the sale for the order is no longer one under s 47 but one under r 92 and only one appeal lies from an order made under r 92 (i) [see O 43 r 1 cl (j) and s 104 sub s (2)] It will thus be seen that the object of the Legislature in requiring applications to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale to be made under the present rule instead of under s 47 is to exclude the right of second appeal from orders made on such applications with a view to bring proceedings on such applications to a speedy termination But though only one appeal is allowed an appeal now lies in every case from an order made under this rule and r 92 even at the instance of an auction purchaser though he may not be a party to the suit in which the sale was held See notes to s 47 Execution purchaser ill (1), p 159

It may here be observed that in a large majority of reported cases in which applications were made to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale the applicant was the judgment debtor and the fraud alleged was that the decree holder had fraudulently kept him in the dark by omitting to serve him with the writ of attachment (r 54) and that no copy of the proclamation of sale was affixed on the property so as to inform him of the execution proceeding In all these cases it was also alleged that the fraud first became known to the judgment debtor when the auction purchaser instituted proceedings to recover possession of the property In some of these cases again the auction purchaser was charged with collusion with the decree holder in perpetrating the fraud upon the judgment debtor (w) The observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Lalla Bunseedhur v Koonwar Bindeseree (x) have a material bearing on the question now under consideration (y) In that case their Lordships said that where a sale is impeached on the ground of fraud a difference must be made between an innocent purchaser and one tainted by the fraud which has brought about the execution sale The question is in the former case which of two innocent parties shall suffer in the latter whether he who has wronged the other party shall be allowed to enjoy the fruits of his wrong doing A Court exercising equitable juris diction may withhold its hand in the one case and yet set aside the sale with or without terms in the other

A charge against a decree holder that he and those who acted in concert with him have acted in such a manner as to prevent the best price from being obtained does not of itself amount to a charge of fraud within the meaning of this rule A obtains a decree against B and obtains leave to bid at the auction sale A then enters into an agree ment with a third person that if that person would not bid at the sale A would sell the property to him if A should become the purchaser The property is put up for sale and purchased by A The agreement does not constitute a fraud within the meaning of this rule though it may have discouraged competition at the auction ( ) In a recent case Sir Lawrence Jenkins C J said The word fraud is very loosely used in this cla s of cases that is cases under r 90 any irregularity is taken to be fraud with the consequences that such a finding involves But a finding of fraud should be reserved for that which is dishonest and morally wrong and it is not sufficient to come to a vague finding of fraud actual fraud must be established (a) The Patna High Court has recently held that where after the publication of the sale proclamation the decree holder agrees with the judgment debtor not to hold the sale if payment was made within a speci fied time and he then proceeds to sell the property in contravention of the agreement it amounts to fraud in the matter of the conduct of the sale within the meaning of this rule (b)

In a recent case (c) their Lordships of the Privy Council said Charges of fraud and collusion—must no doubt be proved by tho e who make them—proved by e tab lished facts or inferences legitimately drawn from those facts taken together as a whole Suspicions and surmises and conjecture are not permissible substitutes for those facts or those inferences but that by no means requires that every puzzling artifice or contrivance resorted to by one accused of fraud must necessarily be completely unravelled and cleared up and made plain before the verdict can be properly found against him If this were not so many a clever and dexterous knave would escape

Substantial injury—Material irregularity or fraud standing by itself is no ground for setting aside a sale There must be substantial injury occasioned by the irregularity or fraud If the Court fails to find both irregularity and injury occasioned thereby it is bound to dismiss the application In other words if there be material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale but no substantial loss is occasioned by the irregularity or fraud the applicant is not entitled to have the sale set aside (d) The substantial injury alleged by the applicant must be proved it cannot be assumed from the mere fact that there was a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale The mere fact that there was a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale will not justify the Court in assuming that substantial injury has thereby been caused Hence although an applicant under this rule may prove material irregularity such as non specification of Government revenue in the proclamation of sale (e) or inadequate description of the property sold (f) or the holding of the sale before the expiry of the period prescribed by r 68 above (g) the sale will not be set aside unless it is proved that had it not been for the irregularity the property would have realized a substantially larger price than what it did at the sale The same rule applies where the sale is impeached on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale

Unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity or fraud — These words form part of the proviso to the rule The language of the proviso to this rule differs from the language of the proviso to the corresponding section 311 of the Code of 1882 which was as follows —

> But no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity

The words unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied have been substituted for the words unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court The object and effect of these alterations will now be explained

If an applicant under this rule proves material irregularity or fraud and if he also proves gross inadequacy of price realised at the sale in other words if he proves substantial injury —is this sufficient to entitle him to succeed under this rule? The answer is that it is not he must also prove that the inadequacy of the price has been caused by reason of the material irregularity or fraud Now there are two possible modes in which this may be proved namely —

(a) by direct evidence that is by evidence connecting the material irregularity or fraud with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect or

(b) by circumstantial evidence that is by evidence of circumstances which will warrant the necessary or at least reasonable inference that the inadequacy of price was the result of the irregularity or fraud complained of

In Tasadduk v Ahmad (h) where a sale was sought to be set aside under the corresponding s 311 of the Code of 1882 on the ground that it was held before the expiration of 30 days from the date of the proclamation (r 68) their Lordships of the Privy Council after referring to that section said —

> In the application of that section [that is s 311] it was incumbent on the [applicants] to have proved that they sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity They gave no such evidence and it would be extremely improbable that injury could have happened from the non compliance with the strict letter of s 290 [now r 68] Their Lordships cannot accept the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner that loss is to be inferred from the mere fact that a sale was held without full compliance with the provisions of s 290 [now r 68] The section [that is s 311] clearly contemplates direct evidence on the subject

Relying on the above passage the High Court of Allahabad held that to succeed under that section the applicant must prove that the inadequacy in the sale price was the result of a material irregularity and that the co existence of an irregularity and an inadequacy however gross in the sale price was not sufficient in the absence of direct evidence to establish a casual connection between the one and the other In other words the applicant must connect the irregularity with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect by means of direct evidence (i) On the other hand it was held by the High Courts of Madras (j) and Calcutta (k) that the fact that the inadequacy of price fetched at the sale was the result of the irregularity complained of might be established either by direct evidence or might be inferred when such inference was reasonable having regard to the nature of the irregularity and the extent of the inadequacy As regards the words direct evidence the High Court of Calcutta said that their Lordships meant by that expression that there must be evidence showing that substantial injury was the necessary result of the irregularity complained of (l)

The distinction between the Allahabad decisions on the one hand and the Madras and Calcutta decisions on the other may be explained by an illustration In execution of a decree obtained by A against B B s one fourth share in certain property is sold for Rs 200 B seeks to set aside the sale alleging that the property was sold at an adjourned sale that no hour was fixed for the sale as required by r 69 that consequently there were only three bidders at the sale and that owing to that circumstance the property fetched the grossly inadequate price of Rs 200 It is proved that the hour to which the sale was adjourned was not fixed in other words material irregularity is proved Substantial injury is also proved by evidence of the sale of a share smaller than one fourth of the same property for Rs 4 000 The fact that there were only three bidders is also proved In such a case the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta would under the old section set aside the sale on the ground that the paucity of bidders could reasonably be ascribed to the non specification of the hour and the low price could reasonably be inferred from the fact of the paucity of bidders (m) The High Court of Allahabad however would not set aside the sale on such an inference That Court would require direct evidence to show that the paucity of bidders was due to the non specification of the hour and that the inadequacy of price was due to paucity of bidders

The words unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied have been substituted in the proviso to give effect to the Madras and Calcutta decisions What is necessary under the proviso is that the Court should be satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of the irregularity or fraud complained of and if the facts proved do so satisfy the Court that is sufficient It is no longer necessary to connect the irregularity or fraud with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect by means of direct evidence The result is that a sale will be set aside under the present rule if there be either direct evidence connecting the irregularity with the inadequacy of price or evidence of circumstances which will warrant the necessary or at least reasonable inference that the inadequacy was the result of the irregularity complained of and the

Allahabad High Court now follows this rule (n) If there be no such evidence the sale must be confirmed (o) O 21

The mere fact that the property realised at the auction sale only one half of the value entered in the proclamation of sale is no ground for setting aside the sale under this rule (p)

Necessary parties —The decree holder is a necessary party to an application under this rule (q) Under the Code of 1882 there was a conflict of opinion whether an auction purchaser was a necessary party to an application under the corresponding s 311 (r) Under the present Code he is clearly a necessary party see the proviso to r 92 sub r (2) Where property is bought at a Court sale by A in the name of B A the beneficial owner is not a necessary party to an application under this rule Hence if an order is made setting aside the sale in a proceeding to which B was a party it will bind A though A was not joined as a party to the proceeding (s)

Bona fide purchaser for value without notice —If the conditions of this rule are satisfied the sale will be set aside though the purchaser may be a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale (t)

Waiver and estoppel —If the judgment debtor knowing of an irregularity or fraud lies by and allows the sale to proceed without objection he will be estopped from impeaching the sale on the ground of irregularity or fraud though substantial injury has been caused In Arunachellam v Arunachellam (u) their Lordships of the Privy Council said It would be very difficult indeed to conduct proceedings in execution of decrees by attachment and sale of property if the judgment debtors could lie by and afterwards take advantage of any misdescription of the property attached and about to be sold which they knew well but of which the execution creditor or decree holder might be perfectly ignorant that they should take no notice of that allow the sale to proceed and then come forward and say the whole proceedings were vitiated In Girdhari Singh v Hurdeo Narain (v) the notification of sale had stated the Government revenue to be Rs 3 146 instead of Rs 8 146 the sale being fixed for the 5th of August 1872 The judgment debtor applied for a postponement of sale and stated that he wished to raise money to pay off the decree holder and in his petition he added Under such circumstances it is prayed that a postponement of one month be granted the attachment and the notification of sale being maintained Upon that petition the sale was postponed for one month without the issue of a second notification The decretal amount not having been paid the property was put up for sale The judgment debtor applied to set aside the sale on the ground that the Government revenue was not correctly stated and that the property therefore fetched a very low price Upon these facts their Lordships of the Privy Council held that though the misstatement of the Government revenue amounted to a material irregularity in publishing the sale

0 the judgment debtor was not entitled to have the sale set aside as the petition amounted to an admission on his part that the notification was correct or that at any rate there was no such mistake or irregularity as would be likely to mislead But it is different where an application for a postponement of sale does not contain any such admission and moreover it is refused. In such a case there is no estoppel (w) The objection as to irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale cannot be taken for the first time in the Court of appeal (x) but it may be so taken if no fresh evidence is necessary (y)

Where no application is made under this rule—If no application is made to set aside a sale under the present rule an order will be made confirming the sale see r 92 below

Questions outside the scope of this rule—The question whether the decree in execution whereof the property was sold was obtained without service of summons on the judgment debtor (z) or whether the decree was obtained by fraud (a) or whether the Court had jurisdiction to sell the property (b) or whether the sale was brought about by the fraud of the decree holder the auction purchaser and others (c) is out ide the scope of this rule See note below application to set aside sale on other grounds

Objections not raised in the application—The Court should not under this rule consider objections not expressly taken in the application (d)

Compromise of proceedings under this rule—It has been held by the Patna High Court that a proceeding to set aside a sale under this rule is not a proceeding in execution within the meaning of O 23 r 4 but that it is a proceeding in the suit itself A compromise therefore of proceedings under this rule may be recorded under O 23 r 3 (e) But this decision is of doubtful authority

Whether O 9 applies to applications under this rule—The provisions of O 9 do not apply to proceedings in execution and therefore do not apply to an application under this rule (f) See notes to O 9 r 9 and O 9 r 13 Whether this rule applies to proceedings in execution See also notes below Appeal

Suit to set aside sale on ground of material irregularity—Where an application made by a judgment debtor under this rate to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale is disallowed and the sale is confirmed under r 92 (1) he is precluded by virtue of the provisions of r 92 (3) from bringing a suit to set aside the sale on the same grounds (g) But this rule does not apply in the case of revenue sales in Madras (h)

Limitation—An application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 166] But where the irregularity affecting the sale has by the fraud of the decree holder or other parties to the sale been kept concealed from the judgment debtor he is entitled to apply under this rule whether the sale has been confirmed or not and the time for making the application is to be computed from the date when the fraud first became known to him (i)

The point of distinction as regards limitation between the old law and the new law is this that while under the Code of 1882 the application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting a sale had to be made under s 244 [now s 47] and the period of limitation for the application was 3 years from the date of sale (j) such application must now be made under the present rule and the period of limitation is 30 days from the date of sale See notes below Application to set aside sale on other grounds

Application to set aside sale on other grounds —When the auction purchaser is the decree holder himself and when an application is made to set aside the sale on a ground other than that covered by the present rule and no application has been made under r 89 the case falls within s 47 and hence there is a second appeal (k) Similarly where a judgment debtor applies to have a sale set aside not only on the ground of material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale but also on the ground that no notice of the application for attachment and sale was given as required by O 21 r 22 the case falls within s 47 and hence there is a second appeal (l) Neither this rule nor r 92 applies to such cases It must however be noted that where an application really comes under the present rule, the mere mention of s 47 in the application will not make it an application under s 47 for the purposes either of an appeal or of limitation (m) See note above Question outside the scope of this rule

Joinder of claim under this rule with claim under sec 47 —A claim to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity under this rule may be combined with a claim for a declaration that the sale is a nullity as the decree was passed after the death of the judgment debtor (n)

Whether sale can be challenged by way of defence in a suit for possession —See notes to r 92 below under the same head

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order under this rule and rule 92 setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale [O 43 r 1 cl (j)] But no second appeal lies from the order of the first appellate Court (o) See s 104 sub sec (2) and notes above Fraud in publishing or conducting sale Nor does an appeal lie under the Letters Patent from the order of the first appellate Court (p) See notes above Application to set aside sale on other grounds

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that an appeal lies from an order dismissing an application under this rule for default the reason given being that the effect of such an order is to confirm the sale under r 92 (q) A fortiori it is so if the order dismissing the application for restoring the original application on the file also confirms the sale (r) These decisions were doubted in a later case (s) which held that the judgment debtor was not entitled to have the sale set aside as the petition amounted to an admission on his part that the notification was correct or that at any rate there was no such mistake or irregularity as would be likely to mislead But it is different where an application for a postponement of sale does not contain any such admission and moreover it is refused In such a case there is no estoppel (w) The objection as to irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale cannot be taken for the first time in the Court of appeal (x) but it may be so taken if no fresh evidence is necessary (y)

Where no application is made under this rule—If no application is made to set aside a sale under the present rule an order will be made confirming the sale see r 92 below

Questions outside the scope of this rule—The question whether the decree in execution whereof the property was sold was obtained without service of summons on the judgment debtor ( ) or whether the decree was obtained by fraud (a) or whether the Court had jurisdiction to sell the property (b) or whether the sale was brought about by the fraud of the decree holder the auction purchaser and others (c) is outside the scope of this rule See note below application to set aside sale on other grounds

Objections not raised in the application—The Court should not under this rule consider objections not expressly taken in the application (d)

Compromise of proceedings under this rule—It has been held by the Patna High Court that a proceeding to set aside a sale under this rule is not a proceeding in execution within the meaning of O 23 r 4 but that it is a proceeding in the suit itself A compromise therefore of proceedings under this rule may be recorded under O 23 r 3 (e) But this decision is of doubtful authority

Whether O 9 applies to applications under this rule—The provisions of O 9 do not apply to proceeding in execution and therefore do not apply to an application under this rule (f) See notes to O 9 r 9 and O 9 r 13 Whether this rule applies to proceedings in execution See also notes below Appeal.

Suit to set aside sale on ground of material irregularity—Where an application made by a judgment debtor under this rate to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale is disallowed and the sale is confirmed under r 92 (1) he is precluded by virtue of the provisions of r 92 (3) from bringing a suit to set aside the sale on the same grounds (g) But this rule does not apply in the case of revenue sales in Madras (h)

Limitation—An application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 166] But where the irregularity affecting the sale has by the fraud of the decree holder or other parties to the sale been kept concealed from the judgment debtor he is entitled to apply under this rule whether an order of dismissal by default is not a confirmation of the sale and does not preclude the party from making a fresh application while a dismissal on the merits or when the applicant does not appear and the opposite party does appear is appealable under O 43 r 1 (j) The case last cited was dissented from by the same High Court in Ansarali v Bhim Sankar (t) where it was held that an appeal lies from an order dismissing an application under this rule for default where such dismissal is for the non appearance of the applicant or for non appearance of both the parties and even when no formal order is recorded under r 92 confirming the sale

91 [S 313] The purchaser at any such sale in execution of a decree may apply to the Court to set aside the sale, on the ground that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold

Application by purchaser to set aside sale on ground of judgment debtor having no saleable interest

Application to set aside sale —This rule enables the auction purchaser to proceed by an application to set aside the sale where the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property It does not apply where a sale is sought to be set aside by an auction purchaser on the ground that he had been induced by misrepresentation or concealment to buy the property for more than its real value (v) The remedy of the purchaser in such a case is by a regular suit As to refund of purchase money when a sale is set aside on the ground that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest see r 93 below In two recent Madras cases a decree holder brought to sale and purchased property which did not belong to the judgment debtor and notified satisfaction of his decree On discovering his mistake he filed a fresh execution application but the Court held that he could not execute again without first setting aside the sale under this rule (w)

No saleable interest —This rule applies only where a judgment debtor has no saleable interest at all Hence the rule does not apply if the judgment debtor has even a partial interest in the property sold (x) however small that interest may be In other words a purchaser is not entitled to have a sale set aside under this rule on the ground that the judgment debtor had a saleable interest in a very small portion of the property and had no saleable interest in the major portion of the property (y) For the purposes of this rule a mortgagor has a saleable interest in the mortgaged property even though a decree has been obtained by the mortgagee for the enforcement of the mortgage (z) and although the amount due under the mortgage exceeds the value of the property (a)

The decision that a sale cannot be set aside under this rule if the judgment debtor has any interest in the property does not apply to a sale under a mortgage decree held under the rules of the Calcutta High Court and the conditions of sale framed thereunder Therefore a purchaser under such a sale is entitled to have it set aside if the property

Compensation for loss of part of property bought at a Court sale —A purchaser who is deprived of a part of the property bought at a Court sale is not entitled to compensation as against the judgment debtor for the loss of that part The principle is that apart from the case provided for by this rule and apart from fraud a purchaser at an auction sale must abide by his bargain What is sold and bought is the right title and interest of the judgment debtor in the property The Court which sells the property does not guarantee the title and the maxim Caveat emptor applies It does not make any difference that the property was sold in execution of a mortgage decree and the mortgagee himself is the purchaser (c) See notes to r 94 below What passes at a Court sale

Sale when to become absolute or be set aside

92 [Ss 312, 314] (1) Where no application is made under rule 89, rule 90 or rule 91, or where such application is made and disallowed, the Court shall make an order confirming the sale, and thereupon the sale shall become absolute

(2) Where such application is made and allowed, and where, in the case of an application under rule 89, the deposit required by that rule is made within thirty days from the date of sale, the Court shall make an order setting aside the sale

Provided that no order shall be made unless notice of the application has been given to all persons affected thereby

(3) No suit to set aside an order made under this rule shall be brought by any person against whom such order is made

Alterations in the rule —

1 The corresponding s 312 of the Code of 1882 applied only to application referred to in r 90 The present rule applies also to applications referred to in rr 89 and 91 [Code of 1882 ss 310A and 313] see sub r (1)

2 In sub r (1) the words as regards the parties to the suit which occurred in s 312 after the words confirming the sale have been omitted.

No suit will lie to set aside an order made under this rule— No suit will lie to set aside an order made under this rule by any person against whom such order is made The only remedy of the party against whom the order is made is to appeal from the order under O 43 r 1 cl (j) Now an order under this rule may be—

(1) either an order confirming the sale or

(2) an order setting aside the sale

Order confirming the sale —An order confirming the sale may be made—

(i) either where no application is made at all to set aside the sale or

(ii) where an application is made and di allowed

No suit will lie in either case to set aside an order confirming the sale (d)

Order setting aside the sale —The language of sub rule (3) makes it clear that no suit will lie to set aside an order setting aside a sale made on an application under rule 89 90 or 91 (e) The party against whom the order is made has a remedy by way of appeal under O 43 r 1 cl (j)

The suits barred under sub rule (3) are suits to set aside (1) an order confirming a sale under sub rule (1) and (2) an order setting aside a sale under sub rule (2) Sub rule (3) refers to applications under rr 89 90 and 91 A suit by an auction purchaser for a return of the purchase money on the ground that the judgment debtor has no saleable interest in the property sold is barred under sub rule (3) for the case is within r 91 above see notes to r 93 Suit for a return of purchase money where no saleable interest But a sale by a judgment debtor to recover property sold in execution of a mortgage decree which was neither included in the mortgage nor in the decree but which found its way into the certificate of sale in some unexplained manner is not barred by sub rule (3) such a case is not one of material irregularity within r 90 nor does it fall under r 89 or r 91 above (f) A person claiming title to a property attached and sold by the Insolvency Court as belonging to the insolvent is entitled to bring a suit to establish his title to the property though his claim has been disallowed by the Insolvency Court The present rule is no bar to such a suit (g)

Whether an execution sale can be challenged by way of defence in a suit for possession—Where a judgment debtor does not question the validity of a sale under r 90 above and a suit is brought by the auction purchaser against him for possession it is not competent to him to challenge the sale in that suit The penalty imposed upon a negligent judgment debtor is set out in r 92 and it is that the Court shall make an order confirming the sale and thereupon the sale shall become absolute This amounts to a judicial determination that none of the objections exists on which the validity of the sale could have been questioned (h) The dismissal however of an application made by a judgment debtor under r 90 does not preclude him in a suit for possession by the auction purchaser from pleading by way of defence that the property sold in execution of a mortgage decree passed against him and bought by the purchaser was not included in the mortgage suit or decree but was fraudulently inserted in the sale certificate (i)

93 [S 315] Where a sale of immovable property is set aside under rule 92, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of his purchase money, with or without interest as the Court may direct, against any person to whom it has been paid

Section 315 of the Code of 1882 —The corresponding s 315 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows —

When a sale of immovable property is set aside under s 310A [O 21 r 89] 312 or 313 [O 21 r 91]

or when it is found that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property which was purported to be sold and the purchaser is for that reason deprived of it the purchaser shall be entitled to receive back his purchase money (with or without interest as the Court may direct) from any person to whom the purchase money has been paid

The repayment of the said purchase money and of the interest (if any) allowed by the Court may be enforced against such person under the rules provided for by this Code for the execution of a decree for money

The second and fourth paragraphs of s 315 have been omitted in the present section. Further the words shall be entitled to an order for repayment have been substituted for the words shall be entitled to receive back which occurred in the third paragraph

No saleable interest —An auction purchaser may under r 91 apply to set aside the sale on the ground that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold If the sale is set aside he may apply under this rule for an order for repayment of his purchase money But no sale can be set aside under r 91 nor can any repayment be ordered under this rule if it is found that the judgment debtor had some saleable interest in the property The reason is that in the case of a sale under a decree of the

93 Court there is no warranty of title either by the decree holder or by the Court as there is in the case of private sales The purchaser must be taken to accept the property with all risks and all defects in the judgment debtor s title It follows that the purchaser is not entitled to any refund even if the judgment debtor has no saleable interest at all Rules 91 and 93 however confer upon him a statutory right to a return of the purchase money in such cases (o)

Suit for return of purchase money where no saleable interest—The Code of 1859 did not contain any express provision for a return of the purchase money to the auction purchaser if it turned out that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property at all Hence it was held that the auction purchaser was not entitled to a return of the purchase money even if the judgment debtor had no saleable interest (p) The right to a return of the purchase money was first given by s 315 of the Code of 1877 That section was in terms similar to s 315 of the Code of 1882 Under the Code of 1882 it was held by all the High Courts (q) following a Full Bench ruling of the Allahabad High Court (r) that a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree could maintain a suit against a decree holder for recovery of the purchase money if it turned out that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold and that he was not limited to the special procedure in the execution department mentioned in that section This view was based principally upon the words may be enforced which occurred in the last paragraph of s 315 It was also held under that section that whether the purchaser proceeded by an application for execution under that section or by a regular suit he was not entitled to receive back his purchase money unless the judgment debtor had no saleable interest at all if the judgment debtor had some saleable interest in the property however small he could not by suit any more than by application obtain a refund of the purchase money in proportion to the extent to which the judgment debtor had no interest (s) It was further held having regard to the words and the purchaser is for that reason deprived of it which occurred in the second paragraph of s 315 that the cause of action did not arise and the period of limitation for a suit under that section did not commence until the purchaser was deprived of the property sold to him (t) It was also held that the purchaser was entitled to proceed by way of suit even after rateable distribution against those among whom the purchase money was distributed (u) It was further held that a suit would lie even after confirmation of the sale if the purchaser was after confirmation deprived of the property as the result of a suit by the lawful owner (v)

The second and fourth paragraphs of s. 315 of the Code of 1882 have now been omitted. The words may be enforced which occurred in s 315 are not reproduced in the present rule The present rule says that if an application is made by the auction purchaser under r 91 to set aside the sale—and such application must be made within 30 days from the date of sale—and the sale is set aside under r 92 the purchaser is entitled to an order for a return of the purchase money The result therefore under the present Code is that if the purchaser does not apply under r 91 to set aside the sale or if an application is made but it is disallowed the Court shall make an order confirming the sale under r 92 (1) If an order is made confirming the sale the purchaser is precluded by r 92 (3) from bringing a suit to set aside the order confirming the sale And it has been held by all the High Courts (w) that under the present Code an auction purchaser is not entitled as he was under the Code of 1882 to bring a regular suit for a return of the purchase money in cases where the judgment debtor has no saleable interest in the property unless he can bring himself within the equitable principles which justify a suit for money had and received to his use (x) The result of these decisions is that if in ignorance of the true facts the purchaser fails to make the application to set aside the sale under r 91 within the period of limitation he can get no relief and the judgment debtor is entitled to take credit for the price of property not belonging to him This may at first sight seem inequitable but the explanation is that while in a private sale there is in the absence of a contract to the contrary an implied covenant for title by the vendor there is no such covenant either by the decree holder or by the Court in the case of a sale in execution of a decree the doctrine of caveat emptor applies to a Court sale The right now given to the purchaser being a creation of the statute the remedy to enforce that right must be confined to that prescribed by the statute That remedy is to apply under r 91 to set aside the sale and if the sale is set aside to apply for a return of the purchase money under r 93 If the Court passes an order refusing to set aside the sale he may appeal from the order under O 43 r 1 (j) the order being one made under r 92 The judgment of the appellate Court is final there being only one appeal from such order He cannot as stated above bring a regular suit to set aside the sale and for a refund of the purchase money as he could under the Code of 1882 (y) O 21

But it is otherwise where the auction purchaser has bought the property in execution of a mortgage decree and the decree as well as the sale is set aside in a separate suit brought by parties interested in the mortgaged property In such a case it has been held that the auction purchaser is entitled to a return of the purchase money his remedy being by an application under s 47 above (z)

Where a sale took place and was confirmed by the Court before the present Code came into force it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the rights of the purchaser must be determined with reference to the provisions of the Code of 1882 and that the purchaser was therefore entitled to maintain a regular suit for a return of the purchase money if the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property (a)

Suit for return of purchase money where sale set aside on ground of material irregularity—Where a sale is set aside on the ground of material irregularity under rr 90 and 92 the auction purchaser may bring a suit for a refund of the purchase money Such right exists independently of the Code The mere use of the expression order in this rule has not the effect of taking away that right (b)

Interest—The Court has power by the express terms of this rule to award interest on the purchase money (c)

Limitation—The period of limitation for an application under this rule is 3 years from the accrual of the right under art 181 of the Limitation Act 1908 (d) The period of limitation for a regular suit in cases governed by the Code of 1882 to recover back the purchase money is 6 years from the accrual of the right under art 120 of that Act (e)

Be entitled to an order—Where an order is made under this rule it may be executed in the manner prescribed for the execution of decrees See s 36 above

94 [S 316] Where a sale of immovable property has become absolute, the Court shall grant a certificate specifying the property sold and the name of the person who at the time of sale is declared to be the purchaser Such certificate shall bear date the day on which the sale became absolute

Certificate to purchaser

Old section—This rule corresponds with the first part of s 316 of the Code of 1882 The second part of that section relating to the vesting of title has been reproduced in s 65 of this Code with an important alteration as regards the time when the property vests in the purchaser

Purchaser s title—See s 65 and notes thereto

The Court shall grant a certificate—The provisions of this rule are mandatory (f)

Certificate of sale—A sale certificate does not transfer the title It is evidence of the transfer (g)

Certificate to legal representative—Where the purchaser is dead the certificate may be granted to his legal representative (h) See s 146 above

What passes at a Court sale—As regards private sales there is in the absence of a contract to the contrary an implied covenant for title by the vendor as provided by the T a f r of Property Act 188 s sub ( ) But as regards sales under a decree of the Court there is no warranty of title either by the decree holder or by the Court Rule 13 of this Order shows that the decree holder when applying for execution has only to specify the judgment debtor s share or interest in the property to the best of his belief and so far as he has been able to ascertain the same Rul 66 shows that the proclamation only professes to specify the particulars prescribed by O 21 that rule including the property to be sold and the judgment debtor's interest therein as fairly and accurately as possible. Hence what passes to a purchaser at a Court sale is the right title and interest of the judgment debtor whatever that interest may be. In other words a purchaser at a Court sale buys the property with all risks and all defects in the judgment-debtor's title except where it is found that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest at all (i). In the latter case the purchaser may apply to have the sale set aside under r 91 of this Order and he may then apply under r 93 for a return of the purchase money. If the purchase money has been distributed amongst the creditors of the judgment debtor under s 73 he may follow the money in their hands (j). But —and this is an important consequence of the purchaser buying only the right title and interest of the judgment debtor —the sale will not be set aside if the judgment debtor has even a partial interest in the property nor will the purchaser be entitled to a refund of the purchase money to the extent to which the judgment debtor had no interest unless the case be one of fraud (k). On the same principle a purchaser in execution of a money decree is bound by the estoppel which binds the judgment debtor whose interest he has purchased (l). The Madras High Court has held that he is not bound in all cases (m).

It has been stated above that what passes to a purchaser at a Court sale in execution of a money decree is the right title and interest of the judgment debtor in the property sold. To determine the nature and extent of the judgment debtor's right title and interest in the property sold the test is as stated by Lord Watson in the course of the argument in Pitta hi Chettiar v Chinnathambiar (n) what did the Court intend to sell and what did the purchaser understand that he bought? These are questions of fact or rather of mixed law and fact and must be determined according to the evidence in the particular case (o). This test was applied in Balvant v Hirachand (p) cited in the next following paragraph and in Abdul A v Appayasami (q) cited in the notes below.

Where a purchaser at a Court sale in execution of a decree against a member of a joint Hindu family buys 4 specific properties A B C and D alleged to belong to him and subsequently there is a partition decree by which properties A B X and Y are allotted to that member the purchaser is entitled only to such of the properties as are common to the sale certificate and the share of that member under the decree namely properties A and B. He is not entitled to have the equivalent of properties C and D out of properties X and Y (r).

A is entitled to 10 annas share in a village. Out of this share he mortgages 6 annas to B. In execution of a simple money decree obtained by C against A a 4 annas share is attached and sold. The presumption is in the absence of specific indications to the contrary that the share sold was the share which was not mortgaged (s).

94 Sale in execution of a mortgage decree —Where mortgaged property is sold in execution of a mortgage decree obtained by the mortgagee against the mortgagor the interest both of the mortgagor and mortgagee passes to the purchaser (t)

Variance between proclamation of sale and sale certificate —O 21 r 66 requires that where property is ordered to be sold in execution of a decree the proclamation of sale should specify as fairly and accurately as possible the property to be sold By the present rule it is provided that where property is sold, and the sale becomes absolute the Court shall grant a certificate specifying the property sold. It sometimes happens that the property as described in the certificate of sale is different from that described in the proclamation of sale In such a case the description of the property in the proclamation of sale is conclusive as to what was the subject matter of the sale As stated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Thakur Barmha v Jiban Ram (u) that which is sold in a judicial sale of this kind can be nothing but the property attached and that property is conclusively described in and by the schedule to which the attachment refers that is the schedule of the attached property in the proclamation of sale Thus where a judgment debtor owned a mahal of which a 10 annas share was mortgaged and the proclamation of sale stated that what was to be sold was a 6 annas share in the mahal included in the mortgage but the purchaser obtained a certificate of sale in which the property described was a 6 annas share in the mahal not included in the mortgage it was held that the sale certificate should be set aside The Court has no power to grant a certificate in which the property described is different from that specified in the proclamation of sale (v) Similarly where the proclamation of sale stated that the whole interest of five brothers in a mortgaged property was to be sold and by a mistake on the part of the officer in charge of the sale the certificate of sale omitted to mention the names of four of them it was held that what was sold to the purchaser was the property as described in the proclamation of sale and not the property as erroneously described in the sale certificate (w) The real question in such case under the present Code of Civil Procedure seems therefore to be what was the sale i e what was bargained and paid for and that must depend not on erroneous statements of what was offered for sale but on what was actually offered for sale and bid for What [is actually] offered for sale [is] determined by the order of the Court and the proclamation (x)

Effect of new interpretation of law on sale —A purchased at a Court sale the right title and interest of B in an impartible zamindari By the law as then interpreted the holder of such a zamindari was only entitled to a life interest in the zamindari [A must therefore be deemed to have purchased only the life interest of B] Subsequently this interpretation of the law was reversed by the Judicial Committee which decided that the holder of an impartible zamindari is entitled to an absolute interest in it and that such interest is alienable The new interpretation does not entitle A to claim that what he purchased at the sale was the absolute interest of B (y)

Amendment of certificate of sale —A purchaser at a Court sale may apply to the Court for amendment of the sale certificate where the description of the property in the certificate differs from that in the proclamation The Court may allow or refuse the amendment but no appeal lies from the order in either case Such an order is not appealable under s 104 Nor is it appealable as a decree under s 47 for the question cannot be regarded as one relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree the decree being fully executed The only question in such a case is whether the certificate given to the auction purchaser gives a right description of the property sold (z)

Limitation —The provisions of the Limitation Act do not apply to an application for a sale certificate The reason is that it is the duty of the Court on the sale becoming absolute to issue a sale certificate and there is no duty imposed on the purchaser to apply for such a certificate The action of the Court in granting the certificate is ministerial and not judicial. The Limitation Act does not apply to applications to the Court to do what it has no discretion to refuse nor to applications for exercise of functions of a ministerial character Hence if the Court fails to issue a sale certificate and the purchaser has thereupon to apply to the Court for a grant of the certificate the application may be made at any time (a)

Effect of certificate of sale on irregularities —All irregularities though material are cured by the certificate of sale (b)

Certificate of sale and res judicata —A sale certificate is just like a deed of sale and it does not operate as a plea of res judicata Where a defendant contends that the act of the Court did not pass title to the property in dispute to the plaintiff and the plaintiff produces a sale certificate the defendant is barred not by sec 11 relating to res judicata but by sec 47 of the Code (c)

Delivery of property in occupancy of judgment debtor

95 [S 318] Where the immovable property sold is in the occupancy of the judgment debtor or of some person on his behalf or of some person claiming under a title created by the judgment debtor subsequently to the attachment of such property and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under rule 94, the Court shall, on the application of the purchaser, order delivery to be made by putting such purchaser or any person whom he may appoint to receive delivery on his behalf in possession of the property, and, if need be, by removing any person who refuses to vacate the same

Delivery of possession to purchaser —The possession contemplated by this rule is khas or actual possession See notes to r 35 of this Order For the form of the order for delivery see App E form No 39

Separate suit for delivery of possession —See notes to s 47 'Questions between the auction purchaser on the one hand and a party to the suit or his representative on the other hand on p 160 above

Procedure under this rule—If the Court finds on inquiry that the property is in the occupancy (1) of the judgment debtor (2) or of some person on his behalf (3) or of some person claiming title under him the Court shall order delivery to be made by putting the purchaser in possession of the property If however the Court finds that the person in possession of the property is holding the property on his own account the Court has no option but to dismiss the application under this rule (d)

It may be observed that a purchaser at a Court sale is not bound to apply for possession under this rule He may at his option bring a regular suit for possession the period of limitation for the suit being 12 years as stated above The remedy by way of application and that by way of suit are concurrent (e) Further the fact that an application has been made under this rule and it is rejected as being time barred (f) or on any other ground (g) is no bar to a regular suit for possession

Regular suit.—The decree holder may either resort to the summary remedy provided by this rule or he may bring a regular suit. Failure on the part of the decree holder to avail himself of the remedy under this rule does not deprive him of his right to bring a regular suit against the party obstructing execution of the decree (i). But if he applies under this rule and fails the order against him is conclusive unless he brings a suit to establish his right to possession as provided by r 103 below. Such a suit must be brought within one year from the date of the order (j). See Limitation Act 1908 Sch. I art 11 A.

Limitation—The period of limitation for an application complaining of resistance or obstruction to delivery of possession of immovable property decreed or sold in execution of a decree is 30 days from the date of the resistance or obstruction (Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 167).

Fresh application for delivery of possession—Under the present Code a holder of a decree for possession of immovable property applies for possession under O 21 r 35 while an auction purchaser applies for possession under O 21 r 95. The present rule deals with obstruction or resistance in obtaining possession. An important question that arises in this connection is whether if a decree holder or auction purchaser who is obstructed or resisted in obtaining possession omits to apply under this rule within 30 days from the date of obstruction or resistance the only other remedy open to him is to proceed by a regular suit or whether he is entitled to a fresh writ of possession. It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (k) and Patna (l) that he is entitled to make a fresh application for delivery of possession and to a fresh warrant for possession. On the other hand it has been held by the High Courts of Bombay (m) and Allahabad (n) that he is not entitled and that his only remedy is by a regular suit.

Purchaser from a judgment debtor pending attachment—The High Court of Madras has held that proceedings can be instituted under this rule against a purchaser from a judgment debtor pending attachment though such a purchaser is not expressly mentioned in the rule The reasons given are (1) that this rule is to be read with r 95 which expressly provides for the institution of proceedings against such a purchaser under that rule and (2) that such a purchaser is a representative of the judgment debtor within the meaning of s 146 so that proceedings which can be instituted against a judgment debtor can also be instituted against him (p)

Resistance or obstruction by bona fide claimant

99 [Cf Ss 331, 335] Where the Court is satisfied that the resistance or obstruction was occasioned by any person (other than the judgment-debtor) claiming in good faith to be in possession of the property on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, the Court shall make an order dismissing the application

When this rule applies—The present rule deals with two cases of claimants in good faith namely (1) persons claiming on their own account and (2) persons claiming on account of some person other than the judgment debtor

Person other than judgment debtor claiming to be in possession on his own account—The word possession as used in this rule is not limited to actual physical possession It includes also constructive possession such as possession through tenants or servants Hence a landlord who is in possession of a property through his tenant is a person in possession of the property on his own account within the meaning of this rule (r)

Where in a suit brought by a plaintiff against two defendants a decree is passed by consent against one of them only the other defendant is not a judgment debtor He is a person other than the judgment debtor within the meaning of this rule (s)

Sub tenants—A lets his house to B B sub lets the house to C A files a suit against B for possession and obtains a decree against B C is not joined as a party to the suit C obstructs A in obtaining possession of the property Can C be said to be in possession on his own account within the meaning of this rule? The High Court of Calcutta (t) has held that the words any person claiming to be in possession on his own account mean any person claiming to be in possession as a matter of fact on his own account and that a sub tenant is such a person. On the other hand the High Court of Bombay (u) has held that the words any person claiming to be in possession on his own account means any person claiming to be in possession on his own title, and that a sub tenant is not such a person. The Bombay High Court has also held that C is not entitled to claim the benefit of the Bombay Rent Act against A there being no privity of contract between him and A (v)

100 [S 332] (1) Where any person other than the judgment debtor is dispossessed of immovable property by the holder of a decree for the possession of such property or, where such property has been sold in execution of a decree, by the purchaser thereof, he may make an application to the Court complaining of such dispossession

Dispossession by decree holder or purchaser

(2) The Court shall fix a day for investigating the matter and shall summon the party against whom the application is made to appear and answer the same

Rules 100 and 101 —These rules are to be read together

When this rule applies —This rule refers to a person who has been dispossessed by an auction purchaser who has taken possession of the property through the Court He complains to the Court of such dispossession and the Court makes a summary investigation and if it holds that the applicant was in possession of the property on his own account and not on account of the judgment debtor it directs under r 101 that possession be given back to the applicant The party against whom the order is made may then institute a suit under r 103 to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property (w)

Any person other than the judgment debtor —See notes to s 47 Representatives on p 156 A purchaser of a portion of a holding from a judgment-debtor is his representative and is not entitled to apply under this rule (x) The Patna High Court has held that a purchaser from a judgment debtor of a non transferable holding is also a representative and not entitled to apply (y) But the Calcutta High Court has come to the opposite conclusion and says that so far as the decree holder is concerned he is a trespasser and is entitled to apply under this rule (z)

Is dispossessed —Where mere symbolical possession is delivered to the decree holder or purchaser under r 96 the person in possession cannot be said to be dispossessed within the meaning of this rule so as to entitle him to apply under this rule (a) It is only the delivery of actual possession (r 95) that can constitute dispossession within the meaning of this rule A person who is in possession through his tenant will be said to be dispossessed within the meaning of this rule if the tenant is

Dismissal of application for default—It was held by the Patna High Court in the undermentioned case (d) that when an application made under this rule by a person not bound by the decree is dismissed for default the order may be set aside under O 9 r 9 and the application may then be reheard But this decision was disapproved by a Special Bench of the same Court in a later case (e) See notes to O 9 r 9 Whether this rule applies to proceedings in execution

Bona fide claimant to be restored to possession

101 [Ss 332 335] Where the Court is satisfied that the applicant was in possession of the property on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment debtor, it shall direct that the applicant be put into possession of the property

Was in possession on his own account—A member of a joint Hindu family cannot be said to be in possession of any particular portion of the joint property on his own account His possession is the possession of the family (f)

Appeal—The Chief Court of the Punjab has held that no appeal lies from an order made under this rule (h) On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Madras that where an application under r 100 is contested between persons who were parties to the suit or representatives of parties the case falls within s 47 and an appeal lies from the order (i) The Madras decision assumes that questions arising under r 100 are questions relating to the execution discharge and satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of s 47 Upon this point there is a conflict of decision The matter is discussed fully in the notes to s 47 Questions between the auction purchaser on the one hand and etc It is submitted that r 103 excludes an appeal from the order

If an order is made under r 99 or r 101, it is conclusive against the party against whom it i made unless he brings a suit to establish his right as provided by r 103 below This rule provides that nothing in rr 99 and 101 applies to resistance by a transferee pendente lite from the judgment debtor If an order is made in execution proceedings in such a case r 103 does not apply The Oudh Court has held that where a transferee pendente lite pays off a prior usufructuary mortgage and enters into posse sion of the property and re ists the decree holder in obtaining possession he must be treated in relation to his position as a purchaser from the possessory mortgagee and that the case falls within r 99 above and is not affected by the rule of pendente lite (j)

103 [S 332 fourth para S 335, second para] Any party not being a judgment debtor against whom an order is made under rule 98, rule 99 or rule 101 may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property but subject, to the result of such suit (if any), the order shall be conclusive

Or lers conclu ive ubject to r s la suit

Suit to establish right to present possession—The suit must be brought within one year from the date of the order Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 11A If no suit is brought within the aforesaid period the order will be conclusive (k)

This rule does not apply unless an order has been made under r 98 r 99 or r 101 Therefore where an application is made under r 97 or r 100 but the Court declines to pass any order upon the application thinking it best that the applicant should be referred to a separate suit the present rule does not apply and any suit which the applicant may subsequently institute for possession is not a suit under this rule and it is not therefore governed by art 11A of the Limitation Act (l) Not only is it necessary that an actual order should have been made but the order must have been one made after investigation as contemplated by r 97 sub r (2) and r 100 sub r (2) An order dismissing an application for default of prosecution is not an order made after investigation. The present rule therefore does not apply to such an order (m)

Scope of suit under this rule—It must not be supposed that a suit under this rule is concerned only with actual possession at the date of the order The suit is to establish the right which the plaintiff claims to the present possession of the property and this right may be established without showing that the plaintiff was in actual possession at the date of the order against him (n)

Death, Marriage and Insolvency of Parties

1 No abatement by party's death if right to sue survives

1 [S 361] The death of a plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate if the right to sue survives

Right to sue —The right to sue means the right to bring a suit asserting a right to the same relief which the deceased plaintiff asserted at the time of his death (r)

In what cases the right to sue survives and in what cases it does not.—To answer this question we may turn to the provisions of—

II Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 sec 306—Section 306 of the Succession Act is as follows All demands whatsoever and all rights to prosecute or demand any action or special proceedings existing in favour of or against a person at the time of his decease survive to and against his executors or administrators except causes of action for defamation assault as defined in the Indian Penal Code or other personal injuries not causing the death of the party and except also cases where after the death of the party the relief sought could not be enjoyed or granting it would be nugatory

The effect of this section is that the right to sue does not survive in the following cases —

(i) Suits for defamation assault or other personal injuries not causing the death of the party [Where death is caused by a personal injury the legal representative of the deceased may sue the wrong doer for damages see Act 13 of 1855]

(ii) Cases where after the death of the party the relief sought could not be enjoyed or granting it would be nugatory

9 An action to recover damages for breach of contract of marriage abates on the death of the plaintiff Balubhai v Nanalal (1920) 44 Bom 446 55 I C 624

10 A sues B for damages for malicious prosecution A dies pending the suit Does the right to sue survive? The Calcutta High Court has held that it does and that A s legal representative is entitled to continue the suit (s) On the other hand it has been held by the High Courts of Bombay (t) Patna (u) Madras (v) and Allahabad (w) that the right to sue does not survive and that the suit abates on A s death

11 The right to sue for damages for breach of contract the right to sue on a promissory note the right to sue for a debt the right to sue on a mortgage the right to sue for wrong done to property are all instances of rights that are not extinguished on the death of the plaintiff or defendant In all these cases the suit does not abate on the death of the plaintiff or defendant An agreement referring matters in dispute to arbitration is not in this country revoked by the death of any of the parties thereto before the award is made Hence the question whether the legal representative of a deceased party is or is not entitled to enforce the contract to refer is a question which would depend upon whether the right dealt with in the reference is of a purely personal nature or is one which survives to the legal representative (x)

Partial abatement—A suit may abate as to one of the reliefs claimed and not as to another Plaintiff sued under sec 92 for the removal of a trustee and for the settlement of a scheme On the death of the trustee the suit as for his removal abates but not so far as it prayed for the settlement of a scheme (y) See notes to sec 92 Death of defendant trustee pending suit on page 282 above

Death of either party pending appeal—Where a decree has been passed for the plaintiff in a suit in which the right to sue would not have survived had the plaintiff died before decree and either party dies pending an appeal preferred by the defendant from the decree the appeal does not abate (z) But if the plaintiff s suit is dismissed and the plaintiff has appealed from the decree and either party dies pending the appeal the appeal will abate (a)

A su[illegible] for damages for defamation but the suit is dismissed A appeals from the decree. Pending the appeal A dies. A's representative is not entitled to prosecute the appeal. The reason is that the decree in the original suit being against A, what is sought to be enforced in appeal is A's right to sue. But the right to sue in a suit for defamation does not survive to the legal representative; hence the appeal abates. Similarly if B dies pending the appeal, A is not entitled to continue the appeal against B's representative, not even if A's suit was dismissed with costs (b).

2 [S 362] Where there are more plaintiffs or defendants than one, and any of them dies, and where the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, the Court shall cause an entry to that effect to be made on the record, and the suit shall proceed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs, or against the surviving defendant or defendants.

Procedure where one of several plaintiffs or defendants dies and right to sue survives

Executors and trustees—Where a suit is brought by executors or trustees, the right to sue on the death of any one of them survives to the surviving plaintiffs alone. Where a suit is brought against executors or trustees, the right to sue survives against the surviving defendant alone.

Joint Hindu family—See notes to r 3 below, "Joint Hindu Family and legal representative".

3 [Ss 363, 365, 366] (1) Where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or a sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff dies and the right to sue survives, the Court, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party and shall proceed with the suit.

Procedure in case of death of one of several plaintiffs or of sole plaintiff

(2) Where within the time limited by law no application is made under sub-rule (1), the suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned, and, on the application of the defendant, the Court may award to him the costs which he may have incurred in defending the suit, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased plaintiff.

Alterations in the rule.—

1. The words "so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned" in sub-rule (2) are new. See notes below, "The suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned".

(b) Jo[illegible] v S[illegible] (1910) 34 Mad [illegible] 6 5 I C 937; S[illegible]klat v Bella (19[illegible]4) Rang 91 80 [illegible] I C 744 ([illegible]4) A I R [illegible]17

2 The words the suit shall abate in sub rule (2) have been substituted for the words the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate which occurred in sec 366 of the Code of 1882 The latter words gave rise to a conflict of opinion as to whether an order that a suit shall abate was appealable The High Courts of Bombay (c) and Madras (d) held that such an order was a decree and was therefore appealable The Allahabad High Court (e) held that the order was not appealable No such question can arise under the present rule for it is no longer necessary to make an order that the suit shall abate The suit abates ipso facto if no application is made under sub rule (1) within the time limited by law It has been so held by the High Court of Lahore (f) and a Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad (g)

Limitation—The application under this rule must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased plaintiff or appellant Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 176

The suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned—Where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiffs or plaintiff alone the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs may proceed with the suit This is the case dealt with in r 2 above The present rule provides inter alia that where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiffs alone the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff ought to be made a party to the suit For this purpose an application should be made to the Court and it must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased plaintiff Sub rule (2) provides that where no such application is made the suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned The words italicized above mean that the suit shall primarily abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned but they do not mean that the suit shall in no case abate as a whole If the suit is of such a nature that it can proceed in the absence of the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff it will abate so far only as the deceased plaintiff is concerned A suit by the partners of a firm to recover a partnership debt is a suit of this nature so that if one of the partners dies pending the suit and his legal representative is not brought on the record the suit will abate only so far as the deceased partner is concerned (h) But if it is of such a character that it cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative it will abate as a whole A suit by some of the partners of a firm against the other partners for dissolution and for accounts is a suit of this character so that if one of the plaintiffs (or defendants) dies and his legal representative is not brought on the record the suit will abate as a whole (i) See notes above Alterations in the rule No 1

This rule applies to appeals—The provisions of this rule apply not only to the case of a deceased plaintiff but to the case of a deceased appellant [see sec 107 and r 11 below] Therefore where one of two or more appellants dies and the right to appeal does not survive to the surviving appellant alone the legal representative of the deceased appellant ought to be brought on the record If this is not done the appeal will abate so far as the deceased appellant is concerned But the appeal will abate as a whole if the case is of such a nature that the appeal cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative of the deceased appellant

There is one class of cases in which the appeal cannot abate as a whole but abates only so far as the deceased appellant is concerned and these are cases which come within O 41 r 4 corresponding with sec 544 of the Code of 1882 O 41 r 4 provides that where there are two or more plaintiffs or defendants in a suit and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants any one of the plaintiffs or of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree and thereupon the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or all the defendants as the case may be Where several plaintiffs or defendants jointly appeal from a decree in a case to which O 41 r 4 applies and one of the appellants dies pending the appeal but his legal representative is not brought on the record within the period of limitation the appeal abates so far only as the deceased appellant is concerned and not as a whole A and B sue C D and E for possession of certain property alleging that it had been unlawfully dispossessed by the defendants The defence is that the land belongs to C D and E The Court finds that the property belongs to the plaintiffs and a decree is passed in favour of the plaintiffs C D and E appeal from the decree E dies pending the appeal but his legal representative is not brought on the record within the period of limitation. A and B (respondents) contend that the appeal has abated as a whole and it could not therefore be proceeded with. Does the appeal abate as a whole? No it abates only so far as the deceased appellant is concerned and the appeal should therefore be proceeded with. The reason is that the ground of appeal being common to all the appellants viz that they were the lawful owners of the land any one of them might have appealed from the whole decree under O 41 r 4 and so the death of one of the appellants cannot affect the right of the other appellants to proceed with the appeal. The same principle applies to suits for partition redemption and for a declaration of title to the property in suit (j) The High Court of Calcutta holds that O 41 r 4 does not apply on the grounds that a decree cannot be varied or reversed in favour of a person who is dead, and that the appeal having abated the rights between the deceased appellant and the respondents must be deemed to have been determined by the decree of the lower Court (k) In one Calcutta case A B and C sued D E and F for ejectment but the suit was dismissed A B and C appealed from the decree A died pending the appeal but no steps were taken to bring his legal respresentative on the record within the period of limitation It was held that the appeal abated as a whole It was also held that if at the hearing of the appeal B and C instead of asking for ejectment asked only for joint possession with D E and F the Appellate Court could grant leave to them to amend the plaint by asking for joint possession though on terms that they should pay all costs incurred up to that date (l) See notes to r 4 below Suit or appeal shall abate as against the deceased defendant or respondent

Suit for pre emption —A decree in a suit for pre emption passed against the defendants respondents in ignorance of the death of one of them and without bringing his legal representative on the record is a nullity as the right to sue in such a case does not survive against the surviving defendants alone (m) On the other hand when three plaintiffs appeal from a decree dismissing their suit for pre emption and one of them dies pending the appeal and his legal representatives are not impleaded the appeal abates as regards the deceased alone for each pre emptor has an independent right to pre empt (n) Where the plaintiffs obtain a joint decree for pre emption against the vendor and the purchaser without any adjudication under O 20 r 14 (2) of their respective rights they each have the right to pre empt the whole property If one or the plaintiffs respondents dies pending an appeal from the decree and the appeal is allowed without his representatives being joined the appeal abates as to that plaintiff only and the representative is entitled to possession if the pre emption money is paid over to the purchaser defendant with the consent of the surviving plaintiffs respondents A stranger purchaser cannot be required to submit to a partial pre emption nor is he entitled to demand it (o)

Legal representative of deceased plaintiff—The expression legal representative is defined in sec 2 (11) On the death of a Hindu widow pending a suit to recover property belonging to her deceased husband the reversionary heir of the husband are her legal representative within the meaning of this rule (p) On the death of a Hindu female to recover her father property from strangers the next heirs of the father are her legal representatives within the meaning of this rule (q) On the death of a reversioner pending a suit for a declaration against a Hindu widow that an alleged adoption is invalid the next reversioner is the legal representative and he is entitled to be brought on the record as such (r)

It has been held by the High Court of Madras that where a suit is brought by a minor Hindu for partition and the minor die pending the suit his legal representatives are not entitled to continue the suit the reason given being that the rule that the mere institution of a suit for partition effects a severance of the joint estate is not applicable to a suit by a minor as it is for the Court to determine in such a suit whether a decree for partition will be beneficial to the minor (s)

A suit brought by the head of a mutt on behalf of the mutt may be continued on his removal by his successor in office The successor is not a legal representative but a person on whom the interest in the trust property devolves within the meaning of r 10 below Hence r 10 and not the present rule applies to such a case (t)

Two or more legal representatives—We next proceed to consider the question whether if there are two or more legal representatives they should all be made parties? A Mahomedan plaintiff dies pending a suit brought by him leaving three sons A B and C A alone applies to be brought on the record in place of the deceased and he is brought on the record as plaintiff No application is made to bring B and C on the record within the period of limitation Does the suit abate? It does according to the Allahabad High Court (u) According to that Court the expression legal representative must when there are two or more legal representatives be read in the plural It has accordingly been held by that Court that all the legal representatives must be brought on the record as plaintiffs and if any one of them refuses to be joined as a plaintiff he should be joined as a defendant The High Courts of Bombay Madras and Lahore agree with the Allahabad High Court in holding that the expression legal representative must be read in the plural but hold that if some of the representatives are unwilling to join in the application or if one or more of the legal representatives

Joint Hindu family and legal representative—The High Court of Patna has held that this rule is to be applied even if the plaintiffs are members of a joint Hindu family and that r 4 is to be applied even if the defendants are members of a joint family According to that Court the legal representatives of a deceased coparcener within the meaning of sec 2 (11) are the surviving coparcener and the latter must be brought on the record in their representative character though they may be already on the record in their own capacity (w) On the other hand it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the case of members of a joint Hindu family is governed by r 2 above that is the right to sue survives to or against the surviving coparceners alone and if they are already on the record it is not necessary to bring them on the record in their representative capacity also (x)

Legal representative already on record in another character—The Lahore High Court in one case (y) held that the fact that the legal representative of the deceased party is already on the record in his individual capacity does not dispense with the application of this or the next rule This decision was dissented from in a latter case (z) on the ground that rule 2 is independent of and in no way subject to the provisions of rule 4 (or of rule 3) The High Court of Patna has held that the fact that one of the legal representatives of a deceased party is already on the record but not as such does not prevent the abatement of the suit or appeal and the other party to the suit is not thereby relieved from the duty of applying within time for the substitution of the legal representative of the deceased (a) As to joint Hindu family see notes above

A B and C sue D and E for possession of certain lands A dies pending the suit leaving B and C as his heirs No application is made by B and C to bring them on record as the legal representatives of A Held by the Rangoon High Court that the suit abates only as to A and not as a whole the reason given being that the surviving plaintiffs themselves are the sole legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff (b)

Determination of question as to legal representative—The present rule presupposes that the party claiming to represent the deceased plaintiff is his legal representative If there is a dispute as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff it should be determined by the Court under r 5 below (c)

What pleas may be taken by a legal representative—The legal representative of a deceased plaintiff can only prosecute the cause of action as originally framed (d) Likewise the defendant can raise no defence against the legal representative other than what he could have raised against the deceased plaintiff himself (e) But this is not the case if the real defendant is an institution such as a temple which may be represented at different stages by different trustees For if the original suit is against the trustee

3 who created a debt agreeing to pay it out of the temple funds and that trustee is removed it is open to his successor to raise the plea not taken by the first trustee namely that the temple funds were not liable for the debt The devolution of interest in such a case is the one contemplated by r 10 below and not r 4 (f)

A Hindu son sues his father and the purchaser from the father to set aside a sale of ancestral property made by the father alleging that the sale was without legal necessity The son dies pending the suit As the father s sale is impeached the father is not the proper legal representative but some other member of the family interested in setting aside the sale must be appointed (g)

Minor applicant—A minor is as much entitled to be made a party as the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff as an adult But he must apply through a next friend (h)

Death of plaintiff after perliminary and before final decree—In some cases (i) the rule has been applied where plaintiff dies after the preliminary decree but before the final decree These cases are however rendered obsolete by the dictum of Privy Council in Lachmi Narain v Balmukund (j) that a decree once passed confers rights and imposes liabilities which are fixed until the decree is reversed or varied in appeal The later decisions are that the suit cannot abate between preliminary and final decree (k)

Death after final decree—The provisions of this Order do not apply where a party dies after the final decree is passed Thus if A sues B but the suit is dismissed and A dies after the dismissal his legal representative may appeal from the decree without making any application under this rule to be brought on the record in place of the deceased (l) After a preliminary decree was passed on a mortgage a compromise decree was passed which operated as a final decree The plaintiff died after the final decree It was held that the legal representative could apply for execution under O 21 r 16 and there was no occasion for substitution (m) See also r 12 below

Death of pauper applicant—Where there is only an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis and the applicant dies before the leave is granted the right to sue as a pauper being a personal right cannot survive to his legal representative But the legal representative may present a fresh application for leave to sue in forma pauperis or he may institute a suit for the same relief which the deceased claimed if the right to sue survives (n)

Effect of abatement on rights of parties—Where a suit has abated and the abatement has not been set aside under r 9 below the defendant is entitled as long as he continues in possession of the suit property to plead against the plaintiff and those claiming under him that the order of abatement is conclusive of the rights to the property In such a case the order of abatement operates as a judgment in favour of the defendant to the same extent as a judgment on the merits (o)

Suit under O 1 r 8 and abatement—See notes to O 1 r 8, Abatement of suit and Abatement of appeal

Execution proceedings—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution See r 12 below

Revision—When the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff applies within the prescribed period to have his name entered on the record the Court is bound under this rule to enter his name If the Court fails to do so it amounts to a failure to exercise jurisdiction vested in it by law under this rule and the High Court may interfere in revision under sec 115 (p)

Appeal—The decisions on the question of appeal are not uniform In some cases to be presently considered the alteration introduced in the present rule namely the substitution of the words the suit shall abate for the words the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate which occurred in the corresponding sec 366 of the Code of 188_ has not been noticed see notes above Alterations in the rule No 2 We proceed to consider the decisions of each High Court separately

Madras—The Madras High Court has held that where on the death of a plaintiff two rival claimants apply to the Court to be brought upon the record as the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff and the Court decides in favour of one of them and against the other the party against whom the decision is given is not entitled to appeal the reason given being that there is no abatement of the suit in such a case as the suit can be proceeded with by the other claimant (q) A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has also held that even if a sole plaintiff dies and only one person claims to be his legal representative an order refusing his application to be brought on the record is not one from which an appeal lies (r) But the Court declined to express an opinion as to what the consequence would be if the petitioner appeals against the actual order of abatement or dismissal Presumably section 146 would enable him to do so as a person claiming under the deceased plaintiff

Allahabad—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that no appeal lies from an adjudication that a suit (s) or an appeal (t) has abated whether the abatement is due to the fact that no application was made to bring the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff on the record (u) or the abatement follows on the dismissal of the application made by a person to be brought upon the record as the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff (v) the reason given being that such an adjudication does not amount to a decree In a recent case where A had obtained an ex parte decree against B and B had applied to set aside the decree and thereafter B died and on B s death his son applied to continue the application and the application was granted notwithstanding opposition on A s part it was held that the case did not fall either under r 3 or r 4 of this order and that no appeal lay from the order (w) See sec 146 above

Lahore—In a case where a person applied to be brought on the record as the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff and the Court refused the application on the ground that he was not the legal representative and also made a separate order recording that the suit had abated inasmuch as no application by any legal representative had been made held by the High Court of Lahore that the order dismissing the application was not appealable under the Code as it was really a matter collateral to the suit As to the order recording the abatement the Court said it would amount to a decree and be appealable as such if the applicant was already a party to the suit in another character (x) In another case (y) where an appeal was declared to have abated as a whole it was held following a Full Bench ruling of the same High Court (z) that whether the final decision was called an abatement or a dismissal it came within the definition of decree and was appealable as such the applicants having been parties to the suit

Oudh —The Oudh Court has held that a decision that a suit has abated coupled with a refusal to bring the legal representative on the record on the ground that the cause of action did not survive operates as a decree and is appealable (a)

4 [S 368] (1) Where one of two or more defendants dies and the right to sue does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, or a sole defendant or sole surviving defendant dies and the right to sue survives, the Court, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representative of the deceased defendant to be made a party and shall proceed with the suit

Procedure in case of death of one of several defendants or of sole defendant

(2) Any person so made a party may make any defence appropriate to his character as legal representative of the deceased defendant

(3) Where within the time limited by law no application is made under sub rule (1), the suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words used in sec 368 of the Code of 1882 were any person whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant The words used in the present rule are the legal representative of the deceased defendant See notes below Effect of decree against legal representative of deceased defendant

2 Sub rule (2) is new

3 The words as against the deceased defendant in sub rule (3) are new See notes below The suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant

Suit —The word suit in this rule includes an appeal and the word defendant a respondent see r 11 below

Limitation —The application under this rule must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased defendant or respondent Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 177 The alteration in the language of art 177 as it stood in the Limitation Act 1877 art 175 C clearly shows that the word respondent in the present article is not confined to a respondent only in first appeal as was held by the High

Court of Madras under the old article (b) but that it includes a respondent also in second appeal was held by the High Court of Calcutta and Allahabad (c) See also r 11 below

Where no application made within the period of limitation—The application to bring the legal representative of the deceased defendant on the record should as stated above be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased defendant If no such application is made within the aforesaid period the suit abates as against the deceased defendant [sub rule (3)] though the plaintiff was ignorant of the death of the deceased (d) After abatement the only course open to the plaintiff is to make an application under r 9 sub r (2) to have the abatement set aside Such an application should be made within 60 days from the date of the abatement [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 171] but the Court may entertain the application even after 60 days if sufficient cause is shown (e) [see r 9 sub r 3 and Limitation Act 1908 s 5] As to the inherent power of the Court to bring the legal representative of a deceased defendant on the record after abatement see notes below It may be stated that where a defendant dies pending a suit it is open to its legal representative to apply to be brought on the record notwithstanding the plaintiff s omission to implead him (f)

The suit or appeal shall abate as against the deceased defendant or respondent—Where one of two or more defendants dies and the right to sue survives against the surviving defendant or defendants alone the suit should be proceeded with as against the surviving defendant or defendants This case has been dealt with in r 2 above The present rule provides inter alia that where one of two or more defendants die and the right to sue does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone the legal representative of the deceased defendant ought to be made a party to the suit For this purpose an application should be made to the Court and such application must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased defendant Sub rule (3) provides that where no such application is made the suit shall abate as against the deceased defendants The word as against the deceased defendant are new In the absence of these words in the corresponding section 368 of the Code of 1882 it was contended in a large number of cases governed by that section that where no application was made to bring the legal representative of a deceased defendant or respondent on the record within the period of limitation the suit or appeal abated not only as against the deceased defendant or respondent but as a whole But this contention was overruled and the Courts held that a distinction ought to be made between cases in which a suit or appeal could proceed in the absence of the legal representative and those in which it could not In the former case it was held that the suit or appeal abated only as against the deceased defendant or respondent in the latter case that it abated as a whole Sub r (3) of the present rule makes it clear that where no application is made to bring the legal representative on the record within the time limited by law the suit or appeal abates primarily as against the deceased defendant or respondent only and that it does not abate necessarily as a whole This sub rule gives legislative recognition to the rulings under the Code of 1882 The result is that as under the Code of 1882 so under the present Code if a case is of such a nature that the suit or appeal can proceed without bringing on the record the legal representative of the deceased defendant or respondent the suit or appeal abates as against the deceased

defendant or respondent only (g) A suit on a joint and several promissory note against the promisers is a suit of this nature But if the suit or appeal cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative the suit or appeal will abate as a whole (h) A suit by a partner against his co-partners for dissolution of partnership and for accounts is a suit of this nature [see ill. (2) under the head II Cases in which suit or appeal held to abate as a whole

The test often adopted in such cases is whether in the event of the appeal being allowed as against the remaining respondents there would or would not be two contradictory decrees in the same litigation with respect to the same subject matter It is clear that a Court should not be called upon to make two inconsistent decrees about the same property and in order to avoid conflicting decrees the Court has no alternative but to dismiss the appeal as a whole If on the other hand the success of the appeal would not lead to such a result there is no valid reason why the Court should not hear the appeal and adjudicate upon the dispute between the parties who are before it (i)

The High Court of Calcutta has held that where the plaintiffs are joint owners and a decree is passed for them for possession and the defendant appeals from the decree making the plaintiffs respondents and one of the plaintiffs-respondents dies pending the appeal the appeal abates as a whole the reason given being that the Court should not be called upon to make two contradictory decrees in the same litigation, which would be the result if the appeals were allowed as against the surviving joint owners, and the decree of the lower Court left undisturbed as against the deceased joint owner (j).

A and B sue C D and E for declaration of title and for possession and a decree is passed for them. C D and E appeal from the decree Pending the appeal C dies No steps are taken to bring his legal representative on the record within the period of limitation According to the Calcutta decision the appeal abates as a whole The reason given is that if the defendants succeed in the appeal then there would be two decrees one against the surviving plaintiffs respondents and another decree of the lower Court in favour of the deceased plaintiff to the effect that the property in suit belongs to the plaintiffs of which he was a proprietor Further as to O 41 r 4 the Calcutta High Court has said that the rule is limited to the case of appellants and does not apply to the case of respondents (k) On the other hand the High Court of Bombay has held that the appeal abates only as against deceased and it should be heard on the merits against the other joint owners After the appeal is heard on the merits the Court may pass such decree as the case may require (l) It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that where a joint decree is passed in a suit for redemption of a mortgage brought by two or more plaintiffs and the defendants appeal from the decree and one of the plaintiffs respondents dies pending the appeal but his legal representatives are not impleaded within the period of limitation the appeal abates only so far as the deceased respondent is concerned but not as a whole (m) See notes to r 3 above This rule applies to appeals

Where there is no possibility of contradictory decrees the appeal abates only so far as concerns the deceased defendant or respondent but not as a whole A Hindu widow sells immovable property belonging to her husband to A B and C It is stated in the sale deed that the property is sold to A B and C in equal shares After the sale the next reversioner sues the widow and A B and C for a declaration that the sale is not valid beyond the life time of the widow but the suit is dismissed The reversioner appeals from the decree During the pendency of the appeal A dies but his legal representative is not brought on the record within the period of limitation The appeal abates as against A alone but not as a whole The reason is that the interest of A in the property is separate from those of the surviving respondents B and C the shares having been defined in the sale deed and that it could not therefore be said that the decree of the appellate Court if passed in favour of the appellant would prove ineffective or inconsistent with that part of the decree of the lower Court which had become final upon the abatement of the appeal qua A (n)

Appellate Court and abatement—Where a defendant appeals from a decree and the plaintiff respondent dies pending the appeal without the legal representatives

being joined within the period of limitation it is the appeal which abates and not the suit (o) O 22,

Inherent power to add legal representative as a party after abatement — Notwithstanding the abatement of a suit the Court has the power in a proper case to bring on the record the representative of a deceased defendant under s 151 and O 1 r 10 A sues B and C for partition of joint family property A preliminary decree is passed and a commissioner is appointed to make a partition according to the rights declared in the decree B then dies but no application is made to bring his legal representative on the record within the period of limitation Though the suit abates as regards B the Court may add B s representative as a defendant (p) But no such order can be made if no preliminary decree has been passed (q)

Effect of decree against legal representative of deceased defendant — The words used in sec 365 were any person whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant The words used in the present rule are the legal representative of the deceased defendant It was accordingly held under the Code of 1882 that where a person alleged by the plaintiff to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant was brought on the record without any objection by him and a decree was passed in the suit the estate of the deceased was bound by the decree in the absence of fraud or collusion (r) But in view of the altered wording of the present rule it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to allege that a particular person is the legal representative of a deceased defendant and for such person to be brought on the record as representing the estate of the deceased Thus if the sole defendant dies pending a suit against him for the recovery of money leaving sons and daughters but in ignorance of the existence of these heirs his brother is brought on the record as his representative and a decree is passed against the estate of the deceased the decree is not binding on the estate and on the persons rightly entitled to that estate (s)

Two or more legal representatives —If there are several legal representatives it seems to suffice if at least one of them is impleaded whether in the suit (t) or in the appeal (u) The Lahore High Court in one case (v) held that rule 4 is sufficiently complied with if all the legal representatives known after diligent inquiry are joined But in another case (w) where only two out of three heirs of a deceased respondent were brought on the record the same Court held that the appeal abated as the whole estate was not represented See notes to r 3 above under the same head

4 Death of insolvent respondent—An appeal preferred by the creditors of an insolvent against an order of adjudication abates on his death as the right to sue does not survive within the meaning of this rule (y)

Wrong person as legal representative—An application to bring on the record as legal representative of a deceased defendant a person who is not in fact such representative will be of no avail to save the running of limitation in the case of a subsequent application to implead the person who really is the legal representative (z) As already stated if the wrong person is impleaded as legal representative the decree will not bind the true heir (a)

What pleas may be taken by a legal representative—See sub r (2) and notes under the same head to r 3 above

Rehearing of suit or appeal—A plaintiff whose suit is heard and dismissed is not entitled to a rehearing of the suit on the ground that one of the defendants had died previous to the hearing of the suit and that the suit was heard without bringing the legal representative of the deceased defendant on the record The right to have the suit reheard is the right of the legal representative [which he would not care to exercise as the suit was dismissed] and not the right of the unsuccessful plaintiff The same rule applies to appeals (b)

Pro forma defendant—Omission to bring on record the legal representative of the defendant against whom no relief is claimed does not cause the suit to abate (c)

Death of defendant after preliminary and before final decree—It has been held in several cases that this rule applies where a defendant dies after the preliminary and before the final decree and that his legal representatives must be brought on the record otherwise the suit abates so far as concerns the deceased defendant (d) But it is difficult to reconcile these cases with the decision of Privy Council in Luchmi Narain v Bal Mukund (e) In a recent case the Oudh Court held relying upon Lachmi Narain's case that this rule does not apply where a defendant dies after the passing of a preliminary d ree (f) See notes to r 3 above Death of plaintiff after preliminary and before final decree

Decree for or against a dead person—A decree against a person who was dead at the date of the institution of the suit is a nullity (g) Similarly a decree passed against a defendant who died pending the suit without bringing his legal representative on the record is a nullity and it cannot be executed against the legal representative (h) A decree passed against a respondent in ignorance of the fact of his death is also a nullity (i) If one of several defendants is discovered to have been dead at the institution of the suit there is no question of abatement nor should the suit be dismissed as against him The Determination of question as to legal representative

5 [S 367] Where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or a deceased defendant, such question shall be determined by the Court

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative have been substituted for the words if any dispute arises as to who is the legal representative The object is to make it clear that this rule applies not only where two or more persons claim to be the legal representative of a deceased party but where there is only one claimant and his representative character is denied This is in accordance with the interpretation put upon the words of the old section in the undermentioned cases (o)

2 Under the old section where a question arose as to whether any person was or was not the legal representative of a deceased party the Court had the power either to stay the suit until the question was determined in another suit or to determine the question itself Under the present rule the Court is bound to determine the question itself (p)

3 It is provided by rules 3 and 4 of this Order that once the Court determines who the legal representative is and the legal representative is brought on the record under those rules the Court shall proceed with the suit No objection therefore as to the representative character of such person can be entertained after he is brought on the record though the hearing of the suit

In a mortgage suit the judgment referred to in this rule is the judgment supporting the final decree and not the judgment supporting the preliminary decree and the hearing referred to in the rule is the hearing of issue upon which judgment is to be delivered determining the plaintiff's right to a final decree Therefore this rule does not apply where a party to a mortgage suit dies before the application for a final decree is made and heard (a) See notes to r 3 above Death of plaintiff after preliminary and before final decree and notes to r 4 above Death of defendant after preliminary and before final decree

No abatement by reason of death after hearing.—This rule is new. It gives effect to the decision in the undermentioned case (z).

In a mortgage suit the judgment referred to in this rule is the judgment supporting the final decree and not the judgment supporting the preliminary decree and the hearing referred to in the rule is the hearing of the case upon which judgment is to be delivered determining the plaintiff's right to a final decree. Therefore this rule does not apply where a party to a mortgage suit dies before the application for a final decree is made and heard (a). See note to r. 3 above, "Death of plaintiff after preliminary and before final decree," and note to r. 4 above, "Death of defendant after preliminary and before final decree."

Suit not to abate by marriage of female party.

7. [S. 369.] (1) The marriage of a female plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate, but the suit may notwithstanding be proceeded with to judgment, and where the decree is against a female defendant it may be executed against her alone.

(2) Where the husband is by law liable for the debts of his wife, the decree may, with the permission of the Court, be executed against the husband also; and in case of judgment for the wife, execution of the decree may, with such permission, be issued upon the application of the husband, where the husband is by law entitled to the subject-matter of the decree.

When plaintiff's insolvency bars suit.

8. [S. 370.] (1) The insolvency of a plaintiff in any suit which the assignee or receiver might maintain for the benefit of his creditors, shall not cause the suit to abate, unless such assignee or receiver declines to continue the suit or (unless for any special reason the Court otherwise directs) to give security for the costs thereof within such time as the Court may direct.

Procedure where assignee fails to continue suit or give security.

(2) Where the assignee or receiver neglects or refuses to continue the suit and to give such security within the time so ordered, the defendant may apply for the dismissal of the suit on the ground of the plaintiff's insolvency, and the Court may make an order dismissing the suit and awarding

Insolvency of plaintiff—This rule lays down the procedure to be followed when a plaintiff becomes insolvent The suit should not be dismissed for default of appearance for O 9 r 8 cannot apply where there is known to be no person in the position of the plaintiff who has any right or duty to appear (b)

The procedure laid down in this rule applies to appeals see r 11 below Thus if a decree is passed in a suit by A against B and B appeals from the decree and pending the appeal B becomes insolvent and the Official Assignee does not give security for costs the Court must under this rule dismiss the suit If the plaintiff respondent has filed cross objections they could not be heard the dismissal of the suit being in effect an abatement of the appeal (c)

Insolvency of defendant—As to the case of the insolvency of a defendant in a presidency town it is now provided by sec 18 of the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909 that where a defendant to a suit has been adjudged an insolvent the Court may at any time after the making of the order of adjudication stay any suit or other proceeding pending against the insolvent before any Judge or Judges of the Court or in any other Court subject to the superintendence of the Court The same section also enacts that any Court in which proceedings are pending against a debtor may on proof that an order of adjudication has been made against him under the Act either stay the proceedings or allow them to continue on such terms as it may think just As to cases governed by the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 see sec 29 See also notes to r 10 below Insolvency of the defendant joinder of Official Assignee

Insolvency —This rule does not apply to a case where the adjudication has been annulled In such a case the dismissal for the non appearance of the plaintiff or the Official Assignee on the date fixed for the hearing is under O 9 r 9 (d)

Limitation—There is no limitation provided for the Official Assignee to appear and apply for substitution Again where the plaintiff's name is struck off and the Official Assignee is substituted for the insolvent plaintiff and the adjudication is thereafter annulled there is no limitation for the plaintiff to appear and apply for the restoration of his name on the record (e)

Insolvency of pauper applicant—In the case of a pauper who has applied for leave to sue as a pauper the present rule can be applied only after leave to sue is granted but not before (f)

Costs payable by plaintiff prior to his insolvency—The general principle is that a person who comes in by representation whether it be an assignee in bankruptcy or as an executor or administrator of an original plaintiff where costs are due by the person whom he represents the suit cannot be carried on except upon the costs of the original suit being paid It has accordingly been held that where a plaintiff who has been ordered to pay the costs of a proceeding in the suit becomes bankrupt and the suit is revived by his assignee the Court will stay proceedings until payment of the costs which the plaintiff has been ordered to pay (g) The security required of the Official Assignee is for costs incurred prior to the insolvency (h)

Costs of successful defendant—Where a suit is continued by the assignee in bankruptcy and the defendant obtains judgment with costs the defendant is entitled to be paid all his costs in full and not merely the costs as from the date of insolvency with liberty to prove for the costs previously incurred (i)

Practice—As to the form of the order under this rule see the undermentioned case (j)

Execution proceedings—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution See r 12 below

Cause of action arising after insolvency—A an undischarged insolvent sues B for brokerage earned by him subsequent to his adjudication B applies for security for costs If the Official Assignee has not intervened no order should be made for security for costs (k) It may be observed that under the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909 property acquired by an insolvent after adjudication does not vest in the Official Assignee until he intervenes and claims it on behalf of the creditors In cases governed by the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 such property vests immediately on the making of order of adjudication

Effect of abatement or dismissal

9. [Ss 371, 372A] (1) Where a suit abates or is dismissed under this Order, no fresh suit shall be brought on the same cause of action

(2) The plaintiff or the person claiming to be the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or the assignee or the receiver in the case of an insolvent plaintiff may apply for an order to set aside the abatement or dismissal, and if it is proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from continuing the suit, the Court shall set aside the abatement or dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit

(3) The provisions of section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act 1877, shall apply to applications under sub rule (2)

Sub rule (1) No fresh suit on the same cause of action—This rule prohibits a fresh suit on the same cause of action As to the meaning of Cause of action see notes to s 20 above Cause of action

A a member of a joint Hindu family sues B for redemption of a mortgage of ancestral property executed by A to B A then dies A s heirs are not brought on the record and the suit abates Subsequently A s son and grandsons institute another suit against B for redemption of the same mortgage There is no indication that A s suit was brought by him in a representative capacity that is as representing the joint family The second suit is not barred (l)

r 9 r 4 (3) (m) (2) the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff where a suit has abated under r 3 (2) (3) the assignee of an insolvent plaintiff where a suit is dismissed under r 8 (2)

Limitation —An application under this rule for an order to set aside an abatement must be made within 60 days from the date of the abatement [Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 171] Similarly an application for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit must be made within 60 days from the date of the order of dismissal [Ib Art 172] If no application is made within 60 days the Court has the power under s 5 of the Limitation Act to admit the application after the expiry of that period if the applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within 60 days See sub r (3) In an Oudh case a decree was passed against a defendant in ignorance of his death but on application of his legal representatives the decree was treated as a nullity delay was excused the representatives impleaded and the appeal heard de novo (n)

Sub rule (2) Sufficient cause —An application to bring upon the record the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased [Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 176] An application to bring upon the record the legal representative of a deceased defendant must also be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased [Ib Art 177] If no application is made within the prescribed period the suit abates in the case of a deceased plaintiff under r 3 (2) and in the case of a deceased defendant under r 4 (3) But the plaintiff or the person claiming to be the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff as the case may be may apply under r (9) (2) for an order to set aside the abatement The application to set aside the abatement must be made within 60 days from the date of the abatement If no application is made within 60 days the Court may under s 5 of the Limitation Act admit the application if the applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within 60 days see sub r (3)

An abatement ought not to be set aside as a matter of course or lightly The reason is that when a suit abates the setting aside of the abatement deprives the party in whose favour the abatement operates of a valuable right Under sub r (2) the applicant has to satisfy the Court that he was prevented by some sufficient cause from making the application to bring the legal representative of the deceased upon the record within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased Under sub r (3) the applicant has to satisfy the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application to set aside the abatement within 60 days from the date of abatement (o) The two sub rules are distinct In dealing with an application under sub r (2) the Court has to decide whether there was sufficient cause for not bringing the legal representative of the deceased upon the record within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased independently of sub rule (3) (p)

Ignorance of the death of the deceased (q) or of the whereabouts of the legal representatives of the deceased (r) may be a sufficient cause for excusing the delay unless the ignorance was due to negligence Where the defendants appealed from a decree passed against them and one of the defendants died pending the appeal and the legal representative of the deceased was under the impression that the co defendants were prosecuting the appeal and challenging the validity of the entire decree it was held that it was a sufficient cause for excusing the delay in making the application to bring him on the record in place of the deceased (s)

Sub rule (3)—See notes above Sub rule (2) Sufficient Cause

Substitution without setting aside abatement—The Patna High Court has held that where a sole defendant dies and the suit has abated no order can be made for substituting his legal representative in his place until the abatement has been set aside under this rule (t) The Bombay High Court would treat the omission to set aside the abatement as merely a formal defect (u)

Minor and abatement—Where an application on behalf of a minor to be brought on the record in place of his deceased father who was the plaintiff in the suit was dismissed under r 3 above as being time barred and the minor then made a second application to be brought on the record and that application was also dismissed it was held that the lower Court should have in the circumstances of the case treated the second application as one under r 9 to set aside the abatement and that it should have in the circumstances of the case set aside the abatement (v)

Remand—When the High Court in second appeal declares the first appeal to have abated it has no power to set aside the abatement but should remand the case to the lower Appellate Court for disposal under this rule (w)

Cause of action in revived suit.—Where an abatement is set aside under this rule the suit is revived No fresh cause of action can be imported into the revived suit for the proceedings in the revived suit are a continuation of the proceedings in the original suit (x)

Appeal—An appeal lies under the Code from an order refusing to set aside the abatement or dismissal of a suit O 43 r 1 (k) But no appeal lies under the Code from an order setting aside an abatement But it has been held that if the order setting aside the abatement is passed without jurisdiction and is really not one under r 9 it is appealable or at least open to revision (y)

Letters Patent appeal—The High Court of Allahabad has held that an appeal lies under cl 10 of the Letters Patent of that Court (corresponding with cl 15 of the Letters Patent of the High Court of Calcutta from an order of a single judge of the High Court refusing to set aside the abatement of an appeal The decision proceeds upon two grounds namely (1) that an order rejecting the application to set aside an abatement would if unappealable be a final order determining once and for all the rights of parties and (2) that an appeal was allowed by the Code to the High Court from an order of a District Judge refusing to set aside an abatement of a suit and it would be strange if there was permission to appeal as undoubtedly there was from the lower appellate Court to the High Court that there should not also be the right of appeal not merely in a suit but when the question arose in a Court of appeal (z)

The High Court of Calcutta has held that an order setting aside the abatement of a suit is a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such the reason given being that when a suit has abated the setting aside of the abatement deprives the party in whose favour the abatement operates of a valuable right (a)

10 [S 372] Procedure in case of assignment before final order in suit

(1) In other cases of an assignment, creation or devolution of any interest during the pendency of a suit, the suit may, by leave of the Court, be continued by or against the person to or upon whom such interest has come or devolved

(2) The attachment of a decree pending an appeal there from shall be deemed to be an interest entitling the person who procured such attachment to the benefit of sub rule (1)

Alterations in the rule—(1) The words either in addition to or in substitution for the person from whom it has passed which occurred in sec 372 of the Code of 188? after the words interest has come or devolved have been omitted It would seem to follow from some of the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the undermentioned case (b) that the effect of the omission of those words is that a transferee pendente lite cannot under this Code be added as a party but that he may be substituted for his transferor It is not clear whether their Lordships intended to go that length If they did a difficulty would arise in every case where a mortgagee pend nte lite applied to be joined as a party

Other cases of assignment creation or devolution of interest.—It will be observed that the preceding rules deal with certa n specified cases of assignment creation and devolution of interest Rule 8 deals with the case of assignment on the insolvency of a plaintiff rule 7 with the case of creation of an int rest in a husband on marriage and rules 2 3 and 4 with the ca e of devolution of interest on the death of a party to a suit The present rule provides for cases of assignment creation and devolution of interest other than those mentioned above (c) See notes below Devolution of interest

Assignment of interest—This includes a sale or a mortgage or a lease (d) of the property in suit also an assignment of a mortgage (e)

Devolution of interest representative suits—Rules 2 3 and 4 relate to cases of devolution of interest on the death of a plaintiff or a defendant These rules however do not apply where a suit is brought by or against a person in his representative character e g by or against the head of a mutt or the manager of a temple as such In such a case the present rule applies so that if the head of the mutt or manager of the temple dies his successor may be substituted in his place But the rule is not confined to devolution of interest by death It also applies if the head of the mutt or manager of the temple resigns his office or is removed from office (f) In such a case also the successor to the head of the mutt (g) or to the manager of the temple (h) may be substituted as a party under this rule. But if the successor does not apply to be substituted as a party the original plaintiff may continue the suit and his successor will be bound by the result of the litigation (i). Where during the pendency of a suit brought by the manager of an encumbered estate the estate was released from management and restored to the owners it was held that the owners could apply under this rule to be made plaintiff in place of the manager (j).

Interest.—The word "interest" in this rule means interest in the property the subject matter of the suit (k).

Thereupon A applies to the Court under this rule to have the firm of X Y joined as a party defendant. The firm of X Y should not be joined as a party for the assignment cannot be said in any sense to be an assignment of the defendant's interest in the subject matter of the suit: Harish Chandra v. *Chandpore Co. Insolvency of defendant: Joinder of Official Assignee.—This section applies to the devolution of interest by reason of an order of adjudication (l). See Mulla's Law of Insolvency in British India, p. 486 et seq.

(a) A sues B for recovery of possession of certain immovable property. The defence is that B is the full owner of the property. Pending the suit B is adjudged insolvent and his estate vests in the Official Assignee. The Official Assignee is entitled to be substituted as a party defendant under this rule. The reason is that the order of adjudication operates as a statutory transfer of the interest of the insolvent in the subject matter of the suit to the Official Assignee: see Punithavelu v. Bhashyam (1902) 25 Mad. 406; Subbayar Bros v. J. K. Munuswami Aiyar and Sons (1926) 51 Mad. L. J. 613.

(b) If the Official Assignee refuses to defend a suit relating to the insolvent's property the insolvent is not entitled to defend the suit independently of the Official Assignee: Tribhovandas v. Abdulally (1914) 39 Bom. 568, 28 I. C. 506; see also Surendra Nath v. Thripura (192?) 3? C. W. N. 304, 109 I. C. 282, ('28) A. C. 215. As to the old law on the subject, see the undermentioned case (m).

(c) A mortgages his property to B. B sues A for a sale of the mortgaged property. Pending the suit A is adjudged insolvent. The Official Assignee or Receiver is a necessary party to the suit: Kala Chand v. Jaggannath (1927) 54 I. A. 190, 54 Cal. 595, ('27) A. P. C. 108.

(d) A sues B to recover a debt or damages for breach of contract. Pending the suit B is adjudged insolvent and his property vests in the Official Assignee. Here there is a mere money claim against the insolvent and no vesting in the Official Assignee of any "interest" in the subject matter of the suit within the meaning of this rule. The Official Assignee therefore should not be added or substituted as a party defendant to the suit: Miller v. Budh Sing (1891) 18 Cal. 43; Chanmull v. Ranee Soondery (1895) 22 Cal.

Annulment of order of adjudication —Where a suit is brought by the Official Assignee and the order of adjudication is annulled pending the suit the insolvent is entitled to be substituted as plaintiff under this rule (n)

During the pendency of a suit —These words mean before a final decree or order has been passed or made in the suit [see the marginal note to the rule] Hence the provisions of this rule apply if the assignment creation or devolution of interest takes place before a final decree or order is passed or made in the suit In the case of an appeal the provisions of this rule apply if the assignment etc takes place before a final decree or order is passed or made in the appeal [see r 11 below] Though a suit may be compromised and the terms of the compromise filed in Court the suit will be deemed to be pending until a decree is passed in terms of the compromi e Until the decree is passed a transferee pendente lite is entitled to apply under this rule to be joined as a party (o) If he is joined as a party he is entitled to object to a decree being passed in terms of the compromise arrived at between his transferor and the opposite party (p) But if he is not joined as a party he is bound by the decree passed on the compromise (q)

Application under this rule when to be made—This rule only governs an application to continue a suit An application by a transferee of the interest of a party made after the termination of a suit is not within this rule (r) But where an appeal is preferred from the decree an application under this rule can be made to the appellate Court even though the devolution of interest occurred when the case was pending in the trial Court (s)

Laches—An applicant under this rule is not entitled to leave to be joined as a party as a matter of right The Court has a discretion in the matter and it may refuse leave on the ground of laches or delay (t)

Sub rule 2—A obtains a decree against B B appeals from the decree Pending the appeal C who holds a decree against A attaches the decree obtained by A against B C may be made a party under this rule See O 21 r 53

No new suit—It is clear from the terms of this rule that when a party is brought on the record under this rule there is as regards him no new suit at all He is brought on the record as a party to a suit that has already been instituted and that suit is continued by or against him His substitution as a party does not initiate as regards him a new proceeding (u) See notes below Limitation

Trial Court can bring assignee on record pending appeal—The Court of first instance has jurisdiction to bring on record the assignee of a party to the suit though there may be an appeal pending in the appellate Court from an interlocutory order made by the Court of first instance (v)

Transfer of decree—This rule does not apply to transfers of decrees O 21 r 16 applies to such transfers (w)

Doctrine of lis pendens—In this connection may be noted the provisions of sec 52 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 which runs as follows During the active prosecution of a contentious suit or proceeding in which any right to any immovable property is directly and specifically in question the property cannot be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit or proceeding so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which may be made therein except under the authority of the Court and on such terms as it may impose

Limitation—The right to apply under this rule accrues from day to day and is not therefore barred by lapse of time An application therefore to be added or substituted as a party under this rule may be made at any time (x)

Appeal—Under the Code of 1882 an appeal was allowed from an order giving leave to be joined as a party but none from an order refusing such leave (y) Under the present Code [O 43 r 1 (l)] an appeal lies from an order giving or refusing to give leave ( ) The High Court of Madras has held that an order purporting to be passed under this rule is appealable though on the facts the order should not have been passed under this rule (a)

Letters Patent Appeal—An order refusing leave to be joined as a party is a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such (b)

ORDER XXIII

Withdrawal and Adjustment of Suits

Withdrawal of suit or abandonment of part of claim

1 [S 73] (1) At any time after the institution of a suit the plaintiff may, as against all or any of the defendants, withdraw his suit or abandon part of his claim

(2) Where the Court is satisfied—

(a) that a suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or

(b) that there are other sufficient grounds for allowing the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit for the subject matter of a suit or part of a claim, it may, on such terms as it thinks fit, grant the plaintiff permission to withdraw from such suit or abandon such part of a claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject matter of such suit or such part of a claim

(3) Where the plaintiff withdraws from a suit, or abandons part of a claim, without the permission referred to in

(c) Arjdas v Krishnan (1928) 51 M d 858 110 I C 66 (28) A M 7 2

1 a case however the Court should not act under this rule but return the plaint under O 7 r 10 to the plaintiff to be presented to the proper Court (u) But O 7 r 10 does not apply to Chartered H gh Courts In the case therefore of a Chartered High Court the Court may it seems act under this rule

Other sufficient grounds —Sec 97 of the Code of 1859 ran as follows —

If the plaintiff at any time before final judgment satisfies the Court that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw from the suit with liberty to br ng a fresh suit for the same matter it shall be competent to the Court to grant such permission on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it may deem proper

It is to be noted that sec 97 of the Code of 1859 did not contain the words some formal defect which occur in the present Code In Watson v Collector of Rajshaye (v) the plaintiff sued the defendant to set aside an auction sale of a putnee Taluk for arrears of rent A preliminary issue was framed whether the plaintiff was in a position to sue A commission was issued for the examination of witnesses but it was returned unexecuted as the witnesses had not been presented for examination Upon this the Court finding no excuse for the plaintiff s neglect dismissed the suit for want of evidence but with a reservation that the order made was not to be a bar to the plaintiff from proceeding as if the action has not been brought The plaintiff then brought a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action The High Court of Bengal held that the second suit was barred as res judicata under s 2 of the Code of 1859 This decision was affirmed on appeal by the Privy Council In the course of the judgment their Lordships of the Privy Council referring apparently to sec 97 of the Code of 1859 said as follows —

> There is a proceeding in those Courts (Courts of India) called a non suit which operates as a dismissal of the suit without barring the right of the party to litigate the matter in a fresh suit But that seems to be limited to cases of misjoinder either of parties or matters in contest in the suit to cases in which a material document has been rejected because it has not borne proper stamp and to cases in which there has been an erroneous valuation of the subject of the suit In all those cases the suit fails by reason of som point of form but their Lordships are aware of no ca e in which upon an issue joined and the party having failed to produce the evidence which he was bound to produce in support of that issue liberty has been given to him to bring a second suit except in the particular instance that is now bef re them

The passage cited above indicates their Lordships view of the meaning of the words sufficient grounds in sec 9 of the Code of 1859 This decision was followed by the High Court of Bengal in Madan Ram v I rail (u) where it was held that a plaintiff cannot be permitted to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit after issues have been joined and he has failed to produce the evidence to support his claim Madan Ram s case was al o a case under the Code of 1859 The words by reason of some formal defect appeared for the first time in sec 373 of the Code of 1877 The decision in Watson s case was al o followed by the High Court of Calcutta in Kharda Co Ltd v Doorga Charan (z) a case under the present Code The question in that case was whether a plaintiff can be permitted to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit after he has adduced all his evidence and finds that the evidence is insufficient to establish his case It was contended for the plaintiff that the words other sufficient grounds were wide enough to entitle the Court to allow the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit under any circumstances that might be deemed sufficient by the Court but this contention was overruled and it was held that the Court had no power to allow a plaintiff to withdraw from the suit after evidence had been adduced and the evidence was found to be insufficient to support his case In the course of his judgment Mookerji J after referring to clauses (a) and (b) of sub rule (2) said The intention plainly is that a ground indicated in clause (b) must be of the same nature as the ground specified in clause (a) This decision has been followed by the same High Court in subsequent cases (y) The High Courts of Patna (z) and Lahore (a) have followed the Calcutta decisions The Oudh Court also holds that other sufficient grounds must be ejusdem generis with a formal defect (b) The High Court of Bombay held in some cases that the Court should not allow a suit to be withdrawn after the parties were ready for trial if such withdrawal might operate to the prejudice of the defendant (c) But this view was dissented from in a later case in which the Court followed the Calcutta decisions (d) In a recent case the same High Court held that it is wrong to grant leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to file a fresh suit after the evidence is concluded though the hearing may be adjourned for final arguments (e) In Allahabad (f) leave to withdraw has been granted where the plaintiff fails to give formal proof of a document which is essential for his success In Madras there is a conflict of opinion whether the words other sufficient grounds mean grounds analogous to a formal defect as held in Calcutta or include grounds which may not be analogous to a formal defect In one case (g) the High Court held that the words other sufficient grounds must be ejusdem generis with the words some formal defect and that the Court had no power under this rule to give leave to the plaintiff after a substantial portion of his evidence had been heard In a later case (h) however Sadashiva Ayyar J said that the words other sufficient grounds were not ejusdem generis with the words some formal defect and that they included grounds which might not be analogous to a formal defect and that even if they did not objection to a suit on the ground of jurisdiction or insufficient Court fees were analogous to formal defects It appears therefore that the majority of Judges are in favour of the view that the mere inability of the plaintiff to prove his case is not a sufficient ground within the meaning of this rule for giving him leave to withdraw with liberty to institute a fresh suit

The Calcutta High Court has held that the plaintiff should not be allowed to withdraw his suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit after the suit has been heard and decided on the merits (i) Where a plaintiff sought to recover a sum of money upon certain allegations which were found untrue by the first Court and the first Court dismissed the suit and on appeal the District Judge came to the same conclusion but granted leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit the High Court held that the order should not have been made and set it aside (j)

1 ordinarily entitled to the costs of the suit (k) The High Court of Madras has held that where leave is granted to a plaintiff to bring a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs on or before a specified date and he fails to do so he is precluded from bringing a second suit and if such suit is brought it should be dismissed (l) That Court also held that if leave is granted to bring a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs (without specifying any date) the plaintiff is precluded from bringing a second suit unless the costs are paid before the institution of the second suit The payment of costs after the close of the trial in the second suit is not a compliance with the condition (m) But the same Court has held that when it is absolutely impossible for the plaintiff to pay the costs on or before the date fixed by the Court as where the exact amount of costs cannot be ascertained in time the Court has power to extend the time (n)

The High Court of Calcutta has not taken the same strict view of the condition as to the payment of costs as the Madras High Court Thus in Abdul Aziz v Ebrahim (o) where leave was granted to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs it was held that though the payment of costs was a condition precedent to the institution of a second suit non payment of costs before the institution of the second suit did not render the fresh suit bad ab initio and further that payment of costs before the trial of the fresh suit cured the irregularity In Shitlal v Gaya (p) Sir Lawrence Jenkins while agreeing with the result of the ruling in Abdul Aziz v Ebrahim based his decision on somewhat different ground In that case also permission was granted to the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs. The plaintiff did not pay the costs and brought a second suit The suit was dismissed by the Munsif for non payment of costs The plaintiff appealed to the Subordinate Judge Pending the appeal the plaintiff paid the defendant's costs The Subordinate Judge thereupon sent back the case to the Munsif for trial on the merits It was held that inasmuch as the permission to withdraw and bring a fresh suit was made conditional on a certain payment the original suit could not be deemed to be withdrawn until those costs were paid and it must therefore be deemed to be a pending suit which became disposed of as soon as payment was made In the course of the judgment the learned Judge said

When a plaintiff has obtained leave to withdraw upon payment of costs it is his duty to pay the costs at once for until they were paid there is no withdrawal with the permission of the Court In that view when the case came before the Munsif he was not entitled to dismiss it All he could do was to regard sec 10 (of the Code) as a bar to his proceeding with the trial of the suit In so far as he dismissed it he exercised a power that was not vested in him and I think the Subordinate Judge was right when on payment of the costs he set aside the decree of the Munsif and sent back the case in order that the Munsif should proceed with the trial for on the payment of those costs there was the withdrawal complete under O 23 It appears to me important in cases of this kind to have regard to the precise terms of the section and I think it will be well that the Court when giving permission to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit should see that the orders are complete and the proper order in such circumstances is one which limits the time within which the payment should be made and which goes on to direct that on failure to pay within the time the original suit is dismissed with costs. The High Court of Patna has followed the Calcutta decisions (q) The High Court of Madras has dissented from the view taken by the Calcutta High Court in Shitlal v Gaya and held that the withdrawal operates not when the costs are paid but from the date of the Court s order granting permission to withdraw (r)

Where a plaintiff who had brought a suit for redemption against the mortgagee was allowed to withdraw the uit with liberty to bring a fresh suit within two years and he brought the fresh suit after two years the High Court of Bombay held that he was entitled to do so The reason given was that a mortgagor has a right to sue for redemption at any time within the period of limitation unless his equity of redemption has in the meantime been extinguished (s)

Notice—Though this rule does not specifically require that notice of an application under it mu t be given to the opposite party still it is an elementary rule of universal application that a judicial order which may possibly affect or prejudice any party cannot be made unless he has been afforded an opportunity to be heard Hence if an order is made under this rule granting leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit without giving notice to the opposite party the order will be set aside under s 115 of the Code on the ground of material irregularity (t)

Permission need not be express—The permission mentioned in this section need not be given in express terms It is sufficient if it can be implied from the order read with the application on which the order was made (u)

Form of order—Where leave is granted to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit the order must not be one dismissing the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit but one granting permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit (v) Where leave is refused the Court should simply dismiss the application It should not make an order disposing of the suit on the assumption that the plaintiff would withdraw the suit under sub-rule (1) if the application was refused (w)

Permission extends to one fresh suit only—The permission granted in the original suit to bring a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter extends only to the filing of one fresh suit and not more Hence where leave is granted to a plaintiff to bring a fresh suit on payment of the defendant s costs and the plaintiff brings a fresh suit without paying the costs and the suit is dismissed the dismissal is a bar to the institution of a third suit in respect of the same subject matter (x)

Dismissal of suit coupled with liberty to bring a fresh suit—There is no power in the Courts of India to dismiss a suit with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit for the same matter (y)

Liberty to consolidate withdrawn suit with a pending suit—A Court it seems has no power under this rule to grant permission to a plaintiff to consolidate the claim in the suit which is withdrawn with a claim in another suit pending at the time But if such an order is made it cannot be said to be one made without jurisdiction and it is not a nullity ( ) But there is nothing to prevent the Court from granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from two suits with liberty to bring a fresh suit consolidating the claims in the two suits (a)

1 Withdrawing with permission Additional relief in fresh suit.—The effect of withdrawing a suit with the permission of the Court is to leave the parties in the same position as that in which they stood before the suit was brought Therefore the plaintiff may include in the fresh suit a relief which he might have included in the first suit but which he had omitted to include in it (b)

Withdrawing with permission after suit has abated against some of the defendants—Where a suit has abated against a defendant and it is then withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit such permission does not entitle the plaintiff to join the legal representatives of such defendant as party defendants in the fresh suit (c)

Withdrawing without permission Bar of fresh suit—Where a plaintiff withdraws from a suit without the permission of the Court he is precluded from instituting a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter [sub rule (3)] and against the same defendant The rule is mandatory and when a suit by an idol was withdrawn a second suit by a sebait or manager of the idol was held to be barred (d) See notes below Same defendant and Same subject matter

Same defendant—Though the rule does not expressly say so the fresh suit that is barred must be a suit against the same defendant A second suit will not be barred if it is brought against a different person A obtains a decree against B and in execution of the decree attached certain property alleged to belong to B C intervenes under O 21 r 58 alleging that the property belongs to him *C*s application is rejected and he brings a regular suit against A alone to establish his title to the property C then withdraws from the suit without obtaining permission of the Court to bring a second suit for the same subject matter After the suit has been withdrawn the attachment falls through A then re attaches the same property in execution of the same decree and the property is sold and purchased by D C does not appear to contest the second execution proceeding after the withdrawal of his suit He then institutes a suit against D to recover possession of the property alleging that the property is his sole and exclusive property The suit is not barred under this rule as B the judgment debtor was not a party to the first suit (e)

Same subject matter—As already stated if a suit is withdrawn without the permission of the Court the plaintiff is precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter The expression used in the corresponding s 373 of the Code of 1882 was matter A Calcutta case under the Code of 1882 said that matter did not mean property but that it had reference to the right in property which the plaintiff seeks to enforce In that case A had instituted a suit to establish his right to sell certain property in satisfaction of a decree against B but he withdrew the suit without obtaining leave to bring a fresh suit Subsequently he instituted another suit to establish his right to sell the same property in satisfaction of another decree against B It was held that the second suit was not barred The Court said Now though the property in respect of which the present suit is brought is the same as that in respect of which the former suit was brought still that would not be sufficient to make the present suit one for the same matter as that for which the former suit was brought within the meaning of s 373 for the cause of action in the two suits was different (f) In a Madras case under the present Code where the next reversionary heir of a deceased Hindu instituted a suit against the widow of the deceased and an alienee from her of her husband s property for a declaration that the alienation was not binding on the estate and on the death of the widow withdrew the suit without obtaining leave to bring a fresh suit it was held that the subsequent suit which he brought against the alienee for possession of the same property was not barred Wallis C J in delivering the judgment of the Court said The terms subject matter and the same matter which occurred in the corresponding section 373 of the old Code have not been defined and must we think be construed strictly in a penal provision of this character Without attempting an exhaustive definition of all that may be included in the term subject matter we are of opinion that where as in the present case the cause of action and the relief claimed in the second suit are not the same as the cause of action and the relief claimed in the first suit the second suit cannot be considered to have been brought in respect of the same subject matter as the first suit (g) The contrary however was held by the Chief Court of the Punjab in a case in which the facts were almost similar to the Madras case (h) In a Bombay case (i) A sued to eject L but finding that the notice to quit was defective withdrew the suit without obtaining the leave of the Court Subsequently A gave a formal notice to quit and brought a fresh suit for ejectment It was held that the suit was not barred under this rule as the previous suit was not for the same subject matter as the second suit Scott C J said We are of opinion that subject matter means to use the words of Order I Rule 1 the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed Obviously the first series of acts or transactions which formed the basis of the first suit was incomplete or the plaintiff would have been able to prosecute his suit to decree It was incomplete because there was no notice to quit The second series of act or transactions is complete because the notice to quit has been given and therefore the two suits are not in respect of the same subject matter But the withdrawal of a prior suit for a declaration of title to certain war bonds is a bar to a subsequent suit for consequential relief in respect of the same bonds [that is for recovery of possession] (j) O 2

A suit for partition however stands on a different footing the cause of action in such a suit being a recurring cause of action Hence the withdrawal of a suit for partition of joint property though without permission of the Court is no bar to a second suit for partition of the same property against the same defendants (k)

Withdrawing without leave of Court but with consent of defendant—In a case decided under s 97 of the Code of 1859 it was observed by Norman J that where a plaintiff withdraws his suit without the permission of the Court but with the consent of the defendant he is not precluded from instituting a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter (l) The observations of Norman J on this point have been doubted in a recent case (m) The doubt seems to be well founded

Withdrawing from suit pending arbitration—When the matters in dispute in a suit are referred to arbitration by an order of the Court made under Schedule II para 3 the Court has no power under this rule to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit The provisions of this rule do not apply to such a case for when once a matter is referred to arbitration the Court is precluded from dealing with it in the same suit save in the manner and to the extent provided in Schedule II. A sues B for possession of certain property The matters in difference between the parties are referred to arbitration by an order of the Court. The Court has no power either before or after the award is made to grant

1 permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit (n) But where a reference to arbitration has been made without the intervention of the Court (that is not by an order of the Court) and one of the parties to the reference applies to the Court under Schedule II para 20 to file the award the provisions of this rule apply and it is open to the applicant to withdraw the application though numbered and registered as a suit under that para 20 under sub r (1) of this rule (o)

Power of appellate Court to give leave to plaintiff to withdraw from suit—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (p) Madras (q) and Bombay (r) that where a plaintiff s suit is dismissed and he appeals from the decree the appellate Court has power to allow the plaintiff appellant to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter see s 107 (2) The contrary view seems to be implied in a Calcutta decision (s) But an appellate Court has no power to grant such leave before the appeal is admitted (t)

Erroneous order granting leave to withdraw and jurisdiction—An order for withdrawal of a suit with leave to institute a fresh suit made in circumstances not within the scope of this rule that is made in a case where there is no formal defect or other sufficient ground within the meaning of this rule cannot be treated as an order made without jurisdiction [though it may be challenged in revision on the ground of material irregularity—see notes below Revision] such order is consequently not null and void (u) The order not being a nullity a fresh suit instituted upon leave so granted is maintainable it is not barred as res judicata Further the Court trying the subsequent suit is not competent to enter into the question whether the Court which granted the plaintiff permission to withdraw the first suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit had power to make the order and had properly made it (v)

Appeal—An order under this rule granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit or to abandon a part of his claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit is not appealable Such an order is not one of the appealable orders mentioned in O 43 r 1 nor is it a decree within the meaning of s 2 (2) (w)

Letters Patent appeal—An order of a single Judge of a High Court granting leave to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit is a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and appealable as such (x) Similarly an order of a single Judge of a High Court dismissing an application for the revision of an order giving leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit is a judgment within the meaning of that clause and is appealable as such (y)

Revision—Though an order granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit is not appealable it is open to revision if it falls within s 115 of the Code An order is open to revision under that section if the Court which made it had no jurisdiction to make it as in the undermentioned case ( ) or if the Court acted illegally or with material irregularity in making the order

An order granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit in circumstances not within the scope of the present rule that is in a case in which there is no formal defect or other sufficient ground for making it as where the order is made on the ground of the plaintiff s inability to prove his case cannot be treated as an order made without jurisdiction [see notes Erroneous order granting leave to withdraw and juri diction] The High Court therefore has no power to interfere with such an order on the ground that it was made without juri diction (a) But it has been held in a series of ca es that the High Court will interfere with such an order on the ground of material irregularity and will set it aside in revision (b) Similarly the High Court will interfere and set aside in revision on the ground of material irregularity an order granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh uit if the order was made ex parte (c) or if leave was granted without assigning any rea ons (d) or if leave was granted on the ground that there was a formal defect or other sufficient ground but no inquiry was made as to whether there was in fact a formal defect or other sufficient ground (e) In a Patna case, the High Court held that where the defendant himself alleges a formal defect the Court has jurisdiction to pass any order it plea es under this rule (f) But this seems to be an extreme view In a Madras case where the plaintiff deliberately undervalued his suit and paid insufficient court fees and brought the suit in a District Munsif s Court and then applied for leave to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit and leave was granted, the Court was held to have acted with material irregularity and the order was set aside in revision (g) In a Calcutta case the first Court dismissed the plaintiff s suit on a finding that the plaintiff s allegations were untrue On appeal the District Judge came to the same conclusion but granted leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit The High Court held that the order was not properly made and set it aside (h)

In Allahabad it has been held that the High Court will interfere in revision if the lower Court has not applied its mind to the circumstances of the case and the provisions of this rule in other words if it has not exercised a judicial discretion (i) But if the lower Court has exercised a judicial discretion, the High Court will not interfere in revision merely because the High Court itself might have taken a different view of the matter (j)

Sub rule (4) Co plaintiffs

Co plaintiffs—By sub r (4) it is enacted that nothing in this rule shall be deemed to authorize the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others This sub rule limits the jurisdiction of the Court to grant permission to withdraw a suit to cases where all the plaintiffs join in the application Where the Court in contravention of this sub rule allows two out of four plaintiffs without the consent of the other two to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit it acts without jurisdiction and a second suit in respect of the same subject matter is barred But if the suit that was withdrawn was a suit for partition the second suit it has been held will not be barred for a cause of action in a suit for partition is a recurring one and a joint owner has a right to come to Court at any time provided he proves that he has a subsisting joint title and possession in the property within the period of limitation (l)

Rule does not apply

Bengal Rent Act—The provisions of this rule do not apply to suits instituted under the Bengal Rent Act 10 of 1859 which is a complete Code in itself (m)

Probate proceedings—This rule does not apply to probate proceedings the provision in s 55 of the Probate and Administration Act 5 of 1881 [now Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 s 268] being qualified by the words so far as the circumstances of the case will admit (n)

Execution proceeding—See r 4 below

2 [S 374] In any fresh suit instituted on permission granted under the last preceding rule, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted

Limitation law not affected by first suit

Limitation—The fresh suit must be instituted within the period of limitation It will not lie after the period of limitation even though the suit that was permitted to be withdrawn was within the period of limitation (o) But if the first suit was brought in a Court that had no jurisdiction to entertain it that Court would have no power under rule 1 above to give leave to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit If it does give leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit the order is one made without jurisdiction Hence if a second suit is instituted though upon leave so granted the case will be governed not by the provisions of this rule but by those of sec 14 of the Limitation Act 1908 and the time during which the first suit was prosecuted will be excluded in computing the period of limitation for the second suit (p) or compromise, or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit O 2

Alterations in the rule —This rule differs from the corresponding s 375 of the Code of 1882 in three respects namely —

1 The words where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that have been added into the rule to set at rest the conflict of opinion noted below in the commentary under the head Where a compromise set up by one party is denied by the other

2 The words the Court shall order such agreement to be recorded have been substituted for the words such agreement shall be recorded The object is to bring out the word order prominently as an appeal is now given from an order made under this rule recording or refusing to record an agreement See O 43 r 1 cl (m) and notes below Appeal

3 The words and such decree shall be final so far as it relates to so much of the subject matter of the suit as is dealt with by the agreement compromise or satisfaction which occurred in the old section after the words so far as it relates to the suit have been omitted See notes to s 96 Sub s (3) consent decree not appealable

Scope of the rule —The agreement compromise or satisfaction contemplated by this rule may (1) relate to the whole suit or (2) it may relate only to a part thereof or (3) it may also comprise matters that do not relate to the suit When the agreement relates to the whole suit the Court must on being invited by the parties record the agreement and pass a decree in accordance with the agreement and the suit stops there Where the agreement relates to a part only of the suit the Court must on the application of the parties pass a decree in accordance with the agreement and the suit may be proceeded with as to the rest Where the agreement besides relating to the suit or a part thereof comprises matters that do not relate to the suit the decree must comprise only such terms of the agreement as relate to the suit but not the rest As to the case where a decree comprises matters not relating to the suit see below notes Where the decree comprises matters that do not relate to the suit

Procedure to be followed under this rule —It is important to note that a consent decree under this rule can be passed only after an order is made directing the compromise to be recorded This is not a mere matter of form as the aggrieved party has a right of appeal against such order under O 43 r 1 cl (m) (q) See notes below Appeal

Where a compromise set up by one party is denied by the other —If a party to a suit alleges that the suit has been adjusted by a lawful agreement and applies to the Court to record the agreement and to pass a decree in accordance therewith but the opposite party to the suit denies the agreement or wishes to recede from it the question arises whether the Court has power in the one case to decide if the agreement was effected and to pass a decree accordingly and in the other case to pass a decree in spite of the opposite parties reluctance Under the old section both branches of this question were answered in the affirmative by the High Courts of Bombay Madras and

Calcutta (r), but in the negative by the High Court of Allahabad (s). According to the Allahabad decisions the Court had no power under the old section to record an agreement and to pass a decree in accordance therewith unless both the parties consented before the Court to have the agreement recorded. Thus even where there was an agreement to adjust the suit the Court could act under that section only if both the parties were in agreement at the moment of moving the Court and if they were not then in accord the agreement could only be enforced by a fresh suit for specific performance. The conflict arose from the words "if a suit be adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise" with which s 375 commenced. The present rule gives effect to the Bombay, Madras and Calcutta decisions. The words "where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part" clearly show that the Court has power under this rule where an agreement or compromise is denied to decide whether as a fact the alleged agreement or compromise was made and if it is satisfied that it was made to record it (t).

Submission and award.—It was held in two Bombay cases under the Code of 1882 that when the matters in difference in a pending suit are referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court and an award is made the submission and the award might be treated as an adjustment of the suit by an agreement within the meaning of s 375 of that Code and might be recorded as an adjustment under that section (u). In the later of the two cases (v) Starling J said that it was open to the plaintiff to proceed under s 525 [now sch II para 20] but that it was not obligatory upon him to do so as there was no express provision in the Code of 1882 that no other course than that prescribed by s 525 should be followed.

The present Code however does contain such a provision for it is enacted by s 89 that "save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Arbitration Act 1899 or by any other law for the time being in force all references to arbitration whether by an order in a suit or otherwise and all proceedings thereunder shall be governed by the provisions contained in the second Schedule". In a Bombay case decided under this Code it was held by Davar J that where in a pending suit the parties go to arbitration without the intervention of the Court and an award is made the provisions of para 20 of Schedule II do not apply to the award, but that the submission and the award may be recorded as an adjustment under this rule. As to s 89 it was said that the words "any other law for the time being in force" were wide enough to include the provisions of O 23 r 3 (w). Four years later Sir Norman Macleod another judge of the same High Court held in Shavakshaw v Tyab Haji Ayub (x) that the words "any other law for the time being in force" in s 89 do not include the present rule and that having regard to the provisions of that section a submission and an award could not be recorded as an adjustment under this rule and that the correct procedure was to apply to the Court to file the award under paragraphs 20 and 21 of Sch. II. The above decisions were reviewed by Sir Norman Macleod in Manilal v Goculdas (y). The learned Judge came to the conclusion that his decision in Shavakshaw's case was erroneous and said "They [that is the parties] may make the agreement an order of Court and then paras 1 to 16 of Schedule II apply. If they do not make the agreement an order of Court they cannot ask for the agreement to be filed under para 17; they cannot ask for the award if made to be filed under paras 20 and 21 If an award is made and both parties accept the award they can apply for a consent decree in terms thereof and there is no need to apply for an order recording the terms of the adjustment If the plaintiff disputes the award for any reason and proceeds with the suit the defendant may plead the award and have the case set down for hearing on the issue whether the award is binding as an adjustment If the defendant disputes the award, the plaintiff may have the case set down for trial on the issue whether the adjustment could be recorded. Either party may file a suit to enforce the award and apply for a stay of the original suit The ground of the ruling in Manilal s case is that a submission and an award properly made in accordance with the submission amounts to an adjustment within the meaning of this rule and as such it may be enforced under the general law of contract The result according to that ruling is that where parties to a suit refer their disputes to arbitration without the intervention of the Court and an award is made an application to pass a decree in terms of the award is an application to record a compromise within the meaning of this rule Further if an objection is taken to the award on the ground of misconduct on the part of the arbitrator the Court acting under this rule has jurisdiction under this rule to enquire into the charge of misconduct If the Court does make the inquiry and refuses to record the submission and award the order is not open to revision under s 115 above ( ) The High Court of Calcutta has dissented from the decision in Manilal s case and held that the words any other law for the time being in force in s 89 do not include the present rule further that where in a pending suit the parties go to arbitration without an order of the Court the award cannot be enforced under this rule or Schedule II or under the Arbitration Act also that if a submission to arbitration of matters in difference in a pending suit is to take place there is no provision for it other than the provisions in Schedule II (a) The result according to the Calcutta decisions is that if an award is made under a reference without an order of the Court in a pending suit the Court should not take any notice of the award, and the suit may be proceeded with on the application of either party (b) The High Court of Lahore has held that an award made without the intervention of the Court in a pending suit cannot be recorded as an adjustment under this rule unless all parties agree thereto (c) A Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad has dissented from the Calcutta rulings and held that a submission and an award may be recorded as an adjustment under this rule (d) And so has a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (e) The Bombay High Court has recently reconsidered the matter in a Full Bench without altering its opinion (f) but it is submitted with respect that the view taken by the Calcutta High Court is correct In a recent Bombay case (g) Rangnekar J expressed his preference for the view taken by the Calcutta High Court If a party does not object to the submission and award being recorded as an adjustment under this rule he is estopped from objecting that the Court had no power to do so under this rule (h)

3 Further a decree obtained upon an award on a reference to the presiding judge and another individual must be regarded as a consent decree and it is not subject to the provisions of Sch. II (j)

Agreement adjusting a suit—Where in the course of a suit the pleaders for both parties agreed that if a certain fact appeared upon a certain document the Court should decree the suit otherwise the suit should be dismissed it was held that the agreement was not one adjusting the suit within the meaning of this rule for it was not complete and left something to be done by the Court viz to ascertain whether a certain fact appeared upon a certain document (k) But an agreement that the parties will consent to a decree being passed in terms to be stated by a person named is an adjustment of the claim (l) Where a defendant made an offer to the plaintiff that if a certain witness in the ca e would eat kachcha food served by the plaintiff the suit should be decreed and the plaintiff accepted the offer and the witne s ate the food served by the plaintiff it was held that the offer and its acceptance amounted to a contract and that the suit should be decreed It was also held that the present rule did not apply to such a case (m)

Agreement to take oath under the Oaths Act—It was agreed in the course of the hearing of a suit between the plaintiff and the defendant that the plaintiff should take a certain oath on a certain date and that if he did so there should be a decree for him but that if he failed to do so his suit should be dismis ed but it was held the agreement does not amount to an adjustment of the suit so as to entitle the defendant to have the suit dismissed on plaintiff's failure to take the oath The Court should not dismiss the suit but should record the refusal and the reasons thereof under s 12 of the Oaths Act 10 of 1873 and proceed with the trial (n)

Lawful agreement or compromise.—Where both parties to a suit apply to the Court under this rule to pass a decree in accordance with the compromise arrived at between them the Court has no power to refuse to pass the decree on the ground that it considers the compromi e is too favourable to one of the parties (o) An agreement may be lawful although it is voidable for fraud or undue influence (p) The rule does not refer to such agreements but if the agreement or compromise is unlawful as where it is opposed to public policy the Court should refuse to pass a decree in accordance with the compromise even if the parties consent (q) If a decree is passed under this rule on a compromise which is not lawful the Court should not enforce the decree in execution proceedings Thus a ale of an office attached to a temple is against public policy Hence if in a suit against the holder of such an office a compromise is arrived at whereby the holder of the office consents to the office being sold in satisfaction of the debt due to the plaintiff and a decree is passed on the compromise the Court should notwithstanding the consent decree refuse to sell the office in execution (r) It is clear that if the matter had rested in contra t only the Court could not have enforced the sale in a suit brought for that purpose The mere fact that the contract is embodied in a decree does not alter the incidents of the contract By private agreement converted into a decree parties cannot empower themselves to do that which they could not have done by private agreement alone (s) Therefore a decree passed on a compromise with a minor (t) or with a guardian ad litem of a minor after the minor has attained majority (u)

compromise the Court must be taken to adopt the agreement with all its incidents (v) The contract of the parties is not the less a contract and subject to the incidents of a contract because there is superadded the command of a judge (w) On this principle in a case where A sued B on a mortgage and C who was a second mortgagee was joined as a party defendant and A and B entered into a compromise whereby A agreed to pay B more than he was entitled to the Court refused to pass a decree in terms of the agreement on the ground that the compromise was detrimental to the interests of C and that it was not therefore lawful within the meaning of this rule (x) See notes to s 11 above Consent decree and estoppel The following are further illustrations —

(a) B holds certain lands under a lease from A The rent falls into arrears and A sues B for arrears of rent and for possession It is subsequently agreed between the parties that B should continue to hold the lands as A s tenant but upon fresh terms arranged between the parties which include a forfeiture clause that if default should be made in payment of rent on the due dates the lease should be forfeited A decree is passed in terms of the agreement under this rule B commits default in payment of rent A thereupon applies for possession of the land in execution of the decree B offers to pay the arrears and applies that he may be relieved against forfeiture It is clear that if the matter had rested in contract only the Court could have granted the relief The mere fact therefore that the agreement has been recorded and a decree passed in accordance therewith does not preclude the Court from granting relief against forfeiture (y)

(b) The facts are the same as in the above illustration except that instead of proceeding in execution A institutes a fresh suit against B for possession on default of payment of rent The same principle applies (z) It would seem that the proper procedure in cases where the forfeiture clause is in the form stated in ill (a) is to enforce the forfeiture not by an application to execute the consent decree but by a regular suit (a) The clause does no more than declare the right of forfeiture and to that extent the decree is declaratory and it is an elementary principle that a declaratory decree can only be enforced by a suit

Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act —A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that a compromise in a suit between parties one of whom is an agriculturist within the meaning of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879) is not rendered illegal by want of compliance with the provisions of sec 15B of that Act (b) and that the compromise may be recorded under this rule But the same High Court has also held that the present rule does not exclude the operation of the special provisions of s 12 of that Act and the Court can under that section go behind the transaction although the whole of the claim is admitted by the agriculturist defendant (c)

Compromise of probate proceedings —Unless a will is proved in some form no grant of probate can be made merely on the consent of parties Hence an agreement or compromise as regards the genuineness and due execution of a will if its effect is to exclude evidence in proof of the will is not lawful within the meaning of this rule and no probate can be granted merely because the caveator consents to the grant Such an agreement is against public policy for its object is to exclude inquiry into the genuineness of the will which it is the duty of the Probate Court to make (d) It is therefore open to the caveator before probate is granted to withdraw from the compromise and to require that the will be proved (e) For the same reason if an executor as the result of a compromise withdraws his petition for probate he is not precluded by the provisions of r 1 above from presenting another petition for probate though the first petition was withdrawn without the permission of the Court (f)

Form of decree where compromise includes matters which do not relate to the suit—In Hemant Kumari v Midnapore Zamindari Co (g) where a decree comprised lands outside the suit their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows —

> A perfectly proper and effectual method of carrying out the terms of this [rule] would be for the decree to recite the whole of the agreement and then to conclude with an order relative to that part that was the subject of the suit or it could introduce the agreement in a schedule to the de ree but in either case although the operative part of the decree would be properly confined to the actual subject matter of the then existing litigation the decree taken as a whole would include the agreement This in fact is what the decree did in the present case It may be that as a decree it was incapable of being executed outside the lands of the suit but that does not prevent it being received in evidence of its contents

It is clear from this passage that where a suit is adjusted by a lawful agreement between the parties the proper course is to recite the agreement in the decree or to annex it as a schedule to the decree but in either case the operative part of the decree should be confined to the actual subject matter of the suit It would be wrong to refuse to incorporate in the decree matters which form part of the compromise because they are extraneous to the suit such matters should be excluded only from the operative part of the decree

Where in a testamentary suit consent terms are proposed some of which fall within the testamentary jurisdiction and others do not the decree may properly embody all the terms in a schedule for reference but its operative part should be confined to such terms as are within its jurisdiction and the Testamentary Court should leave the parties to take separate proceedings in the ordinary original civil jurisdiction to enforce the remaining terms if neces ary (h)

Matters which relate to the suit—As already stated that when a compromise comprises matters extraneous to the suit the operative part of the decree should be confined to matters that relate to the suit But what are matters that relate to the suit? In Gobinda v Dwarka Nath (i) Mitra J said The question whether any particular term relates to the suit must be decided from the frame of the suit the relief claimed and the relief allowed by the decree on adjustment by lawful agreement The mutual connection of the different parts of the relief granted by a consent decree is an important element for consideration in each case in deciding whether any portion of the relief is within the scope of the suit No hard and fast rule can be laid down each case being governed by its own facts In a later Calcutta case (j) Pankin J said In some of the decisions section 375 [now O 23 r 3] has been applied by making a distinction betw en property in suit and property extraneous to the litigation Where a suit is merely for the recovery of specific properties that distinction will be adequate and will be equal to the distinction between matters which relate to the suit and matters which do not In some cases however suits are not for the recovery of property but to establish particular rights and I certainly prefer the opinion expressed in the case reported in 35 Cal 837 to the effect that the facts have to be looked at as a whole in order to decide whether matters have been introduced into the suit that do not relate to the suit As to the latter class of case it may be stated that as a general rule all terms which form the consideration for the adjustment of the matters in dispute whether they form the subject matter of the suit or not become related to the suit and can be embodied in the decree Thus where A sued B on a promissory note and a compromise was arrived at between the parties whereby B agreed to pay the amount of the note by instalments and the amount was also made a charge on certain immovable property of B it was held that there was nothing in the present rule to preclude the Court from making the amount a charge on B s property even though the relief claimed was for a money decree only The charge though not claimed as a relief related to the suit (k) It formed the consideration for the time allowed for payment of the sum decreed by instalments and thus constituted an integral and necessary part of the adjustment of the claim in the suit (l) It has similarly been held that where A and B are joint tenants of certain land and A having paid up the entire rent sues B for contribution and a compromise is arrived at whereby B in consideration of A abandoning his claim gives up his share of the land to A the term as to B giving up his share is a term which relates to the suit (m) Where in execution of a decree obtained by A against B A attaches certain property and C claiming the property as his own brings a suit against A for a declaration of his title to the property and a compromise is arrived at between the parties whereby A admits C s ownership of the property and C agrees to execute a mortgage of the same property in favour of A for the amount of the decree obtained by A against B the term as to the execution of the mortgage is a term which relates to the suit (n) But where A sued B to restrain B from building a projected house in such a way as to interfere with A s enjoyment of light and air and a compromise was arrived at between the parties whereby B undertook not to build his house higher than it originally was and also agreed not to let water into the passage between the houses it was held that the arrangement as to the passage did not relate to the suit and that the operative part of the decree should be confined to the undertaking as to the house (o) But the parties can get over the difficulty by amending the pleadings with the leave of the Court so as to comprise in the pleadings and the decree matters that did not relate to the original suit but are comprised in the compromise (p) In a Patna case where the plaintiff claimed Rs 7 000 with interest at the rate of 9¾ per cent per annum and a consent decree was passed whereby the defendant agreed to pay Rs 2 500 with interest at the rate of 9 per cent per annum if the amount was paid on a specified date but at 24 per cent per annum if it was not paid on or before that date the Court refused execution of the decree with interest at 24 per cent on the ground that that part of the compromise which provided for the payment of interest at the rate of 24 per cent per annum was outside the scope of the suit and allowed execution with interest at

3 9 per cent only (q) This decision cannot be supported either on principle or on authority so far as the ground on which it is based is concerned See notes below Execution of decree based on a compromise

Parties—If persons other than parties to the suit are parties to the compromise it cannot be recorded unless those persons are brought on the record as parties to the suit This is because the Court has to be satisfied before recording a compromise under this rule that there is a lawful compromise and this is not possible in the absence of those that are not parties to the suit (r) In a case where the first defendant transferred his interest in the subject matter of the suit to the second defendant who effected a compromise with the plaintiff the Privy Council held that the fact that the first defendant remained on the record did not give him sufficient interest to entitle him to raise any objection to the compromise or to appeal from the decree (s)

Compromise pending arbitration—The Calcutta High Court has held that where the matters in dispute in a suit are referred to arbitration under an order of reference made by the Court and pending the reference the parties adjust the suit by an agreement in writing signed by them and the arbitrators the agreement does not amount to an award Nor can it be recorded as an adjustment under this rule unless the arbitration has been superseded by an order of the Court the mere fact that the time for making the award has expired does not amount to a supersession of the arbitration there must be an order of supersession under para 8 of Schedule II (t) In a Madras case where the lower Court had under somewhat similar circumstances recorded the adjustment under the present rule it was held that as the time for making the award had expired when the adjustment was recorded the Court must be deemed to have exercised its power to supersede the arbitration under para 8 of Schedule II (u)

Execution of decree based on a compromise—This rule requires that where the Court is invited to pass a decree in terms of an agreement or compromise the agreement or compromise should be lawful and further that the operative part of the decree should be confined to the actual subject matter of the suit But what if a decree is passed on an agreement that is not lawful or that the operative part of the decree comprises matters that do not relate to the suit Is the Court bound to execute the decree literally according to its terms? The decisions on the subject may be summarized as follows —

First where a consent decree is based on an agreement or compromise that is not lawful—As to this it has been held that so far as the decree embodies unlawful terms of a compromise it is inoperative and will not be enforced (i) The subject has already been dealt with above in the notes Unlawful agreement or compromise

Next where a consent decree embraces matters that do not relate to the suit—Where a decree passed on a compromise includes terms that relate to the suit all the terms may be enforced in execution of the decree But where it contains terms that do not relate to the suit there is a conflict of opinion whether those terms can be enforced in execution According to the Allahabad and Madras decisions such terms can be enforced in execution of the decree (w) It is not open to the party against whom the decree is sought to be executed to object to the decree on the ground that it contains matters foreign to the suit. Such an objection it has been said by the Madras High Court must be taken by way of appeal from the decree [and now by way of appeal under O 43 r 2 (m) from the order recording the compromise] and it cannot be taken in execution of the decree (x) On the other hand the High Court of Calcutta has said that such terms cannot be enforced in execution of the decree but they may be enforced as a contract by a separate suit (y) Such a suit however according to the Allahabad High Court would be barred under s 47 the question in the view taken by that Court being one relating to execution ( ) In Hemanti Kumari v Midnapur Zamindari Co (a) where a decree comprised lands outside the suit the Judicial Committee observed A perfectly proper and effectual method of carrying out the terms of [the present rule] would be for the decree to recite the whole of the agreement and then to conclude with an order relative to that part that was the subject of the suit or it could introduce the agreement in a schedule to the decree but in either case although the operative part of the decree would be properly confined to the actual subject matter of the then existing litigation the decree taken as a whole would include the agreement This in fact is what the decree did in the present case It may be that as a decree it was incapable of being executed outside the lands of the district but that does not prevent it being received in evidence of its contents The correct view it is submitted is that the decree may be executed as to the operative part alone which as stated above is to be confined to the actual subject matter of the suit As to the rest it may be enforced as a contract by a separate suit

Appeal —An order under this rule recording or refusing to record a compromise is appealable under O 43 r 1 (m) The Court may under this rule either record a compromise or it may refuse to do so If an order is made recording the compromise the Court must pass a decree in accordance with the compromise If an order is made refusing to record the compromise the suit will be proceeded with But in either case as stated above an appeal will lie from the order Where an order is made recording the agreement an appeal may be preferred on any of the following grounds —

1 That there was no compromise at all or no such compromise as the Court ordered to be recorded (b)

2 That the compromise is not lawful (c)

3 That the compromise recorded by the Court comprises matters that do not relate to the suit (d)

A compromise entered into by a pleader without the authority of his client is no compromise at all (e) and as such it comes under group (1) above

It has been held by the High Courts of Lahore (f) and Madras (g) that the fact that a decree has been passed in accordance with the compromise does not preclude an appeal from the order recording the compromise On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that an appeal from the order is incompetent if the appeal

Execution proceedings—See r 4 below

Proceedings in execution of decrees not affected

4 [S 375 A] Nothing in this Order shall apply to any proceedings in execution of a decree or order

Proceedings in execution—One effect of this rule is that the provisions of r 3 hall not apply to execution proceedings The reason is that O 21 r 2 and s 47 taken together provide a complete procedure for recording compromises arrived at in execution proceedings (j) This rule also prevents the provisions of r 1 from applying to proceedings in execution Hence where an application for execution of a decree has been made the Court has no power to allow the applicant to withdraw the application under r 1 (2) above with permis ion to make a fresh application (k) For the same reason the applicant cannot withdraw his application under r 1 (1) above though he may apply for its dismissal if he does not wish to proceed further with it (l) The High Court of Bombay has held that a compromise of a suit for partnership accounts after the passing of a preliminary decree and during the pendency of an enquiry before the Commissioner for taking accounts is not a compromise of a proceeding in execution Such a compromise may therefore be recorded under r 3 above (m) In Rangoon it has been held that an agreement between the mortgagor and the mortgagee after the preliminary decree for sale and before the final decree whereby the mortgagee agrees to allow an extension of time to the mortgagor for payment of the decretal amount is within O 21 r 2 and not within r 3 above (n) The High Court of Patna has held that an application to set aside a sale under O 21 r 90 is not a proceeding in execution, and that a compromise arrived at between the parties that on the judgment debtor paying a certain sum into Court by a particular date the Court sale should be set aside may therefore be recorded under r 3 above (o) But the correctness of this decision is doubtful

Payment into Court with denial of liability—There is no provision in his rule enabling a defendant to pay money into Court with a denial of liability in other word without prejudice to his contentions as there is in the corresponding English rule see R S C O 22 rr 1 and 6

Mere willingness to pay—A mere averment of willingness to pay made in the written tatement is not equivalent to payment into Court and it does not stop interest from running (p)

Suit to recover a debt or damages—This order applies only to a suit to recover a debt or damages and not to any other suits Where a suit is instituted against a defendant to recover a debt or damages he may pay into Court such amounts as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff s claim By such payment into Court the defendant may be benefited (1) in respect of interest for which see r 3 and (2) in respect of costs for which see r 4 and illustrations thereto

Suit for injunction—A suit for an injunction to restrain a defendant from building so as to interfere with the plaintiff s light and air but not including any claim for damages is not a suit for debt or damages within the meaning of this rule No doubt the Court has in such a suit a discretion under s 19 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877 to award damages in lieu of injunction but this circumstance does not make the suit one for damages within the meaning of this rule (q) But it has been held by the High Court of Bombay in view of the long established practice of that Court that where a defendant in a suit for an injunction pure and simple pays into Court a sum which he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff s claim though it be with defence denying liability and the Court allows damages only to the plaintiff and that too to the extent of the amount deposited by the defendant the principle underlying r 4 below ought to regulate the discretion of the Court (which it has under s 35) in directing the payment of costs (r)

Suit for accounts—This rule does not apply to suits for accounts (s)

Suit to recover debt or damages together with other relief—This rule applies to suits to recover debt or damages though there may be other reliefs claimed in the suit e g injunction (t)

At any stage of the suit—This means before decree as indicated by the words in full of the claim and the subsequent rules See notes to r 3 below Execution proceedings

Payment into Court and insolvency of defendant—In England it has been held that when money is paid into Court admitting liability the plaintiff in the event of the defendant s bankruptcy is a secured creditor in respect of it and when liability is denied he is a secured creditor to the extent to which his claim is admitted by the trustee in bankruptcy or proved (u)

Notice of deposit

2 [S 377] Notice of the deposit shall be given through the Court by the defendant to the plaintiff, and the amount of the deposit shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid to the plaintiff on his application

Unless the Court otherwise directs —These words show that the Court has a discretion to refuse to allow monies to be paid out That discretion however should be exerci ed reasonably Where the money sued for and paid into Court is due on a promissory note it would be unreasonable in the absence of special circumstances not to allow the plaintiff to take the money out The fact that the payment into Court is accompanied by a denial of liability on the ground of minority is not such a circum stance (v) Where there are conflicting claims as where the amount deposited in Court is claimed by different parties no party can withdraw the amount without an order of the Court (u)

Interest on deposit not allowed to plaintiff after notice

3 [S 378] No interest shall be allowed to the plaintiff on any sum deposited by the defendant from the date of the receipt of such notice, whether the sum deposited is in full of the claim or falls short thereof

Tender —A plea of tender before action must in order to stop interest be accompanied by a payment into Court after action otherwise the tender is ineffectual (x)

Execution proceedings —The principle of this rule applies to proceedings in execution therefore if money is paid into Court by a judgment debtor no interest should be allowed to the decree holder on the amount so paid although such amount may not in fact be the whole amount due under the decree (y)

Procedure where pl tiff accepts deposit as atisfac tion in part

4 [S 379] (1) Where the plaintiff accepts such amount as satisfaction in part only of his claim, he may prosecute his suit for the balance, and, if the Court decides that the deposit by the defendant was a full satis faction of the plaintiff's claim the plaintiff shall pay the costs of the suit incurred after the deposit and the costs incurred previous thereto, so far as they were caused by excess in the plaintiff's claim

Proced re where h accepts it as satisfaction in full

(2) Where the plaintiff accepts such amount as satis faction in full of his claim, he shall present to the Court a statement to that effect and such statement shall be filed and the Court shall pronounce judgment accordingly, and, in directing by whom the costs of each party are to be paid, the Court shall consider which of the parties is most to blame for the litigation

ORDER XXV

Security for Costs

When security for costs may be required from plaintiff

1 [Ss 380, 382] (1) Where, at any stage of a suit, it appears to the Court that a sole plaintiff is, or (when there are more plaintiffs than one) that all the plaintiffs are residing out of British India, and that such plaintiff does not, or that no one of such plaintiff does possess any sufficient immovable property within British India other than the property in suit, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any defendant, order the plaintiff or plaintiffs, within a time fixed by it, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any defendant

Residence out of British India

(2) Whoever leaves British India under such circumstances as to afford reasonable probability that he will not be forthcoming whenever he may be called upon to pay costs shall be deemed to be residing out of British India within the meaning of sub rule (1)

(3) On the application of any defendant in a suit for the payment of money, in which the plaintiff is a woman, the Court may at any stage of the suit make a like order if it is

1 satisfied that such plaintiff does not possess any sufficient immovable property within British India

Object of the rule—The object of the rule is to provide for the protection of defendants in certain cases where in the event of success they may have difficulty in realizing their costs from the plaintiff ( )

Application of the rule—Security for the costs of a defendant may be required from a plaintiff in the following two cases —

I (a) Where the plaintiff resides out of British India or where there are two or more plaintiffs all the plaintiffs reside out of British India and

(b) where none of the plaintiffs has sufficient immovable property within British India other than the property in suit

II (a) Where the plaintiff is a woman

(b) where her suit is for the payment of money and

(c) she does not possess sufficient immovable property within British India

Discretion of Court in requiring security for costs from non resident plaintiff—The word may implies discretion In the exercise of this discretion the Court will not order security for costs from a plaintiff residing out of British India in cases in which he cannot be rendered liable for the defendant s costs e g an administration suit by the plaintiff as a creditor or a legatee in which the plaintiff s claim is admitted or a suit on a mortgage or a promissory note where there is no defence In such cases no security for costs will be ordered even though the plaintiff resides out of British India and has not sufficient immovable property within British India not even though the plaintiff be a woman (a)

Resides—The residence intended in this rule is residence under such circumstances as will afford a reasonable probability that the plaintiff will be forthcoming when the suit is decided Mere presence in British territory at the time of suit is not residence (b) Thus a resident of a Native State staying in Bombay for the sole purpose of taking proceedings to get his wife back cannot be said to reside in Bombay within the meaning of this rule (c) See notes to s 20 above Actually and voluntarily resides

Trading corporations—The residence and domicile of an incorporated trading company are determined by the situation of its principal place of business By the principal place of business is meant the place where the administrative business of the company is conducted This may not be the place where its manufacture or other operations are carried on Dicey s Conflict of Laws 3rd ed p 164

British India—Aden is within British India (d) The Kathiawar States are not within British India (e) nor is the Cantonment of Wadhwan (f) nor the Cantonment of Secunderabad (g) nor the Rajkot Civil Station (h) See notes to s. 1 British India p 4 above

be said to possess immovable property within the meaning of this rule (i) Leasehold property is immovable property within the meaning of this rule (j)

Poverty of plaintiff—Mere poverty is no ground for requiring a plaintiff to give security for the costs of the suit (k) But it is otherwise if he is not the real litigant and issuing on behalf of another who is not a party to the suit (l) In a recent Bombay case a suit was brought by a Parsi father and his minor daughter as plaintiffs for damages for the defendant s breach of his promi e to marry the daughter The father was an undischarged insolvent and it was alleged that the suit was really the father s suit and that he was eeking to make money out of his daughter s engagement The Court upon these grounds ordered the father to furnish security for the costs of the defendant (m) In the last mentioned case the Court relied upon a dictum of Bowen L J in Cowell v Taylor (n) that in order to prevent abuse if an insolvent sues as nominal plaintiff for the benefit of somebody else he must give security

Inherent power to order security for costs—The case for security for costs from a puppet plaintiff is clearly outside the scope of this rule It can only be brought in under the inherent power of the Court In one case the Calcutta High Court said that it had such power (o) In a later case the same High Court said that the Court had no such power the reason given being that the inherent power of the Court cannot be invoked in matters for which the Code does actually provide (p) See notes above Poverty of plaintiff

Where leave has been granted to plaintiff to sue as a pauper—The Court has no power under this rule to require security for costs from a person to whom leave has been granted under O 33 r 8 to sue as a pauper for to do so would be to render the leave nugatory (q) If an order is made requiring a plaintiff to furnish security for the costs of the defendant and leave is subsequently granted to the plaintiff to continue the suit as a pauper the order ceases to operate as regards antecedent costs provided leave is granted before the time limited for giving security has expired (r)

Where the plaintiff is a minor—The power as to requiring security for costs is a discretionary one and except in exceptional cases neither a minor plaintiff nor his or her next friend should be required to give security for costs (s) not even if both the minor and his next friend are residing out of British India and do not own immovable property in British India (t)

Where the plaintiff is a woman—The necessity for the provisions of sub r (3) arises from the provisions of s 56 by which it is enacted that no woman can be arrested or detained in the civil prison in execution of a decree for the payment of money (u) But the Court has a discretion in the matter and in the exercise of its discretion it will not as a general rule require security for costs from a woman plaintiff if the result of such an order will be practically to defeat the suit where it has been instituted bona fide (v)

Persons exempted from attending Court—Amongst those so exempted are women who according to the custom and manners of the country ought not to be compelled to appear in public (see s 132) This is a right which no Court has power to refuse (f) Such women ought to be examined on commission even though they may have appeared in public before (g) and though an allegation of immorality is made against them (h) A woman may have entirely abandoned the protection of the purda and yet she may be exempted under s 132 from giving evidence in Court if the Court is satisfied having regard to the class and community to which she belongs that she should not be compelled to appear in the witness box (i) A religious preceptor is not one of the persons exempted from attending the Court (j)

Sickness or infirmity—If sickness or infirmity is alleged the character and gravity of that sickness or infirmity must be assessed and the risk consequent upon a refusal to issue a commission must be taken into consideration At the same time the importance of having witnesses present before the Court should not altogether be lost sight of (k) The application may be granted even if the defence consists of an equitable counterclaim If it is found that the vendor is unable to attend Court by reason of sickness or infirmity the Court has discretion to grant or refuse the application Such discretion cannot be revised under sec 115 above (l)

Evidence taken on commission under this rule—Where evidence is taken on commission under this rule the procedure laid down in r 8 below should be strictly observed (m)

Arbitration—It is competent to the Court to issue a commission for the examination of witnesses though the matters in difference in the suit have been referred to arbitration under Schedule II of this Code (n)

Appeal—See notes to rule 4 below Appeal

Revision—See notes above Sickness or infirmity

Persons for whose examination commission may issue

4 [S 386] (1) Any Court may in any suit issue a commission for the examination of— O 26

(a) any person resident beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction,

(b) any person who is about to leave such limits before the date on which he is required to be examined in Court, and

(c) any civil or military officer of the Government who cannot, in the opinion of the Court, attend without detriment to the public service

(2) Such commission may be issued to any Court, not being a High Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person resides, or to any pleader or other person whom the Court issuing the commission may appoint

(3) The Court on issuing any commission under this rule shall direct whether the commission shall be returned to itself or to any subordinate Court

Form —For form of commission to examine absent witness see App H form No 7

May issue —The Court has a discretion to grant or refuse a commission (o) But the discretion must be exercised judicially (p) If the Court fails to exercise the discretion judicially such failure is of itself no ground for interfering with the decree in appeal the appellate Court should not interfere unless it is shown if the lower Court has exercised its discretion judicially the decision would have been different from what it was (q)

Commission for the examination of witnesses — Ordinarily in the case of a witness not under the control of the party asking for a commission who resides beyond the limit fixed under O 16 r 19 (b) a commission should issue as a matter of right unless the Court is satisfied that the party is merely abusing its authority to issue process It is not for the Court to decide whether the party will be benefited thereby or not that is a matter entirely for the party (r)

Plaintiff asking for a commission to examine himself —Suppose a plaintiff residing in Delhi institutes a suit in Bombay and then applies to the Bombay Court for the issue of a commission for his examination in Delhi In such a case the Court will refuse the application unless a very strong case is made out because the Bombay tribunal is that chosen by the plaintiff himself (s)

26, 9 Reading depositions in evidence —Evidence taken on commission cannot be used without the consent of the opposite party unless the conditions of clause (a) are fulfilled or the record shews that the discretion under clause (b) has been exercised by the Court (h)

According to the practice prevailing on the Original Side of the High Court of Calcutta evidence taken on commission is not treated as evidence in the suit until it has been tendered and read as evidence in the suit by the party on whose behalf it has been taken It follows that evidence taken under a commission at the instance of one party cannot be used by the opposite party until it is tendered and read as evidence by the party on who e behalf it has been taken (i) On the other hand the practice in the Courts in the mofussil of Calcutta is to treat the deposition of a witness examined on commission as evidence in the case even though it has not been formally tendered and this practice has been said to be not only perfectly consistent but also in strict accordance with the provisions of rules 7 and 8 (j)

Admissibility of documents —Where a document is produced before a Commissioner and no objection is taken to its admissibility no uch objection can be taken before the Court hearing the suit to which the commission is returned (k) But if the admissibility of the document is objected to before the Commissioner the party who has objected to the admissibility of the document before the Commissioner on one ground is not precluded from objecting to its admissibility before the Court on any other ground (l)

Commission for local investigations

Commi ions to make lo al investigation

9 [S 392] In any suit in which the Court deems a local investigation to be requisite or proper for the purpose of elucidating any matter in dispute, or of ascertaining the market value of any property, or the amount of any mesne profits or damages or annual net profits, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit directing him to make such investigation and to report thereon to the Court

Provided that, where the Local Government has made rules as to the persons to whom such commission shall be issued, the Court shall be bound by such rules

Commission when to be issued —The words and the same cannot be conveniently conducted by the judge in person which occurred in the old section after the words net profits have been omitted in this rule The effect of the alteration is that the issue of a commission for local investigation is no longer restricted to ca es where the Judge is unable conveniently to make the investigation himself As the rule now stands a Judge may issue a commission in any case where he deems it fit to do so irrespective of his own convenience (m)

Commissions to examine accounts

11 [S 394] In any suit in which an examination or adjustment of accounts is necessary, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit directing him to make such examination or adjustment

Commission to examine or adjust accounts

Commission to examine accounts —The words of this rule clearly indicat that no order can be made for the appointment of a commissioner unless the examination or adjustment of accounts is considered necessary (t)

The commissioner to whom a suit is referred by a Judge on the original side of the High Court of Bombay is entitled to decide questions of law which may arise while taking accounts (u)

Form —For form of commission to examine accounts see App H form no 9

12 [S 395] (1) The Court shall furnish the Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such instructions as appear necessary, and the instructions shall distinctly specify whether the Commissioner is merely to transmit the proceedings which he may hold on the inquiry, or also to report his own opinion on the point referred for his examination

Court to give Commissioner necessary instructions

(2) The proceedings and report (if any) of the Commissioner shall be evidence in the suit, but where the Court has reason to be dissatisfied with them, it may direct such further inquiry as it shall think fit

Proceedings and report to be evidence Court may direct further inquiry

Commissions to make partitions

13 [S 396, 1st para] Where a preliminary decree for partition has been passed, the Court may, in any case not provided for by section 54, issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit to make the partition or separation according to the rights as declared in such decree

Under the old section it was held that the use of the plural person showed that the Court could not issue a commission to make partitions to a single Commissioner (v) The substitution of the singular person for the plural persons clearly shows that under the present rule the commission may be issued to a single Commissioner

Form —For form of commission to make a partition see App H form no 10

Procedure of Commissioner

14 [S 396 2nd and 3rd paras] (1) The Commissioner shall, after such inquiry as may be necessary, divide the property into as many shares as may be directed by the order under which the commission was issued, and shall allot such shares to the parties, and may, if authorized thereto by the said order, award sums to be paid for the purpose of equalizing the value of the shares

(2) The Commissioner shall then prepare and sign a report or the Commissioners (where the commission was issued to more than one person and they cannot agree) shall prepare and sign separate reports appointing the share of each party and distinguishing each share (if so directed by the said order) by metes and bounds Such report or reports shall be annexed to the commission and transmitted to the Court, and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports, shall confirm, vary or set aside the same

(3) Where the Court confirms or varies the report or reports it shall pass a decree in accordance with the same as confirmed or varied, but where the Court sets aside the report or reports it shall either issue a new commission or make such other order as it shall think fit

Alteration in the rule —The words shall confirm vary or set aside the same at the end of sub rule (2) and the whole of sub rule (3) have been substituted for the words shall either quash the same and issue a new commission or (where the Commissioners agree in their report) pass a decree in accordance therewith Under the wording of the old section it was held that the Court must either accept the report or reject the report and that it had no power to vary it (w) The word vary has been added into sub rule (2) to enable the Court to modify the report in a proper case

General provisions

Expenses of commission to be paid into Court

15 [S 397] Before issuing any commission under this Order, the Court may order such sum (if any) as it thinks reasonable for the expenses of the commission to be, within a time to be fixed, paid into Court by the party at whose instance or for whose benefit the commission is issued

Powers of Commissioners

16 [S 398] Any Commissioner appointed under this Order, may, unless otherwise directed by the order of appointment,—

(b) call for and examine documents and other things relevant to the subject of inquiry,

Attendance and examination of witnesses before Commissioner

17 [S 399] (1) The provisions of this Code relating to the summoning, attendance and examination of witnesses, and to the remuneration of, and penalties to be imposed upon witnesses, shall apply to persons required to give evidence or to produce documents under this Order whether the commission in execution of which they are so required has been issued by a Court situate within or by a Court situate beyond the limits of British India, and for the purposes of this rule the Commissioner shall be deemed to be a Civil Court

(2) A Commissioner may apply to any Court (not being a High Court) within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides for the issue of any process which he may find it necessary to issue to or against such witness, and such Court may, in its discretion, issue such process as it considers reasonable and proper

Sub rule (2) —This sub rule is new It enables the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides to issue a summons for his examination on the application of the Commissioner In the absence of any such provision in the old section

it was held that where a witness failed to appear before a Commissioner pursuant to a notice issued by him the only course left open to the Commissioner was to return the commission to the Court from which it was issued and the latter Court would then send the commission to the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the witness to be examined resided (y)

18 [S 400] (1) Where a commission is issued under this Order the Court shall direct that the parties to the suit shall appear before the Commissioner in person or by their agents or pleaders

Parties to appear before Commissioner

(2) Where all or any of the parties do not so appear, the Commissioner may proceed in their absence

r 1 1 [S 435] Subscription and verification of pleading

In suits by or against a corporation, any pleading may be signed and verified on behalf of the corporation by the secretary or by any director or other principal officer of the corporation who is able to depose to the facts of the case

Companies authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or trustee—All reference has been omitted in this and the next following rule to companies authorised to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee as such companies if any there be are very rare

Foreign corporation—The procedure prescribed by this rule applies to foreign corporations also A foreign corporation can claim the benefit of this rule although not registered under the Indian Companies Act or under an Act of Parliament (a) Thus a plaint in a suit by the Singer Manufacturing Company which is a company incorporated in the United States may be verified by an agent holding a general power of attorney from the company as a principal officer of the company within the meaning of this rule (b) The fact that the Agent also acts for another foreign firm is not material (c)

(a) Singer Manufacturing Co v Baijnath (1903) 30 Cal 103

Suit by an unregistered or unincorporated society—A suit by an unregistered or unincorporated society must be brought in the names of all the members of the society (d) Where there are numerous members the suit may be instituted by one or more of them with the permission of the Court on behalf of all [O 1 r 8]

Suit by or against a registered company—A suit by or against a registered company must be instituted in the name of the company A suit against two companies described as the India General S N and R Co Ltd and the Rivers S N Co Ltd by their joint Agent A E Rogers is substantially a suit against Rogers and it is in contravention of the provisions of this rule The words by their joint agent A E Rogers should be omitted (e) But if the relief is really sought against the Company and the error is one of misdescription a suit nominally against the Agent may be treated as a suit against the Company (f)

Other principal officer of the corporation—The manager at Lucknow of the local branch of the Delhi and London Bank was authorised by a power of attorney to manage the affairs of the Bank and to substitute any person for himself In pursuance of this power he gave a power of attorney to the accountant of the Bank to manage the affairs of the Bank but the power omitted words giving authority to sue It was held that the accountant was under the circumstances the principal officer of the Bank and that he could as such sign and verify the plaint in a suit filed by the bank (g)

Principal Officer able to depose to the facts of the case—The Calcutta High Court has held that as regards every pleading on behalf of a company or corporation the fitness to verify of the person purporting to verify it must be proved by affidavit (h) Note the difference in punctuation between this rule and r 3 below

Dismissal of suit—Where in the case of a suit by a corporation the plaint is signed and verified by an officer other than a principal officer of the corporation the suit should be dismissed (i) Similarly the suit should be dismissed if in the case of an unregistered or unincorporated society the suit is brought in the names of some only of the members of the society (j) See notes above

2 [S 436] Subject to any statutory provision regulating service of process, where the suit is against a corporation, the summons may be served—

Power to require personal attendance of officer of corporation

ORDER XXX

Suits by or against Firms and Persons carrying on business in names other than their own

Suing of partners in name of firm

1 1 [New R S C O 48A, r 1] (1) Any two or more persons claiming or being liable as partners and carrying on business in British India may sue or be sued in the name of the firm (if any) of which such persons were partners at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, and any party to a suit may in such case apply to the Court for a statement of the names and addresses of the persons who were, at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, partners in such firm, to be furnished and verified in such manner as the Court may direct

(2) Where persons sue or are sued as partners in the name of their firm under sub rule (1), it shall, in the case of any pleading or other document required by or under this Code to be signed, verified or certified by the plaintiff or the defendant, suffice if such pleading or other document is signed, verified or certified by any one of such persons

Suits by or against firms—The whole of this Order is new It is a reproduction almost verbatim of the principal rules comprised in O 48A of the English rules The rules as to the attachment of partnership property and the execution of decree against firms will be found in O 21 rr 49 and 50 above

In applying English decisions under the corresponding rules in England it must be remembered that there is a distinction between the English and the Indian law as to the liability of partners. According to the English law the liability is joint according to the Indian law it is joint and several. See Indian Contract Act 1872 ss. 42 to 45

Under sec 45 of the Contract Act one of two joint promisees cannot sue alone This order modifies that section and if the promisees are partners enables one to sue alone but only if he sues in the name of the partnership (k)

This Order deals with the mode of suing firms Rule 1 provides that two or more persons claiming or being liable as partners may sue or be sued in the firm name Rule 3 provides that where a suit is instituted by partners in the name of their firm the plaintiffs shall on demand in writing by the defendant declare in writing the names and places of residence of the partners If the plaintiffs fail to comply with the demand the Court may stay further proceedings If the demand is complied with the suit will proceed as if all the partners had been named as plaintiffs in the plaint As regards signature and verification where a suit is brought in a firm name it is provided by r 1 sub r (2) that it will suffice if the pleading or any other document required to be signed or verified is signed or verified by any one of the partners it is not necessary that all the partners should sign or verify it As regards appearance in a suit brought against a firm it is to be noted that a firm cannot appear as a firm and the partners should therefore appear individually in their own names but all subsequent proceedings should continue in the name of the firm (r 6) Where a suit is brought against a firm no partner can put in a personal defence (l) He can only file a written statement for and in the name of the firm The decree also must be in the name of the firm (m) though all the partners may not have appeared (n)

Firm —As to the definition of a firm it is laid down in sec 239 of the Indian Contract Act 1872 that persons who have entered into partnership with one another are called collectively a firm The Calcutta High Court has held that a partnership firm is not a person but merely a collective name of the individuals who are members of the partnership and as such cannot be a partner in another firm (o) If so a firm consisting of individuals and minor firms or of minor firms exclusively cannot be a firm within the meaning of this rule

Minor —In England an infant s contract is voidable and he may be a partner He is not however personally liable for the debts of the firm but a creditor who has obtained judgment against the firm in the proper form that is a judgment against the defendant firm other than A B an infant partner may levy execution against the partnership property (p) If the action is not brought against the firm in the firm name but is brought against the partners as nominee the infant partner ought not to be joined as a party (q) In India a minor s contract is void and a minor cannot be a partner He may however be admitted to the benefits of partnership in which case his share in the property of the firm is liable for the obligations of the firm but he is not personally liable see Indian Contract Act 1872 s 247 The share referred to in s 247 is the right of the minor to participate in the property of the firm after its obligations are satisfied (r) When a minor has been admitted to the benefits of partnership a reference by the firm to arbitration will bind the minor to the extent of his share in the property of the firm (s) See O 21 r 50

r 1 C K on the record The period of limitation had by that time expired and so the lower Court dismissed the suit as time barred The High Court reversed the decree on the ground that the suit was in substance a suit against the firm

At the time of the accruing of the cause of action '—These words show that a suit may be brought by or against a firm in the firm name though the firm may have been dissolved before the date of the suit provided the cause of action arose before dissolution (u)

Carrying on business in British India —This rule applies to all partnerships carrying on business in British India Therefore a firm which carries on business in British India may be sued in the firm name under this rule although it be a foreign firm the members of which are resident out of the jurisdiction (v) The only question to be considered in order to see whether the case comes within the rule is whether the firm carries on business [in British India] (w) If it does the partners may be sued in the firm name If it does not the partners cannot sue (x) or be sued (y) in the firm name The expre sion carry on business has no spec al legal significance It must be interpreted in the ordinary business sense (z) A firm in England cannot be said to carry on business in Bombay merely because it has employed an agent in Bombay to collect orders for the firm the agent having no authority to accept or reject the orders (a) it does not make any difference that the name of the firm is affixed to the agent s office (b) See notes to s 20 Carries on business

Suit by firm on promissory note passed to a member —A firm may sue on a promissory note passed to one of its members though the note has been passed to him in his name (c)

Firm as agriculturist —The definition of agriculturist in sec. 2 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act 1879 can only apply to a firm sued under the provisions of O 30 r 1 if that firm by itself or by its servants or by tenants earns its livelihood wholly or principally by agriculture carried on within the limits of a district to which the Act extends The mere fact that one or all the members of a firm earn their livelihood principally from agricultural income does not make the firm itself an agriculturist within the meaning of that Act (d)

Statement of names and addresses —Rule 2 enables a defendant to obtain disclosure of the names of the partners in a plaintiff firm by a statement in writing by the plaintiffs or their pleader Under r 1 any party to the suit may apply to the Court for a statement of the names of the partners in the plaintiff or defendant firm to be furnished and verified in such manner as the Court may direct (e) It is perhaps not altogether easy to reconcile the two rules but r 2 is applicable to the case only of plaintiff whereas r 1 applies generally (f) Where an affidavit has been filed under r 1 or a declaration made under r 2 the Court has no power to require the deponent or declarant to attend to be cross examined on the affidavit or declaration nor has the Court any power to direct the separate trial of an issue as to whether a person whose name has been disclosed in the affidavit or declaration was a partner in the firm at the time the cause of action accrued (g) But the statement of names disclosed in the affidavit or declaration will be treated as embodied in the plaint and will be a necessary part of the cause of action and if the plaintiffs fail in establishing it, the suit will fail (h)

Suit by or against individual partners—See Indian Contract Act 18—, ss. 43 and 45

2 [New R S C, O 48 A, r 2] (1) Where a suit is instituted by partners in the name of their firm, the plaintiffs or their pleader shall on demand in writing by or on behalf of any defendant, forthwith declare in writing the names and places of residence of all the persons constituting the firm on whose behalf the suit is instituted

Disclosure of partners' names

(2) Where the plaintiffs or their pleader fail to comply with any demand made under sub rule (1), all proceedings in the suit may, upon an application for that purpose, be stayed upon such terms as the Court may direct

(3) Where the names of the partners are declared in the manner referred to in sub rule (1), the suit shall proceed in the same manner, and the same consequences in all respects shall follow, as if they had been named as plaintiffs in the plaint

Provided that all the proceedings shall nevertheless continue in the name of the firm

Disclosure of partners names—See notes to r 1 above ... names and addresses If the plaintiff firm has not made a full disclosure of partners the proper procedure is not to dismiss the suit but to allow the firm ... a further declaration making a full disclosure and thus to remedy the defect

Proceedings to continue in name of firm—See notes to r 1 above ... against firms on p 850 and r 6 below Subsequent proceedings ... of firm.

3 [New R S C O 48 A r 3] Where persons ... as partners in the name of ... summons shall be served either—

as the Court may direct, and such service shall be deemed good service upon the firm so sued, whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India

Provided that, in the case of a partnership which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, the summons shall be served upon every person within British India whom it is sought to make liable

Service of summons—This rule is to be read with r 1 above and with O 21 r 50 It applies only to suits against partners in the name of their firm It provides a special mode of service upon firms carrying on business in British India whether the partners reside within or without British India (j) One mode of service authorized by the rule is service upon anyone or more of the partners the other is service as the principal place of business of the partnership within British India upon the manager of the business If the summons is not served in either of these ways the service is irregular (k) If it is served in either of these ways the service is good service upon the firm whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India The service being good service upon the firm any decree that may be passed in the suit against the firm may be executed against the property of the firm When the firm has been dissolved the only method of service is under clause (a) on a partner (l) and if service by registered post has been ordered the registered letter should be addressed to a partner and not to the firm name at the place where the business used to be carried on (m)

If the service is effected in the first mode prescribed by the rule that is if the service is upon a partner it is good service upon the firm as well as upon that partner personally but it is not service upon any other member of the firm so as to make such member a person who has been individually served as a partner etc within the meaning of O 21 r 50 sub r (1) cl (c) If the service is effected in the second mode prescribed by the rule that is upon a manager at the place of partnership business and the manager is not a partner the service is good service upon the firm but it is not service upon any member of the firm so as to make such member a person who has been individually served as a partner etc within the meaning of O 21 r 50 sub r (1) cl (c) (n) This distinction is important for the purposes of execution for under O 21 r 50 where a decree has been passed against a firm execution can at once issue without leave of Court against the property of the firm and also against the separate property of any individual partner who was served with the writ But execution cannot be issued without leave of Court against the separate property of any partner who was not served with the writ and did not appear (o)

Dissolution of partnership before institution of suit.—Where there has been dissolution to the knowledge of the plaintiff he cannot make an outgoing partner liable unless he served the writ of summons upon him A sues the firm of B & Co upon a promissory note passed to him by the firm When the note was given the firm consisted of three partners X Y and Z but Z had retired from the firm before the institution of the suit and A knew before he instituted the suit that Z had so retired Z resides in British India but he is not individually served as required by the proviso to this rule

Z does not appear A obtains a decree against the firm The decree cannot be executed against the personal property of Z Nor can A apply under O 21 r 50 sub r (2) for leave to execute the decree against the personal property of Z So also on the death of a partner his personal estate cannot be made liable unless his legal representative is joined (p) This is because the present rule overrides O 21 r 50 and the latter rule only applies where there has been no dissolution to the knowledge of the plaintiff (q) The above ruling would not apply to the case of a partner who had left the firm before the institution of the suit without the knowledge of the plaintiff If the plaintiff was not aware of the dissolution when he filed his suit the decree binds all the partners in the firm whether they have been served individually or not (r)

Service on manager, subsequent service on partner—Where a summons is served upon a manager and subsequently upon a partner it is the date of the latter service from which time is to be counted for the appearance of the defendant firm (s)

Principal place at which the partnership business is carried on—See notes to r 1 above Carrying on business in British India

As the Court may direct—These words do not occur in the corresponding English rule According to the English rule the summons may be served upon a partner or upon the manager at the plaintiff s option Under the present rule it would seem that the plaintiff has no such option and that he should obtain the directions of the Court as to the mode of service If the method of service prescribed by the Court is followed then prima facie there has been service on the firm (t) It is conceived however that omission to obtain such directions would not vitiate the service but would constitute at the most an irregularity within the meaning of s 99 above

Notice to be given to the person served as to the capacity in which he is served—See r 5 below and notes thereto

Right of suit on death of partner

(2) Nothing in sub rule (1) shall limit or otherwise affect any right which the legal representative of the deceased may have—

(b) to enforce any claim against the survivor or survivors

30, to recover the amount of the note. The suit must under s. 45 of the Contract Act, be
5 bought by C and D along with B s legal representative. The effect of the present rule is that where the suit is brought in the firm name it is not necessary to join B s legal representative as a party plaintiff (u) But the legal representative may apply to be made a party plaintiff The mere fact that he does not apply will not affect his right to claim the benefit of any decree that may be passed in favour of C and D If the suit is against the firm and one of the partners dies before or during the suit the decree can be enforced against the share of the deceased in the partnership property But if the legal representatives are not joined it cannot be enforced against the personal estate of the deceased partner (v)

Notice in what capacity served

5 [New R S C, O 48A, r 4] Where a summons is issued to a firm and is served in the manner provided by rule 3, every person upon whom it is served shall be informed by notice in writing given at the time of such service, whether he is served as a partner or as a person having the control or management of the partnership business, or in both characters, and, in default of such notice, the person served shall be deemed to be served as a partner

Notice in what capacity served—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name the summons will be issued against the firm Such summons may be served either upon any one or more of the partners or upon the person in control of the business [r 3] The present rule provides that the person served should be informed by notice in writing given at the time of service whether he is served as a partner or as a person in management of the business or in both characters. In default of notice the person served will be deemed—not merely presumed—to be served as a partner If he contends that he is not a partner the proper course for him to adopt is to appear under protest under r 8 below denying that he is a partner If he does not do so he will be deemed to have been served personally as a partner within the meaning of O 21 r 50 sub-r 1 cl. (c) and execution may be granted against him personally (w)

Service on manager—If service is effected on the person in control of the business and no notice is served as provided by this rule the service is not effective and cannot be made so [Annual Practice notes to O 48A r 4].

Appearance under protest.—Where a summons is served upon a person as a partner but such person appears under protest denying that he is a partner the plaintiff may disregard the appearance altogether and proceed as if the summons had not been served that is, he may have service subsequently effected upon a partner or partners or upon any persom having the control of the business as provided by r The mere fact that the person served as a partner denies that he is a under protest does not preclude the plaintiff from firm (r 8 below)

Where a summons is served upon a person appears with denial of partner management of the bu iness the p service is then one under r

(u) H (S
(v) M (

Forms of notice — Take notice that the summons served herewith is served on you—

(i) as a partner in the defendant firm of AB & Co

(ii) or as the person having the control or management of the partnership business of AB & Co

(iii) or as a partner in the defendant firm of AB & Co and also as the person having the control or management of the partnership business of AB & Co

6 [New R S C, O 48A r 5] Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, they shall appear individually in their own names, but all subsequent proceedings shall, nevertheless, continue in the name of the firm

Appearance of partners

Appearance of partners —Though all proceedings in a suit instituted against a firm in the firm name must be conducted in the firm name the partners should so far as appearance is concerned appear individually in their own names The reason of the rule is that a firm cannot appear as a firm Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name the appearance of one partner is the appearance of the firm (x)

The only person entitled to appear in a suit against a firm are—

(i) persons who allege they are partners of the firm sued or were partners at the time the cause of action arose and

(ii) persons who are served as partners but deny that they are partners of the firm sued or were partners of the firm at the time the cause of action accrued Such persons may appear under protest See rr 7 and 8 below

A person served as a manager of the partnership business need not appear unless he is a member of the firm sued (r 7 below) A managing partner of a business firm has an implied authority in the ordinary course of business to appoint solicitors to defend a suit brought against the firm in the firm name and to instruct them to enter an appearance for the other partners as well No suit will therefore lie against the solicitors at the instance of the other partners for entering an appearance in their name without their express authority (y)

The expression individually is not synonymous with in person hence no partner can be forced under this rule to appear in person (z)

All subsequent proceedings shall continue in the name of the firm — Where persons are sued as partners in the firm name the plaint (a) and every subsequent proceeding must be headed with the firm name as defendants The proceedings in a suit so brought continue in the name of the firm even though the names of the partners are disclosed (b) The written statement must be headed in the firm name and the decree also must be against the firm in the firm name The Court cannot in such a suit pass any personal decree against a partner unless he is sued personally along with the firm (c)

Defence —Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name on a claim against the partnership the partners ought if they can agree to put in one written statement But if they cannot agree on one defence each partner is entitled to put in a separate to recover the amount of the note. The suit must, under s. 45 of the Contract Act, be bought by C and D along with B s legal representative. The effect of the present rule is that where the suit is brought in the firm name it is not necessary to join B s legal representative as a party plaintiff (u) But the legal representative may apply to be made a party plaintiff The mere fact that he does not apply will not affect his right to claim the benefit of any decree that may be passed in favour of C and D If the suit is against the firm and one of the partners dies before or during the suit the decree can be enforced against the share of the deceased in the partnership property But if the legal representatives are not joined it cannot be enforced against the personal estate of the deceased partner (v)

Notice in what capacity served

5 [New R S C, O 48A, r 4] Where a summons is issued to a firm and is served in the manner provided by rule 3, every person upon whom it is served shall be informed by notice in writing given at the time of such service, whether he is served as a partner or as a person having the control or management of the partnership business, or in both characters, and, in default of such notice, the person served shall be deemed to be served as a partner

Notice in what capacity served—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name the summons will be issued against the firm Such summons may be served either upon any one or more of the partners or upon the person in control of the business [r 3] The present rule provides that the person served should be informed by notice in writing given at the time of service whether he is served as a partner or as a person in management of the business or in both characters In default of notice the person served will be deemed—not merely presumed—to be served as a partner If he contends that he is not a partner the proper course for him to adopt is to appear under protest under r 8 below denying that he is a partner If he does not do so he will be deemed to have been served personally as a partner within the meaning of O 21 r 50 sub r 1 cl (c) and execution may be granted against him personally (w)

Service on manager—If service is effected on the person in control of the business and no notice is served as provided by this rule the service is not effective and cannot be made so [Annual Practice notes to O 48A r 4]

Appearance under protest—Where a summons is served upon a person as a partner but such person appears under protest denying that he is a partner the plaintiff may disregard the appearance altogether and proceed as if the summons had not been served that is he may have service subsequently effected upon a partner or partners or upon any persom having the control of the business as provided by r 3 above The mere fact that the person served as a partner denies that he is a partner and appears under protest does not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving the summons on the firm (r 8 below)

Where a summons is served upon a person both as a partner and manager and such person appears with denial of partnership but does not deny that he is the person in management of the business the plaintiff is entitled to a decree against the firm for the service is then one under r 3 cl. (b) and such service is good service upon the firm

Forms of notice — Take notice that the summons served herewith is served on you—

(i) as a partner in the defendant firm of AB & Co

(ii) or as the person having the control or management of the partnership business of AB & Co

(iii) or as a partner in the defendant firm of AB & Co and also as the person having the control or management of the partnership business of AB & Co

6 [New R S C O 48A r 5] Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, they shall appear individually in their own names, but all subsequent proceedings shall, nevertheless, continue in the name of the firm

Appearance of partners —Though all proceedings in a suit instituted against a firm in the firm name must be conducted in the firm name the partners should, so far as appearance is concerned appear individually in their own names The reason of the rule is that a firm cannot appear as a firm Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name the appearance of one partner is the appearance of the firm (x)

The only person entitled to appear in a suit against a firm are—

(i) persons who allege they are partners of the firm sued or were partners at the time the cause of action arose and

(ii) persons who are served as partners but deny that they are partners of the firm sued or were partners of the firm at the time the cause of action accrued Such persons may appear under protest See rr 7 and 8 below

A person served as a manager of the partnership business need not appear unless he is a member of the firm sued (r 7 below) A managing partner of a business firm has an implied authority in the ordinary course of business to appoint solicitors to defend a suit brought against the firm in the firm name and to instruct them to enter an appearance for the other partners as well No suit will therefore lie against the solicitors at the instance of the other partners for entering an appearance in their name without their express authority (y)

The expression individually is not synonymous with in person hence no partner can be forced under this rule to appear in person (z)

All subsequent proceedings shall continue in the name of the firm — Where persons are sued as partners in the firm name the plaint (a) and every subsequent proceeding must be headed with the firm name as defendants The proceedings in a suit so brought continue in the name of the firm even though the names of the partners are disclosed (b) The written statement must be headed in the firm name and the decree also must be against the firm in the firm name The Court cannot in such a suit pass any personal decree against a partner unless he is sued personally along with the firm (c)

Defence —Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name on a claim against the partnership the partners ought if they can agree to put in one written statement But if they cannot agree on one defence each partner is entitled to put in a separate

written statement In any case the written statement should be a written statement of the firm but where the partners cannot agree on one defence and a partner puts in a separate defence the proper form would be written statement of the defendant firm of AB & Co by XY one of the partners appearing in the suit It may be asked what is the plaintiff to do if he finds a series of inconsistent defences put in by the different partners? The answer is that to entitle him to judgment against the partnership he must to use a homely phrase beat all the defences—that is to say he must show and satisfy the judge at the trial that not one of the defences prevents a judgment being entered against the partnership (d) What would happen if some of the partners did not appear at all? In case say one partner alone chooses to appear he would be entitled and would be bound to put in a written statement for the firm He might if he choose add by so and so one of the partners served and appearing but his defence would be the defence of the firm and the suit would be tried upon that defence and in that case judgment could be obtained against the firm Of course if the partner chose to put in an improper defence and so rendered the partnership liable in a case where it ought not to be made liable he might thereby as between himself and his co partners be committing a breach of duty for which he would be liable to them but so far as the plaintiff is concerned the plaintiff would be able to obtain judgment against the firm A partner is not entitled in a suit against a firm in the firm name to put in a personal defence he can only put in a defence for and in the name of the firm (e) But where a partner is sued personally along with the firm he may put in a personal defence besides defence for the firm (f)

Decree —Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name the decree must be against the firm in the firm name (g) From this it follows that if one of the partners fails to appear no decree can be passed against him separately for want of appearance (h) and if any one partner does appear no decree can be passed against the firm for want of appearance (i) the appearance of one partner being the appearance of the firm (j) It can never be said that a decree against a firm is ex parte against one of the partners because he has not appeared As soon as a decree is passed against a firm the assets of the firm are liable to satisfy it (k) The firm name is only a compendious way of describing in the writ the partners who compose the firm and a plaintiff who sues a firm sues the partners (l) But though the decree against the firm makes them all liable as to the partnership property it can only be decided in execution proceedings whether a particular partner is personally liable to satisfy the decree (m) See O 21 r 50 and notes to r 8 below As to minor partner see notes to r 1 Minor

No appearance except by partners

8 [New R S C O 48A r 7] Any person served with summons as a partner under rule 3 may appear under protest, denying that he is a partner, but such appearance shall not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving a summons on the firm and obtaining a decree against the firm in default of appearance where no partner has appeared

Appearance under protest

Appearance under protest —Where a person served with a summons as a partner denies that he is a partner he may enter appearance under protest under this rule Where an appearance is entered under protest its effect is to nullify the service altogether as regards the defendant firm (n) In such a case the plaintiff may disregard the appearance under protest altogether and have the summons served upon one who is admittedly a partner or one who has the control or management of the defendant firm as provided by r 3 above and having obtained a decree against the firm he may apply for leave to execute it against such person under O 21 r 50 But the plaintiff is not bound to adopt this course He may take out a chamber summons and contend that the party who appeared under protest is a partner or was a partner at the time the cause of action accrued and apply on that basis to strike out of such appearance the denial of partnership See Annual Practice notes to O 48 A rr 4 and 7 In a case where the plaintiff did not take out a summons to decide whether the party appearing under protest was a partner he was allowed an adjournment to serve the firm But as it was not equitable that the claim should be left hanging over the protesting party pending proceedings under O 21 r 50 the Court directed that the issue whether or not he was a partner should be tried in the suit (o)

Party appearing under protest not entitled to file written statement on his own behalf —A party appearing under protest under this rule is not entitled to file a written statement on his own behalf even one denying that he is a partner (p)

Party appearing under protest not entitled to dispute liability of firm —In England a party appearing under protest is not allowed to plead in the alternative that if he is a partner the firm he is not liable (q)

Defence to party appearing under protest in proceeding under O 21 r 50 — A party appearing under protest is entitled to take any defence in a proceeding against him under O 21 r 50 in addition to the defence that he was not a partner of the defendant firm, unless to do so will be to negative the provisions of a rule of procedure (r)

Scope of the rule —This rule provides that suits between a firm and one of its members or between two firms with a common member may be instituted in the firm name provided the firms carry on business in British India (r 1) But no execution can be issued in such a suit except by leave of the Court

10 [New R S C, O 48 A, r 11] Any person carrying on business in a name or style other than his own name, may be sued in such name or style as if it were a firm name, and, so far as the nature of the case will permit, all rules under this Order shall apply

Suit against person carrying on business in name other than his own

Scope of the rule —A person trading by himself as a firm or in an assumed or trading name may be sued in his trade name but he cannot sue in that name (s) The words as if it were a firm and so far as the nature of the case will permit shew that the case is not identical for one man cannot constitute a firm (t) If a sole proprietor dies a suit after his death must be brought against his legal representatives (u) It cannot after his death be brought against him in his trade name If the suit is brought against him in his trade name the suit is one against a dead man and a nullity (v) If he dies pending the suit the suit will abate unless his legal representative is brought on the record within 90 days from the date of his death (w) This rule does not enable a plaintiff to sue the proprietor of a newspaper in the name of the newspaper (x)

Non resident foreigner —As to the corresponding English rule it has been held that it does not apply where the person carrying on business in a name other than his own is a foreign subject resident out of the jurisdiction though he may carry on business through an agent within the jurisdiction The decision proceeded upon the broad ground that an English Court has no jurisdiction over foreigners residing abroad merely because they carry on business within the jurisdiction and that the words any person though large enough to include a foreigner refer only to an English subject (y) The question as to whether the Courts of this country have jurisdiction over foreigners residing abroad merely because they carry on business here through an agent arose in the recent Privy Council case of Annamalai v Murugasa ( ) but the point was not decided by their Lordships In both Courts in India it was assumed that the Court had jurisdiction but their Lordships said This assumption appears to their Lordships to require more attention than it had received

Application of foregoing rules —By the latter part of this rule all the foregoing rules of this Order relating to proceedings against firms are to apply to a person trading in a name other than his own so far as the nature of the case will permit By virtue of r 1 this rule does not apply unless the business is carried on in British India. By virtue of rr 1 and 2 the person sued in his trade name may be required to disclose his real name and private address By virtue of r 3 the summons may be served upon the person sued or upon any person having the control or management of the business but in the latter case execution cannot be issued against the personal property of the persons sued except by leave of the Court [O 21 r 50] As regards appearance the person sued must appear in his own name (r 6)

ORDER XXXI

Suits by or against Trustees, Executors and Administrators

1 [S 437] Representation of beneficiaries in suits concerning property vested in trustees etc. In all suits concerning property vested in a trustee, executor or administrator, where the contention is between the persons beneficially interested in such property and a third person, the trustee, executor, or administrator shall represent the persons so interested, and it shall not ordinarily be necessary to make them parties to the suit But the Court may, if it thinks fit, order them or any of them to be made parties

Scope of the rule.—This rule applies only where the contention is between the beneficiaries and a third person It does not apply where the contention is between beneficiaries and trustees or between the beneficiaries inter se. In suit between beneficiaries and a third person the trustees sufficiently represent the beneficiaries (a) though the beneficiaries are an unascertained and unascertainable class (b) or persons (c) As to declaratory decrees it is provided by s 43 of the Specific Relief Act 1877 that a declaration made under s 42 of that Act is binding where any of the parties are trustees on the persons for whom if in existence at the date of the declaration such parties would be trustees Compare R S C 16 r 8

When beneficiaries may be added as parties—Beneficiaries should alway be made parties when the executors are wholly uninterested in the case as where they have fully administered the estate (d) or where they have an interest adverse to that of the beneficiaries (e) Where a suit was brought by an executor and the names of the beneficiaries who took possession of the estate pending the suit were substituted as plaintiffs it was held that it did not amount to a substitution of new plaintiffs within the meaning of s 22 of the Limitation Act (f)

A purchases certain property at an execution sale in the name of B If the judgment debtor seeks to set aside the sale A is by virtue of this rule not a necessary party to the proceeding (g)

ORDER XXXII

Suits by or against Minors and Persons of Unsound Mind

1 [S 440 1st para] Every suit by a minor shall be instituted in his name by a person who in such suit shall be called the next friend of the minor

Minor to sue by next friend

Minor—Every person domiciled in British India who has not completed the age of 18 years is a minor In the case however of a minor of whose person or property a guardian has been appointed by a Court of Justice or whose property is under the superintendence of a Court of Wards the age of majority is deemed to have been attained on the minor completing his age of 21 years see Indian Majority Act IX of 1875 s 3

Object of having next friend or guardian ad litem—As a minor is deemed incapable of prosecuting or defending a suit himself it is necessary that his interests in the suit should be watched by an adult person Such person is in the case of a minor plaintiff called his next friend and in the case of a minor defendant his guardian ad litem or guardian for the suit But neither the next friend nor the guardian ad litem is a party to the suit (l) The next friend or guardian ad litem may choose his own attorneys or change them (m) As to liability of next friend for costs see notes below

Title of suit—Where a suit is brought on behalf of a minor the title of the suit should run thus A B a minor by his next friend C D v X Y Where a suit is brought against a minor the title of the suit should be F G v A B a minor by his guardian ad litem C D Where the title of a suit in a case was A B for self and his minor daughter C D instead of A B and C D a minor by her next friend A B and the objection was raised for the first time in appeal it was held that the error did not affect the merits of the case and that it was not therefore fatal to the suit (n) [s 99] See notes to r 3 below under the head Where a minor defendant is substantially represented by a guardian ad litem

Objection to authority of next friend—Where a minor plaintiff has a cause of action no objection to the authority to sue of the next friend through whom the suit is brought will be entertained in appeal (o)

When minor may sue without next friend—A minor may sue in a Presidency Small Cause Court without a next friend when the amount claimed does not exceed Rs 500 and is due to him for wages or for work done as a servant Presidency Small Cause Court Act 15 of 1882 s 32

Liability of next friend for costs—Where a suit brought by a minor by his next friend is dismissed and the Court finds that the suit was not for the benefit of the minor the Court may direct the next friend personally to pay the costs (p) But if the Court finds that there were reasonable grounds for instituting the suit and the next friend has acted bona fide the Court will not mulct the next friend in costs and will direct the costs to come out of the property of the minor (q)

There is nothing in the Code to authorise a Court to decree costs against a guardian ad litem except in the case referred to in r 11 below (r)

Suit on behalf of an alleged minor who in fact is not a minor—A suit i instituted on behalf of a person alleged to be a minor by his next friend. It is found that the plaintiff was not in fact a minor at the date of the institution of the suit In such a case the suit should, according to Allahabad decisions be dismissed (s) according to Calcutta (t) Madras (u) and Lahore (v) decisions the plaint should be returned for amendment. The latter seems to be the better opinion.

Adult sued as minor—Where an adult is sued as a minor by his guardian ad litem and a decree is passed against him he is estopped from disputing the validity of the decree if he knew of the suit before the decree was passed If his property is sold in execution of the decree he is estopped from impeaching the same if he knew of the suit or of the proceedings in execution before the sale (w)

Minor suing as adult.—Where a suit is brought by a minor without a next friend, and the defendant is aware of the plaintiff s minority but does not object and the plaintiff attains majority before the decree is passed the decree is binding upon the parties (x)

Estoppel—A minor who representing himself to be a major collects rents and gives receipts therefor is estopped from again recovering the rents once paid to him by instituting a suit through a next friend (y) Similarly a minor who representing himself to be of full age sells certain property and executes a deed of sale is estopped from suing to set aside the sale on the ground that he was a minor at the date of sale (z) But if the purchaser knew that the vendor was a minor the purchaser could not be said to have been misled by the false representation as to the vendor s age and the suit to set aside the sale would not then be barred (a) A Court of Equity will deprive a fraudulent minor of the benefit of the plea of infancy but he who invokes the aid of the Court must establish not only that a fraud was practised on him by the minor but that he was deceived into action by the fraud (b) It is clear that if the purchaser knew that the vendor was a minor he could not be said to have been deceived into action by the minor s misrepresentation as to his age

Where question of minority is in dispute—Where a person is sued as a major but he claims to be a minor the Court should frame an issue for the determination of the question of minority and for that purpose appoint a guardian for the alleged minor (c)

Attorney s Costs—An attorney is entitled to recover from the infant s estate the costs of a proper suit or defence of a suit in which the estate was involved. He is also entitled to have a charge declared on the estate for the amount of his costs (d)

2 [S 442] (1) Where a suit is instituted by or on behalf of a minor without a next friend, the defendant may apply to have the plaint taken off the file, with costs to be paid by the pleader or other person by whom it was presented

Where suit is instituted without next friend plaint to be taken off the file

(2) Notice of such application shall be given to such person, and the Court, after hearing his objections (if any), may make such order in the matter as it thinks fit

Taking the plaint off the file—This rule contemplates the case where a suit is instituted without a next friend by a person who is alleged by the defendant to be a minor In such a case the defendant may apply under this rule to have the plaint taken off the file To bring his case within the rule the defendant must show that the plaintiff is a minor and that the suit was instituted without a next friend Now the fact of minority—

(i) may either be apparent on the face of the plaint or

(ii) it may be ascertained upon objection by the defendant and enquiry by the Court

In case (i) the practice is to take the plaint off the file (e)

In case (ii) i e where the fact of minority is established after evidence has been taken on the point it may be found—the practice of the two Courts is important in this way that while an appeal lies from a decree dismissing a suit no appeal lies from an order directing a plaint to be taken off the file

In case (b) the practice is to stay proceedings and to allow sufficient time to enable the minor plaintiff to be represented by a next friend (h)

The Court should take notice of the irregularity and refuse to proceed even if the suit is ex parte (i) If the defendant appears and does not object the Court should not reject the plaint but should allow the plaintiff time to get himself properly represented (j) When a next friend is appointed the objection that the suit was originally instituted without a next friend can no longer be urged (k) If the plaintiff attains majority before the Court has decided that he is a minor there is no necessity to appoint a next friend (l)

The absence of a next friend does not make the suit a nullity The institution of a suit by a minor without a next friend is merely an irregularity which can be waived by the conduct of the defendant (n)

(2) Notice of such application shall be given to such person, and the Court, after hearing his objections (if any), may make such order in the matter as it thinks fit

Taking the plaint off the file—This rule contemplates the case where a suit is instituted without a next friend by a person who is alleged by the defendant to be a minor In such a case the defendant may apply under this rule to have the plaint taken off the file To bring his case within the rule the defendant must show that the plaintiff is a minor and that the suit was instituted without a next friend Now the fact of minority—

(i) may either be apparent on the face of the plaint or

(ii) it may be ascertained upon objection by the defendant and enquiry by the Court

In case (i) the practice is to take the plaint off the file (e)

In case (ii) i e where the fact of minority is established after evidence has been taken on the point it may be found—

Sub-rule (4) is new

Guardian ad litem—Where a guardian ad litem has once been appointed, his appointment endures for the whole of the litigation including proceedings in execution and appeal (o) The Calcutta High Court has held that a guardian ad litem appointed in the original suit does not continue as such in execution proceedings without fresh appointment (p) But it is submitted that this is erroneous for execution proceedings are a continuation of the suit

A guardian ad litem is not a party to a suit or appeal Therefore a suit or an appeal is not time barred merely because the order appointing a guardian ad litem is not made until after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the suit or appeal (q)

Proper person to be appointed guardian ad litem—It is the duty of the judge himself to decide who is the proper person to be appointed as guardian ad litem (r)

Plea of minority—A sues B B alleges that he is a minor In such a case the Court should frame a preliminary issue on the question of minority and appoint a guardian for the purpose of the enquiry on the question of minority If the defendant is found to be a minor a guardian ad litem should be appointed for him but if he is found to be a major the guardian appointed for the inquiry should cease to act and the defendant may conduct his own case (s) So also if a dispute arises as to whether a minor is the legal representative of a deceased party the Court should appoint a guardian ad litem and decide the matter (t)

Non representation—The provisions of this rule as to the appointment of a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant are imperative Hence if a minor is sued without a guardian ad litem and a decree is passed against him the decree is a nullity and it cannot be enforced against him (u) For the same reason it cannot operate as res judicata (v)

The Allahabad High Court has held that a minor against whom a decree has been passed without the appointment of a proper guardian ad litem may if the facts of the case justify, in that very suit (1) appeal from the decree or (2) apply for a review of judgment or (3) apply for an order under r 5 (2) below according as the circumstances of the case may permit or he may bring a regular suit to set aside the decree and the sale (if any) in execution of the decree (w) A minor however cannot resist execution of the decree on the ground that the decree is a nullity for a minor not represented by a proper guardian ad litem as where the guardian ad litem is a person whose interest is adverse to that of the minor [r 4] cannot be said to be a party to the suit within the meaning of s 47 above (x) O 3

The Allahabad High Court has held that where a decree in a suit against a minor is set aside in a subsequent suit by the minor on the sole ground that he was not represented by a proper guardian ad litem the Court whose decree is set aside has inherent power to restore the suit and to proceed with the appointment of a fit and proper person as guardian ad litem for the minor defendant (y) But the Madras High Court has held that there is no such inherent jurisdiction (z) Again the Allahabad High Court has held that where an ex parte decree has been passed against a minor not properly represented the minor may apply to have the decree set aside under O 9 r 13 (a) The Madras High Court has held that no such application is competent the reason given being that a minor not properly represented in a suit cannot be regarded as a party to a suit and an application under O 9 r 13 can only be made by a party to the suit (b)

Substantial representation—When a minor defendant is not represented at all as in the cases referred in the preceding paragraph he is not a party to the suit and the decree as against him is a nullity That must be distinguished from another class of cases where the Court has recognised a guardian ad litem but has made no formal appointment or has made an appointment which is open to objection owing to some defect of procedure The rule in this latter class of cases is different for the decree will bind the minor unless it is shewn that the defect of procedure has prejudiced him In this class of cases the leading case is that of Walian v Banke Behari (c) That was a suit brought against a minor but no order was applied for and none was made for the appointment of a guardian ad litem In the plaint however which was admitted by the Court the mother of the minor was described as his guardian. Further the mother appeared throughout the proceedings in the suit as the minor s guardian A decree was passed against the minor and in the decree and the execution proceedings the mother was described as the minor s guardian In a suit brought by the minor on attaining majority to set aside the decree passed against him on the ground that no guardian ad litem had been appointed as required by the present rule it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council overruling the decision of the Calcutta High Court that the Court in which the former suit was instituted had by its action given sanction to the appearance of the mother as a guardian ad litem and that the absence of a formal order of appointment was not fatal to the suit unless it was shewn that the defect in procedure prejudiced the minor Their Lordships observed that there was nothing in the proceedings of that suit to suggest that the interests of the minor were not duly protected by the mother or that the defect in procedure had prejudiced the minor and they accordingly held that the decree was binding upon the minor The particular defects of procedure that have been condoned on the ground of no prejudice to the minor are—omission to make a formal order of appointment (d) an appointment made without the affidavit required by r 3 (3)

being filed (e) or without notice to the minor under r 3 (4) (f) appointment of a Court guardian without notice to the person in whose care the minor is (g) But such irregularities will vitiate the decree if there is prejudice to the minor as in Sadashir v Trimbuk (h) and Shaik Abdul Karim v Thakurdas (i) where no formal appointment was made and the minor s interest were not protected or in Bhagwan v Param (j) where a Nazir was appointed guardian without notice to the mother with whom the minor lived and he for want of funds took no steps to defend the suit The rule is well stated by Wallace J in Tirumalacharyulu v Ammisetti (k) as follows No irregularity by way of omission to send notice as required by O 32 r 3 shall operate to render void the presumed representation of the minor in a suit unless such omission has in fact prejudiced their defence and such prejudice is not a matter of assumption or presumption but of proof

Notice—Notice should be served both on the proposed guardian and on the minor and the wishes of the minor should be considered (l) But if there is no fraud or collusion failure to give notice to the minor is an irregularity which does not justify the Court in setting aside the decree (m)

Service of summons—There is no express provision in the Code for service on minors Hence where the defendant is a minor he should be served with the summons in the way provided for service upon adults (n) But where a guardian ad litem has been appointed by the Court service of summons or of notice of hearing in the case of an appeal on such guardian is sufficient (o) As to service in suits brought against wards of Courts of Wards see Bengal Court of Wards Act 1879 s 54 and Bombay Court of Wards Act 1905 s. 34

Fraud of next friend or guardian ad litem—A decree passed against a minor properly represented is binding upon him as much as a decree passed against an adult but it is open to the minor to impeach the decree by a suit in cases where the next friend or guardian for the suit has been guilty of fraud or collusion in allowing the decree to be passed against him (q) or of culpable negligence which has brought prejudice to the minor (q)

Probate proceedings—Until a contest arises section 141 of the Code is not applicable to a probate proceeding so as to attract the applicability of this Order But where a will of which probate is sought affects the interests of a minor it may be expedient as a rule of practice to appoint a guardian ad litem (r)

(3) No person shall without his consent be appointed guardian for the suit

(4) Where there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian for the suit the Court may appoint any of its officers to be such guardian, and may direct that the costs to be incurred by such officer in the performance of his duties as such guardian shall be borne either by the parties or by any one or more of the parties to the suit, or out of any fund in Court in which the minor is interested, and may give directions for the repayment or allowance of such costs as justice and the circumstances of the case may require

Married woman as guardian ad litem—Under the Code of 1882 though a married woman could be appointed next friend of a minor plaintiff she could not be appointed guardian ad litem of a minor defendant Under this Code she may also be appointed guardian ad litem

Sub rule (1) adverse interest.—This rule provides that a person whose interest is adverse to that of a minor should not be appointed guardian ad litem This has given rise to the question whether if a minor is represented by a guardian ad litem whose

3 being filed (e) or without notice to the minor under r 3 (4) (f) appointment of a Court guardian without notice to the person in whose care the minor is (g) But such irregularities will vitiate the decree if there is prejudice to the minor as in Sadashiv v Trimbak (h) and Shaik Abdul Karim v Thakurdas (i) where no formal appointment was made and the minor's interest were not protected or in Bhagwan v Param (j) where a Nazir was appointed guardian without notice to the mother with whom the minor lived and he for want of funds took no steps to defend the suit The rule is well stated by Wallace J in Tirumalacharyulu v Ammisetti (k) as follows No irregularity by way of omission to send notice as required by O 32 r 3 shall operate to render void the presumed representation of the minor in a suit unless such omission has in fact prejudiced their defence and such prejudice is not a matter of assumption or presumption but of proof

Notice—Notice should be served both on the proposed guardian and on the minor and the wishes of the minor should be considered (l) But if there is no fraud or collusion failure to give notice to the minor is an irregularity which does not justify the Court in setting aside the decree (m)

Service of summons—There is no express provision in the Code for service on minors Hence where the defendant is a minor he should be served with the summons in the way provided for service upon adults (n) But where a guardian ad litem has been appointed by the Court service of summons or of notice of hearing in the case of an appeal on such guardian is sufficient (o) As to service in suits brought against wards of Courts of Wards see Bengal Court of Wards Act 1879 s 51 and Bombay Court of Wards Act 1905 s. 34

Fraud of next friend or guardian ad litem—A decree passed against a minor properly represented is binding upon him as much as a decree passed against an adult but it is open to the minor to impeach the decree by a suit in cases where the next friend or guardian for the suit has been guilty of fraud or collusion in allowing the decree to be passed against him (p) or of culpable negligence which has brought prejudice to the minor (q)

Probate proceedings—Until a contest arises section 141 of the Code is not applicable to a probate proceeding so as to attract the applicability of this Order But where a will of which probate is sought affects the interests of a minor it may be expedient as a rule of practice to appoint a guardian ad litem (r)

Execution proceedings—The provisions of this order do not directly apply to execution proceedings The non representation of a minor by a guardian ad litem in execution proceedings is not in itself sufficient to set aside an execution sale (s)

Who may act as next friend or be appointed guardian for the suit

(1) Any person who is of sound mind and has attained majority may act as next friend of a minor or as his guardian for the suit

Provided that the interest of such person is not adverse to that of the minor and that he is not, in the case of a next friend, a defendant, or, in the case of a guardian for the suit, a plaintiff

(2) Where a minor has a guardian appointed or declared by competent authority, no person other than such guardian shall act as the next friend of the minor or be appointed his guardian for the suit unless the Court considers, for reasons to be recorded that it is for the minor's welfare that another person be permitted to act or be appointed, as the case may be

(3) No person shall without his consent be appointed guardian for the suit

(4) Where there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian for the suit, the Court may appoint any of its officers to be such guardian, and may direct that the costs to be incurred by such officer in the performance of his duties as such guardian shall be borne either by the parties or by any one or more of the parties to the suit, or out of any fund in Court in which the minor is interested, and may give directions for the repayment or allowance of such costs as justice and the circumstances of the case may require

4 interest is adverse to that of the minor the decree passed in the suit is a nullity The leading case on the subject is Rashid un-nissa v Muhammad (u) In that case a suit was brought by a minor for a declaration that two decrees and three sales in execution affecting her share in her father s estate were invalid as against her as she was represented in the suit by her uncle whose interest was obviously adverse The Subordinate Judge decreed the suit but the High Court set aside the decree holding that the suit was barred by sec 244 of the Code of 1882 (now sec 47) and that the proper course for the plaintiff if she had any objection to make to the execution of the decree was to raise it in execution proceedings The judgment of the High Cout however was reversed in appeal to the Privy Council In the course of the judgment their Lordships said With all respect to the learned judges of the High Court their Lordships are unable to agree with this conclusion Sec 244 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to questions arising between parties to the suit in which the decree was passed that is to say between parties who have been properly made parties in accordance with the provisions of the Code Their Lordships agree with the Subordinate Judge that the appellant was never a party to any of these suits in the proper sense of the term Her sister Ulfat un nisa was a married woman and therefore disqualified under sec 45 of the Code from being appointed guardian for the suit and Maulada r's [uncle s] interest was obviously adverse to that of the minor This decision has been followed by the High Court of Madras and it has been held that where the interest of a guardian ad litem is obviously adverse the decree is a nullity (v) A similar view has been taken by the High Court of Allahabad (w) The same point was raised in another Madras case but the learned judges said that they were not prepared on the facts of the case to hold that the guardian ad litem was so wholly disqualified that her representation must be treated as no representation at all (x) In a recent Calcutta case Rankin C J doubted whether Rashid-un nissa v Muhammad went so far as to hold that the appointment of a guardian ad litem whose interest was adverse rendered the decree a nullity in every case (y)

The question whether a guardian ad litem appointed by the Court has an interest adverse to that of the minor is one of fact Where a mortgage or other transaction has been entered into by a person on behalf of a minor and a suit is brought against the minor to enforce the transaction the question arises whether such person can be appointed the guardian of the minor for the suit It has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that there is nothing either in the Code of Civil Procedure or in any of the authorities to lay down not merely that such a person should not as a rule be appointed but cannot in any circumstances be validly appointed ( )

Sub rule (2) guardian appointed by competent authority—A guardian of his minor son appointed by a Hindu father under his will is not a guardian appointed by competent authority within the meaning of this rule (a)

Sub r (2) provides that where a minor has a guardian appointed by competent authority no person other than such guardian should be appointed his guardian ad litem The Allahabad High Court has held that where the Court in ignorance of the fact that the minor has a guardian appointed by competent authority appoints another person guardian for the suit such appointment is not an illegality but a mere irregularity and it does not of itself vitiate either the decree passed in the suit or a sale consequent upon such decree (b) But the Madras High Court has held that this is an illegality which vitiates the decree (c) The permission to appoint another person as next friend or as guardian ad litem need not be express (d) Failure to record reasons as required by sub r (2) is an irregularity which does not of itself vitiate the appointment (e) O 3

Sub rule (3) consent of guardian ad litem—This sub rule controls both sub rule (1) and sub rule (2) and places a material restriction on the power of the Court No person competent under either of these sub rules can be appointed guardian ad litem without his consent (f) A guardian who has not consented to act as such is no guardian at all and the decree is invalid irrespective of any question of prejudice because the minor has not been represented in the suit (g) Das J seems to take a different view in Pande Saldeo v Ramayan (h) but that is erroneous as pointed out by Venkatasubba Rao J in Sriramulu v Lakshminarayana (i) and by Rankin C J in Satis Chandra v Hashem Ali (j) The Allahabad High Court has said that in certain circumstances consent may be presumed when the proposed guardian remains silent and absent (l) But it is submitted that this is incorrect and the proper procedure in such case is in default of any other person fit and willing to act to appoint an officer of the Court (l) But under the Code of 188- which did not contain any proviso similar to r 4 (3) when a guardian under the Guardian and Ward Act made no response consent was presumed (m) In an Allahabad case where a father and his minor son were sued the Court appointed the mother guardian ad litem in spite of her refusal. The father filed a written statement for the son and defended the suit on his behalf It is clear that the minor was not represented by his mother but the High Court held that there was substantial representation by the father and there was no prejudice to the minor (n) The consent need not be expressed in writing Some cases use the phrase express consent but the word express is not in the rule Consent is a question of fact and the evidence of it may be indirect and circumstantial (o) or it may be proved by conduct (p)

Sub rule (4) Officer of Court as guardian ad litem—In cases under the previous Codes it was held that if an officer of Court was appointed guardian ad litem he should not be paid for his trouble (q) also that if he had no funds to conduct adequately the d fence of the minor the Court could relieve him of his po ition as guardian (r) But under the present code the Court may provide for the costs to be incurred by him in order that he may obtain legal assistance and this is so even when the guardian ad litem is himself a pleader (s) The appointment of an officer of the Court as guardian ad litem on a fals affidavit that there is no other person fit and willing is vitiated by fraud and is of no legal effect A decree so obtained is not binding on the minor (t) But the mere fact that no inquiry has been made by the Court into the question whether there was any other person fit and willing to act as guardian ad litem does not make the decree a nullity the case is merely one of irregularity (u) The Deputy Registrar who has been appointed guardian of minor respondents in a High Court appeal may also be appointed to represent them in proceedings for obtaining leave to appeal to Privy Council but upon the final admission of the appeal he ceases to represent them (v) The High Court cannot provide for the costs of a guardian ad litem in an appeal to Privy Council (v) As to irregularities in the appointment of a Court guardian see notes under rule 3 above

Representation of minor by next friend or guardian for the suit

5 [Ss 441, 442] (1) Every application to the Court on behalf of a minor, other than an application under rule 10, sub rule (2), shall be made by his next friend or by his guardian for the suit

(2) Every order made in a suit or on any application, before the Court in or by which a minor is in any way concerned or affected, without such minor being represented by a next friend or guardian for the suit, as the case may be may be discharged, and, where the pleader of the party at whose instance such order was obtained knew, or might reasonably have known, the fact of such minority, with costs to be paid by such pleader

Receipt by next friend or guardian for the suit of property under decree for minor

6 [S 461] (1) A next friend or guardian for the suit shall not, without the leave of the Court, receive any money or other movable poperty on behalf of a minor either—

(a) by way of compromise before decree or order, or

(b) under a decree or order in favour of the minor

(2) Where the next friend or guardian for the suit has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be guardian of the property of the minor, or, having been so appointed or declared, is under any disability known to the Court to receive the money or other movable property, the Court shall, if it grants him leave to receive the property, require such security and give such directions as will in its opinion, sufficiently protect the property from waste and ensure its proper application

due on a decree in favour of himself and the minor (w) But this conflicts with the Privy Council ruling in Ganesh Rao v Tuljaram (x) that a manager of a joint family if he is a next friend or guardian is subject to the control of the Court and that he cannot do in his capacity of manager acts that he is debarred from doing as next friend or guardian without the leave of the Court Accordingly when payment under a decree in favour of a minor and of the manager of a joint Hindu family was certified to the Court by the manager alone who was the next friend of the minor the Court refused to record it as the leave of the Court had not been obtained and for the same reason the Court refused to recognize the payment as a valid discharge and granted an execution application for the recovery of the whole amount (y)

Security for protection of minor s property—A bond passed by a surety under sub r (2) cannot be enforced by summary process under s 145 ( )

7 [S 462] (1) No next friend or guardian for the suit shall, without the leave of the Court, expressly recorded in the proceedings, enter into any agreement or compromise on behalf of a minor with reference to the suit in which he acts as next friend or guardian

Agreement or compromise by next friend or guardian for the suit

(2) Any such agreement or compromise entered into without the leave of the Court so recorded shall be voidable against all parties other than the minor

Alterations in the rule—The words expressly recorded in the proceedings in sub r (1) and the words so recorded in sub r (2) are new They give effect to the practice established under the old section. See notes below Compromise decree when binding on a minor

Scope of the rule—This rule contemplates the following steps to be taken in order before a compromise decree is passed in a suit to which a minor is a party namely (1) an application by the next friend or guardian ad litem for leave to compromise the suit (2) the granting of leave by the Court if the Court thinks the case is a fit one for leave and (3) the consent of the next friend or guardian ad litem to the proposed compromise after the Court has granted the leave (a) If the leave is granted and the next friend or guardian ad litem assents to the compromise the parties may apply to the Court under O 23 r 3 for a consent decree in terms of the compromise and if the compromise is lawful it is the duty of the Court under that rule to pass the decree applied for If the next friend of a minor plaintiff agrees to compromise a suit on behalf of the minor subject to the leave of the Court and then withdraws from the compromise before the leave of the Court is applied for the Court will not enforce the compromise at the instance of the defendant even though the terms of the compromise might appear beneficial to the minor The reason is that such compromise is not binding unless it is sanctioned by the Court (b) The Court cannot force a compromise upon a minor against the opinion of the guardian ad litem or next friend (c) But if the guardian or next friend is acting improperly in refusing to consent to a beneficial arrangement the Court may take steps to remove him and substitute some other person (c)

Compromise decree when binding on minor—The provision contained in this rule making it necessary to obtain the leave of the Court is of great importance for the protection of minor s interests (d) and it has been extended to a compromise by a natural guardian who has put herself in the place of a guardian ad litem by applying to the Court to sanction a compromise (e) To render a decree passed in pursuance of a com promise binding on a minor the following conditions must be complied with —

(a) The next friend or guardian ad litem must apply to the Court for leave to enter into the proposed compromise (f) stating specifically that the com promise is sought to be made on behalf of the minor (g) and also setting forth the terms of the proposed compromise (h)

(b) On such an application being made to the Court the Court must exercise a judicial discretion as to the propriety in the interests of the minor of the proposed compromise (i) It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what materials a Judge may call for before he is satisfied with the compromise and that is a matter which must be left to his discretion (j) And if the Court sees reason to grant leave it should record an order showing that an application has been made to it that the terms of the proposed agreement or compromise have been considered by it and that having regard to the interests of the minor it has granted leave to make the agreement or compromise (k) It is not sufficient that the terms of a compromise are before the Court There ought to be evidence that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise and it ought to be shown by an order on petition or in some way not open to doubt that the leave of the Court was obtained (l) A compromise will be deemed to be beneficial to the interests of a minor if it secures to the minor some demonstrable advan tage or averts some obvious mischief (m) A certificate of counsel for the minor that the compromise is for his benefit is according to ordinary practice sufficient (n)

In Bombay it has been held that in sanctioning a compromise as for the benefit of a minor the Court should have before it an affidavit by the next friend or guardian of the minor to that effect and in heavy ca es there should be an opinion of counsel or else a statement by counsel at the bar that in his opinion the compromise is for the benefit of the minor It has also been held that the Court is not bound to pass a decree in the exact form of the terms of the compromise agreed to by the parties and that it may make such alterations as it deems expedient (o)

(c) The leave must be express not implied It must in the language of this rule be expressly recorded in the proceedings From the mere fact that the Court has passed a decree in accordance with a compromise it cannot be inferred that any of the steps preliminary and necessary to the making of the decree have been taken by the Court The Court by passing a decree in > pursuance of a compromi e does not ipso facto sanction the compromise (p) The provisions of this rule are complied with if the leave of the Court is expressly recorded it is not necessary that the order granting leave should state that the Court had considered the terms of the compromise and regarded them to be beneficial to the minor (q)

But the non observance of the above conditions does not render the compromise decree void or affect the jurisdiction of the Court to record it (r) The decree is only voidable and that too at the option of the minor No other party to the suit can call the decree in question the minor alone is entitled to call it in question and this he may do either on attaining majority or before then through a next friend (s)

Procedure to set aside compromise decree—A compromise decree may be set aside either in a regular suit or upon an application for review to the Court that passed the decree (t) But it cannot be called in question by way of objection to any proceeding taken in execution of it (u)

It was doubtful whether under the Code of 188_ a compromise decree can be set aside by an appeal from the decree Where an appeal was preferred from a compromise decree on the ground that the lower Court did not consider the question as to whether the compromi e was a proper one in the interests of the minor the High Court of Allahabad entertained the appeal (v) in a similar case the High Court of Calcutta refused to entertain the appeal (w) Under the present Code no appeal lies from a consent decree [s 96 sub-s (3)]

Compromise under misapprehension of a material fact—Where a compromise is entered into under a mi apprehension of a material fact it will be set aside even though it may have been sanctioned by the Court under this rule (x) See Indian Contract Act 1872 s 20 Something in the nature of fraud must be shewn before a compromise sanctioned by the Court is set aside (y)

Minor attaining majority pending suit—If the minor attains majority while the suit is still pending a compromise entered into by his guardian is not binding on him even though it has been sanctioned by the Court ( )

Compromise of execution proceedings—Execution proceedings are a continuation of the suit and a next friend or guardian cannot after decree enter into a compromise or an adjustment of the decree without the sanction of the Court (a) See O 21 r 2 And this is so even though the guardian ad litem had power as natural guardian to sell the minor s property (b) But the rule is confined to an agreement or compromise in the course of the suit A transfer by a guardian ad litem of a decree

in favour of a minor made not with reference to the suit or execution proceeding does not require the sanction of the Court (c)

Agreement to be bound by oath under Indian Oaths Act 1873 s 9 not within this rule —An agreement by the next friend (d) or guardian (e) of a minor that an issue in the suit should be determined by the oath of the defendant does not come within the purview of this rule and the sanction of the Court is not necessary In such a case the minor is bound by the agreement provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend

Abandonment of issue does not amount to a compromise —A next friend or guardian ad litem may abandon an issue in the course of the trial of the suit and the sanction of the Court is not requisite for that purpose for the abandonment of an issue does not amount to a compromise within the meaning of this rule The abandonment is binding on the minor provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend or guardian ad litem (f)

Agreement to refer to arbitration —It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (g) and Bombay (h) and by the Chief Court of the Punjab (i) that an agreement by a next friend or guardian ad litem to refer any matter in controversy in a suit to arbitration is an agreement within the meaning of this rule and that the sanction of the Court is therefore necessary According to the Allahabad High Court such an agreement is not within this rule and the sanction of the Court is not necessary (j) See schedule II r 1

The decisions cited above relate to cases where the agreement to refer was made during the pendency of a suit But cases also occur in which no suit is pending and an agreement to refer is made to which a minor is a party by his guardian In such cases the application of the rule depends upon whether —

(1) that there should be a pending suit as indicated by the words no next friend or guardian for the suit and

(2) that there should be an agreement to refer

If either of these conditions is wanting the present rule does not apply and no leave of the Court is necessary A and B carry on business in partnership A dies leaving a minor son and a widow Disputes arise between the parties as to accounts and an agreement is made between the minor through his mother and B to refer the disputes to arbitration The arbitrators make their award and the minor by his mother applies to file the award under para 20 of Sch II The application is registered as a suit between the minor applicant as plaintiff and B as defendant [see the 2nd clause of para 20] Notice is then given as required by the 3rd clause of para 20 to B and no objection to the award having been made by B the award is filed and a decree passed in terms of the award as provided by para 21 of Sch II Does the agreement to refer require the sanction of the Court under this rule ? No because it was not made during the pendency of a suit and the first of the two conditions mentioned above is wanting (k) Does the decree on the award require the sanction of the Court ? No because the application to file the award being made by the minor as plaintiff it cannot be said that there was an agreement on behalf of the minor not to object to the award and to allow a decree to be pas ed on the award in this case the second of the two conditions mentioned above is wanting (l) Again if the application to file the award was made by B in which case the application would be registered as a suit between B as plaintiff and the minor as defendant would the decree on the award require the sanction of the Court ? Ye if the minor s guardian agreed not to object to the award and to allow a decree to be passed on the award in this case both the conditions mentioned above are pre-ent namely that there is an agreement on behalf of the minor and the agreement is made in the course of a suit started by the application to file the award (m)

Withdrawal of suit by next friend —If the next friend of a minor plaintiff withdraws from the suit and such withdrawal is in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant the withdrawal must be with the sanction of the Court under this rule if the sanction of the Court is not obtained the order of withdrawal may be set aside at the instance of the minor (n) If an appeal is with drawn on terms and there are parties concerned who are not sui juris the leave of the Court mu t be obtained (o) But if the withdrawal is not in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant the sanction of the Court is not necessary and the withdrawal is binding on the minor plaintiff provided there is no fraud or gro s negligence on the part of the next fri nd (p)

Where the minor is a member of a joint Hindu family —In a suit brought by some of the members of a joint Hindu family one of whom was a minor a compromise decree was passed after the compromi e had been sanctioned by the Court The minor had no separate interest the adult members of the family had taken part in the compromise and assented to it and the Court declared that it was for the benefit of the minor In a suit brought on behalf of the minor to set aside the compromise decree on the ground that the proper materials which were essential to make the compromi e and decree binding upon him were not placed before the Court previous to obtaining its sanction it was held that the decree was under the circum stances binding on the minor (q)

8 [S 447] (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, a next friend shall not retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in his place and giving security for the costs already incurred

Retirement of next friend

(2) The application for the appointment of a new next friend shall be supported by an affidavit showing the fitness of the person proposed, and also that he has no interest adverse to that of the minor

Retirement of next friend —A suit is brought by A and B both minors by their mother as their next friend. The mother is also appointed guardian of the person and property of the minors under the Guardian and Wards Act 1890 Subsequently on the application of the mother A who has then attained majority is appointed guardian of the person and property of B in her place This is not tantamount to A being appointed next friend of B for the suit The mother therefore cannot retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in her place and giving security for the costs already incurred (u)

9 [S 446] (1) Where the interest of the next friend of a minor is adverse to that of the minor or where he is so connected with a defendant whose interest is adverse to that of the minor as to make it unlikely that the minor's interest will be properly protected by him, or where he does not do his duty, or, during the pendency of the suit, ceases to reside within British India, or for any other sufficient cause, application may be made on behalf of the minor or by a defendant for his removal, and the Court if satisfied of the sufficiency of the cause assigned, may order the next friend to be removed accordingly, and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit

Removal of next friend

(2) Where the next friend is not a guardian appointed or declared by an authority competent in this behalf, and an application is made by a guardian so appointed or declared, who desires to be himself appointed in the place of the next friend, the Court shall remove the next friend unless it considers, for reasons to be recorded by it, that the guardian ought not to be appointed the next friend of the minor, and shall thereupon appoint the applicant to be next friend in his place upon such terms as to the costs already incurred in the suit as it thinks fit

(u) Banarsi Prasad v Ram Narain (1908) 30 All 105

Alterations in the rule—The words and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit in sub-r (1) are new The words and shall thereupon appoint etc at the end of sub r (2) are also new

Where the next friend does not do his duty—Where a Court finds that a next friend does not do his duty in relation to a suit it is its duty not to permit him to prejudice the interests of the minor but to adjourn the suit in order that some one interested in the minor may apply on behalf of the minor for the removal of the next friend and for the appointment of a new next friend or that the minor plaintiff himself may on coming of age elect to proceed with the suit or withdraw from it (v) So also if he is acting improperly in refusing to consent to a beneficial compromise (w)

Appeal after expiry of limitation period—In a suit brought against a minor by his guardian a decree is passed against the minor The interest of the minor requires an appeal but certain events happen after the passing of the decree which render it to the interest of the guardian ad litem that the decree against the minor should stand and hence no appeal is preferred by him from the decree In such a case leave will be granted to the minor on his attaining majority to appeal from the decree though the period of limitation for the appeal may have expired (x)

Non appearance of next friend—When the next friend does not appear the suit should not be dismissed for default even though a reservation is made that such dismissal is without prejudice to the minor The proper course is to stay further proceedings pending the appointment of another next friend (y)

Stay of proceeding on removal etc of next friend

10 [Ss 448 449] (1) On the retirement removal or death of the next friend of a minor, further proceedings shall be stayed until the appointment of a next friend in his place

(2) Where the pleader of such minor omits, within a reasonable time, to take steps to get a new next friend appointed, any person interested in the minor or in the matter in issue may apply to the Court for the appointment of one, and the Court may appoint such person as it thinks fit

Retirement removal or death of guardian for the suit

11 [Ss 458 459] (1) Where the guardian for the suit desires to retire or does not do his duty, or where other sufficient ground is made to appear, the Court may permit such guardian to retire or may remove him, and may make such order as to costs as it thinks fit

(2) Where the guardian for the suit retires, dies or is removed by the Court during the pendency of the suit, the Court shall appoint a new guardian in his place

The words may permit such guardian to retire in sub-r (1) are new The guardian does not cease to be a guardian merely because he expresses a desire to retire.

(3) The title of the suit or application shall in such case be corrected so as to read thenceforth thus —

(4) Where he elects to abandon the suit or application, he shall, if a sole plaintiff or sole applicant, apply for an order to dismiss the suit or application on repayment of the costs incurred by the defendant or opposite party or which may have been paid by his next friend

(5) Any application under this rule may be made ex parte but no order discharging a next friend and permitting a minor plaintiff to proceed in his own name shall be made without notice to the next friend

When title to be corrected —The provisions of this rule which require the title of a suit to be corrected apply to a pending suit and not to a suit in which a final decree has been passed and in which it only remains to proceed in execution (b)

Unreasonable or improper suit

(2) Notice of the application shall be served on all the parties concerned, and the Court, upon being satisfied of such unreasonableness or impropriety, may grant the application and order the next friend to pay the cost of all parties in respect of the application and of anything done in the suit, or make such other order as it thinks fit

15 [S 456] The provisions contained in rules 1 to 14, so far as they are applicable, shall extend to persons adjudged to be of unsound mind and to persons who though not so adjudged are found by the Court on inquiry by reason of unsoundness of mind or mental infirmity to be incapable of protecting their interests when suing or being sued

Application of rules to persons of unsound mind

Persons of unsound mind —The present rule makes the provisions of rule 1 to 14 applicable to persons of unsound mind. The result is that where a person of unsound mind is a plaintiff a suit on his behalf must be brought by a next friend and where he is a defendant the suit must be defended by a guardian ad litem Where a manager has been appointed of the property of a lunatic under the Lunacy Act no person other than such manager should act as the next friend of the lunatic in a suit in respect of the lunatic s property (c) See r 4 sub r (2) above

Persons adjudged to be of unsound mind —A person may be adjudged to be of unsound mind under the Lunacy Act 4 of 1912

Persons of unsound mind not adjudged to be so —The old section did not contain any provision as to persons of unsound mind not adjudged to be so But it was held that the same procedure applied where a party to a suit was of unsound mind though not adjudged to be so For the title of suits see App A pleadings, Title of Suits.

Decree against a lunatic —A decree passed against a lunatic not properly represented in the suit cannot be challenged in execution proceedings The reason is that a lunatic not properly represented is not a party to the suit within the meaning of s 47 above (d)

Revision.—When an application for an inquiry as to whether a party is of unsound mind was dismissed without an inquiry the order was set aside in revision (e). Where during the pendency of a suit in the Court of a Subordinate Judge the defendant's pleader informed the Court that lunacy proceedings were pending in the Court of the District Judge with reference to the mental condition of the defendant and he applied for a stay of the suit until the determination of the question by the District Judge and the application was refused it was held that although no revision lay the case was a fit one for the exercise of the inherent powers of the Court and a stay was granted (f)

16 [S 464] Saving for Princes and Chiefs Nothing in this Order shall apply to a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief suing or being sued in the name of his State or being sued by direction of the Governor General in Council or a Local Government in the name of an agent or in any other name, or shall be construed to affect or in any way derogate from the provisions of any local law for the time being in force relating to suits by or against minors or by or against lunatics or other persons of unsound mind

A ruling chief sued in his personal capacity if not domiciled in British India is not subject to the Majority Act If he has attained majority according to his personal law no guardian ad litem need be appointed (g)

ORDER XXXIII

Suits by Paupers

1 1 [S 401] Suit may be instituted in forma pauperis Subject to the following provisions, any suit may be instituted by a pauper

Explanation—A person is a "pauper" when he is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit, or, where no such fee is prescribed, when he is not entitled to property worth one hundred rupees other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject matter of the suit

Scope and object of the order—A plaintiff suing in a civil Court must pay the Court fee prescribed by law for the plaint and subsequent proceedings in the suit. These fees are prescribed by the Court Fees Act VII of 1870 But a person may be too poor to pay the Court fee and the object of this Order is to enable such person to bring and prosecute suits without payment of Court fees (h) There are however certain fees from which even a pauper is not exempted namely fees for service of process, and such fees must be paid by him (r 8) If the pauper succeeds in the suit the Government have a first charge on the subject matter of the suit for the amount of the Court fee which would have been paid by him if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper

(h) Jotindro v Dwarka (1893) 0 Cal 111 115

(r 10) If the pauper fails in the suit the Court should order him to pay the Court fees due by him (r 11) An order directing a pauper plaintiff to pay the defendant in cash the costs occasioned by an amendment of the plaint and dismissing the suit in default of such payment was held to be wholly improper (i) But the Rangoon High Court has held that a pauper may be ordered to pay costs as a condition of an adjournment (j)

Is not possessed of —These words refer to property over which the petitioner has actual control They do not apply to a dower debt due by the petitioner s husband (k)

Subject matter of the suit. —In determining whether a person claiming to sue as a pauper is worth Rs 100 neither the value of his necessary wearing apparel nor the value of the property claimed by him in the suit should be taken into consideration The ground for excluding the subject matter of the suit under this rule is that such property is presumably out of the pauper s reach and cannot be made use of by him to carry on his litigation (l)

A applies for leave to sue as a pauper for the recovery of certain ornaments worth Rs. 2 000 from B Pending the investigation into pauperism B deposits in Court a portion of the ornaments claimed by A of the value of Rs 100 as ornaments belonging to A The ornaments deposited in Court being entirely at A s disposal are no longer part of the subject-matter of the suit. From the moment of the deposit A becomes entitled to property worth Rs. 100 and hence he is not entitled to sue as a pauper for the rest of the ornaments (m) Macleod J however expressed the opinion that A could not be said in such a case to be entitled to property worth Rs. 100 for otherwise every application for leave to sue as a pauper may be defeated by the respondent paying into Court Rs. 100 out of the amount claimed (n) and has recently given effect to this view in Bai Balagarri v Motilal (o) the reason given being that the property does not cease to be the subject matter of the suit because of defendant s admission or payment

In a Madras case the petitioner had obtained a decree for maintenance and sought to appeal in forma pauperis for higher maintenance but the defendant paid Rs. 571 arrears of maintenance into Court to her credit and the petition was dismissed on the ground that she had sufficient means to pay the Court fee on the memorandum of appeal (p)

A who has mortgaged his property to B sues B for redemption A s equity of redemption is no part of the subject-matter of the suit Its value therefore should be taken into consideration in determining whether A is a pauper (q)

Sons sued as paupers to set aside an alienation of joint family property by the father but when it was found that there was a share of the property that had not been alienated they were not allowed to continue the suit as paupers (r)

Other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject matter of the suit —These words do not qualify that part of the Explanation which requires that the person should not be possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law but only the conditions that the applicant is not entitled to property worth Rs. 100 (s) Ornaments which a woman ordinarily wears are of the same class as her wearing apparel (t)

Prosecution of suit as pauper—A plaintiff may be allowed to continue as a pauper a suit instituted by him in the ordinary way (u)

Minor Plaintiff—A minor pauper may sue through a next friend although the latter is not a pauper (v) In England when a minor applies to sue as a pauper it must be proved that the minor as well as the next friend are paupers But this rule of English practice does not apply in India and it is enough if it is proved that the minor is a pauper it is not nece sary to prove that the next friend also is a pauper (w)

Pauper defendant—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that although the Civil Procedure Code provides only for suits to be brought by a pauper plaintiff the Court has inherent power to allow a defendant to defend in forma pauperis (x)

Legal representative of pauper—The legal representative of a deceased person may be allowed to institute a suit in forma pauperis if the deceased him elf had been allowed to sue as a pauper if the proceedings had been instituted in his lifetime provided the legal repre entative is also himself a pauper (y) Similarly on the death of a pauper plaintiff his legal repre entative may be allowed to continue the suit in forma pauperis provided the legal repre entative is also himself a pauper (z) But in Sivagamme Sivagami v Gopalaswami (a) it was said that it was immaterial that the legal representative has means in his private capacity and that he can continue the suit as a pauper if he has not come into posse sion of sufficient means out of the estate This conflicts directly with In re Radakrishna Iyer (b) decided a few months earlier by the same Court but they are both de isions of a single judge In England an executor or administrator is not allowed to sue or defend as a pauper (c) unless he is also a beneficiary (d)

Suit in a representative capacity—If plaintiff sues in a representative capacity as trustee or sebait and has not in his possession sufficient property of the trust he may be allowed to sue as a pauper although he has sufficient personal property of his own (e)

Official liquidator—The word per on in this rule includes a company [see General Clauses Act 10 of 1897 s 3 (39)] An official liquidator therefore of a company is competent to apply for leave to sue in forma pauperis on behalf of the company if the company is a pauper within the meaning of this rule The fact that the liquidator in his personal capacity is not a pauper does not affect the question (f)

Married woman—The mere fact that the applicant s husband has property is not sufficient reason for di allowing her application for leave to sue in forma pauperis (g)

Pauper appeals—As to pauper appeals see Order 44 below

2 [S 403] Every application for permission to sue as a pauper shall contain the particulars required in regard to plaints in suits a schedule of any movable or immovable property belonging to the applicant, with the estimated value thereof, shall be annexed thereto, and it shall be signed and verified in the manner prescribed for the signing and verification of pleadings

Procedure —Rules 2 to 8 prescribe the procedure to be followed when a suit is proposed to be instituted in forma pauperis

Death of applicant —Where an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis has been made but the applicant dies pending the hearing of the application the application cannot be continued by the legal representative of the deceased applicant The reason is that the right to apply for leave to sue as a pauper is a personal right and it does not survive to the representative of the deceased applicant But the legal representative may present a fresh application for leave to sue in forma pauperis if he himself is a pauper (h)

3 [S 404] Notwithstanding anything contained in these rules, the application shall be presented to the Court by the applicant in person, unless he is exempted from appearing in Court, in which case the application may be presented by an authorized agent who can answer all material questions relating to the application, and who may be examined in the same manner as the party represented by him might have been examined had such party attended in person

Presentation of application.

Presented to the Court —Presentation need not be to the Court itself Presentation to the proper officer of the Court is sufficient (i)

Purda nashin woman —A purda nashin woman exempted from appearing in Court under s 132 above may present the application for leave to sue as a pauper by a duly authorized agent (j)

Pauper appeals —The provisions of this rule apply also to applications for leave to appeal as a pauper See O 44 r 1

4 [S 406] (1) Where the application is in proper form and duly presented, the Court may, if it thinks fit, examine the applicant, or his agent, when the applicant is allowed to appear by agent, regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant

Examination of applicant

(2) Where the application is presented by an agent, the Court may, if it thinks fit order that the applicant be examined by a commission in the manner in which the examination of an absent witness may be taken

If presented by agent Court may order applicant to be examined by commission

Examination —This Order contemplates examination of two kinds namely (1) the examination of the applicant which may as indicated in this rule be regarding (a) the merits of the claim and (b) pauperism and (2) the examination of persons other than the applicant which should be confined to pauperism only as indicated by the provisions of rr 6 and 7 below Persons other than the applicant cannot be examined on the merits of the applicant s claim (k)

Rejection of application

5 [Ss 405, 407] The Court shall reject an application for permission to sue as a pauper—

(a) where it is not framed and presented in the manner prescribed by rules 2 and 3, or

(b) where the applicant is not a pauper, or

(c) where he has, within two months next before the presentation of the application, disposed of any property fraudulently or in order to be able to apply for permission to sue as a pauper, or

(d) where his allegations do not show a cause of action, or

(e) where he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the proposed suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter

Alteration in the rule—The expression cause of action in cl. (d) has been substituted for the words right to sue in such Court. See notes below under the head Clause (d) cause of action

Clause (a) application not framed as required by rule 2.—Failure to calculate the Court fee value in accordance with the provisions of the Court Fees Act and O 7 r 1 of the Code is a non compliance with the provisions of Clause (a) of this rule and the application must be rejected (l)

Clause (c) fraudulent disposal of property—Thus if a person has property worth Rs 1 000 and he disposes of it in August 1915 to enable himself to sue as a pauper and applies for leave to sue as a pauper in September 1915 the application should be rejected under this rule

Clause (d) cause of action—The corresponding clause of the old section ran thus That his allegations do not show a right to sue in such Court It was contended that the words sue in such Court referred to the jurisdiction of the Court and not to the cause of action disclosed in the application But this contention was rejected and it was held that the clause did not limit the Court to an inquiry whether the right to sue arose within the jurisdiction but that it had a more extended meaning and that the Court was to ascertain if the application showed a good subsisting cause of action capable of enforcement in Court and calling for an answer and not barred by the law of limitation or any other law (m) It was accordingly held that the application to sue as a pauper must be rejected if the right to sue was barred by the law of limitation (n) or as res judicata (o) or if it did not disclose a good cause of action as where the application was for leave to sue on a contract which was void as being immoral and opposed to public policy (p) The expression cause of action has been substituted for the words right to sue in such Court to give effect to these decisions The Court must as stated above consider the question of limitation to see if the applicant has a subsisting cause of action (q) But this does not mean that the Court should at this preliminary stage decide a question of limitation as to which there has been a considerable difference of judicial opinion (r)

Rule 4 provides that where the application is in proper form and duly presented the Court may examine the applicant regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant The expression the merits of the claim has reference to r 5 (d) which says that the Court shall reject the application if the allegations of the applicant do not show a cause of action It has accordingly been held that it is the duty of the Court to consider not only the statements made in the plaint but also the statements made by the applicant in his examination in order to determine whether his allegations do or do not show a cause of action (s) and further to determine at the preliminary stage whether the plaintiff is or is not entitled to succeed on the basis of the alleged cause of action In some cases it was contended that in order to determine whether there was a cause of action the allegations in the plaint were the sole matters to be looked to As to this the Allahabad High Court (t) said If the allegations in the plaint were the sole matters to be looked to and the applicant were admittedly a pauper the granting of this application to sue as a pauper would depend not on whether he had any merits to go upon but on the skill of the gentleman who drafted his petition and his plaint and the examination as to the merits under sec 406 (r) would be superfluous

In an Allahabad case it was held that the Court had no power under cl (d) of this rule to reject an application on the ground that the matter in dispute was res judicata (u) This decision it is submitted is erroneous for a cause of action means a valid and subsisting cause of action not barred by limitation or res judicata

Insolvency is not one of the grounds on which an application can be rejected under this rule (v)

Clause (e) transfer of interest in subject matter of proposed suit.—The interest transferred may be either vested or contingent Thus an agreement authorising a pleader to recover his fees out of the revenues of a village forming the subject matter of the proposed suit in the event of the applicant failing to pay the fees to the pleader is an agreement under which the pleader obtains a contingent interest in the subject matter of the suit If such an agreement is proved the application for leave to sue in forma pauperis must be rejected (w)

Revision.—An order rejecting an application under this rule is not appealable (x) but it is open to revision in a proper case (y) though the Allahabad High Court has in a later case held that no revision lies (z)

Letters Patent appeal—No appeal is allowed by the Code from an order made under this rule But the Madras High Court has held that an appeal lies under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from an order allowing or refusing to allow a plaintiff to sue as a pauper on the ground that such an order is a judgment and that it is neither interlocutory nor made in the exercise of discretion (a)

6 [S 408] Where the Court sees no reason to reject the application on any of the grounds stated in rule 5, it shall fix a day (of which at least ten days' clear notice shall be given to the opposite party and the Government pleader) for receiving such evidence as the applicant may adduce in proof of his pauperism, and for hearing any evidence which may be adduced in disproof thereof

Notice of day for receiving evidence of applicant's pauperism

Notice—As to form of notice see App H form no 12

7 [S 409] (1) On the day so fixed or as soon thereafter as may be convenient, the Court shall examine the witnesses (if any) produced by either party, and may examine the applicant or his agent, and shall make a memorandum of the substance of their evidence

Procedure at hearing

(2) The Court shall also hear any argument which the parties may desire to offer on the question whether, on the face of the application and of the evidence (if any) taken by the Court as herein provided, the applicant is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in rule 5

(3) The Court shall then either allow or refuse to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper

Sub rule (2)—The Court when issuing notice under r 6 for receiving evidence in proof of pauperism has presumably decided ex parte that none of the prohibitions in r 5 exists But this does not preclude the Court from deciding whether the allegations of the applicant do or do not show a cause of action on the evidence of the applicant though it may be taken after the issue of the notice This question however cannot be decided on the evidence of witnesses called to give evidence on the issue of pauperism, not even the evidence of the applicant's own witnesses. It has accordingly been held that the Court has no power to determine on the evidence of witnesses as distinguished from the evidence of the applicant himself that the applicant has no cause of action (b) or that his claim is barred by limitation (c) This rule enables the parties to argue the question if they so desire whether the application is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in r 5 above It does not preclude the Court if no argument is offered from considering that question (d)

Review —An order under this rule refusing leave to sue as a pauper is subject to review (e) The application for review is not liable to any Court fee (f)

Propriety of order allowing applicant to sue in forma pauperis —Where after due consideration of an application for leave to sue as a pauper the Court of first instance has allowed the suit to be instituted in forma pauperis and has passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff it is not open to the defendant in appeal from the decree to question the propriety of the order permitting the plaintiff to sue as a pauper S 105 does not apply to such an order (g)

Legal representative —If the applicant dies before the application is granted and registered as a suit there is no suit pending and his legal representative cannot be brought on the record to continue the application (h)

Limitation where application granted —Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is granted the date on which the application is filed will be deemed to be the date on which the pauper suit is instituted for all purposes of limitation and not the date on which the application is numbered and registered as a suit [Limitation Act 1908 s 4] Therefore when the rate of Court fee was enhanced between the date of filing and the date of granting the application the Court fees were in the calculation of costs assessed at the former rate (i)

Limitation where application refused —Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is refused and the applicant subsequently institutes a suit in respect of the same subject matter in the ordinary way (r 15) the suit will be deemed for the purposes of limitation to have been instituted on the date on which the plaint is presented and not the date on which the rejected application was filed The reason is that upon an order of refusal under this rule the proceedings instituted under r 2 come to an end (j)

Limitation where application is converted into a plaint on payment of court fees —A person who has applied for leave to sue as a pauper may at any time before an order is made under this rule convert his application into a plaint by paying into Court the necessary Court fees In such a case if the application was made bona fide the suit would be deemed to have been instituted for the purposes of limitation on the day on which the application was filed and not the day on which the Court fees were paid But if it is found that the application was made in bad faith the suit would be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the Court fees were paid and not on the day on which the application was filed (k)

Dispaupering

(a) if he is guilty of vexatious or improper conduct in the course of the suit,

(c) if he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter

10 [S 411] Where the plaintiff succeeds in the suit, the Court shall calculate the amount of Court fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper such amount shall be recoverable by the Government from any party ordered by the decree to pay the same, and shall be a first charge on the subject matter of the suit

Amount of Court fees shall be a first charge—The charge is to be enforced by an application for the attachment and sale of the subject matter of the suit A separate suit for the sale of the subject matter to realise the Court fees is now barred see r 13 below and s 47 (p) The application for execution by the Government must be made within three years from the date of the decree in the pauper suit (q)

Recovery of Court fees by Government from party ordered to pay the same—If the plaintiff is directed to pay the Court fees the Government may realize the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the plaintiff and if the defendant is directed to pay the Court fees the Government may realise the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the defendant

Mode of realization of Court fees by Government—The plaintiff in a suit in forma pauperis obtains a decree against the defendant for possession of certain property It is declared by the decree that the amount of Court fees shall be a first charge on the property and that the same shall also be recoverable by the Government from the defendant In such a case if the defendant fails to pay the Court fees the Government may at its option realize the Court fees either by attachment and sale of the property which was the subject matter of the suit or it may realize the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the defendant (r) The former right is not lost merely because the property for the recovery of which the pauper suit was brought has passed from the hands of the judgment debtor into the hands of the pauper decree holder (s) The Government however have no no lien upon the decree for the amount of the Court fees (t) hence if the amount of Court fees is not paid the Government are not entitled to sell the decree obtained by the plaintiff for the purpose of recovering such amount (u) In a case where a successful plaintiff's property was confined to a right to future maintenance a receiver was appointed to collect it and to pay the Government by instalments (v)

r 10 Effect of first charge.—Since the amount of Court fees recoverable by Government is a first charge on the subject matter of the suit (w) it follows that a sale held in execution of such charge must prevail against a subsequent sale (x) For the same reason the defendant against whom the decree is passed cannot set off against the subject matter of the suit any sum that may be due to him under a cross-decree held by him against the plaintiff A obtains a decree against B for Rs 1 500 in a suit brought in forma pauperis A is directed by the decree to pay the Court fees but he fails to pay the same Thereupon the Government apply to attach and sell the judgment debt of Rs 1 500 due to A from B B claims to set off Rs 1 475 due to him under a decree held by him against A B is not entitled to the set-off claimed by him for the Government has a first charge on Rs 1 500 that being the subject matter of the suit (y)

Crown s prerogative of precedence in respect of Court fees—If the plaintiff succeeds in the suit and the amount payable under the decree by the defendant is paid into Court the Government is entitled to payment of the Court fees out of the fund in the Court on a mere application for payment without attaching the fund in the first instance This is because the Crown is entitled to precedence in respect of a Crown debt over all other creditors of the pauper decree holder A obtains a decree against B for specific performance and costs in a suit brought in forma pauperis It is directed by the decree that B should pay the Court fees to Government and the Court fees are also declared to be a first charge on the property directed to be conveyed by B to A B fails to pay A s costs A thereupon applies for attachment and sale of certain property belonging to B for payment of his costs The property is sold and the sale proceeds amounting to Rs 1 000 are paid into Court Thereafter A s solicitor C applies to the Court for payment to him out of the Rs 1 000 of the costs incurred by him on behalf of A At the same time a claim is made by the Government Solicitor for payment of the Court fees out of the Rs 1 000 in priority to C s claim The Government are entitled to precedence in respect of the Court fees and C is entitled only to the balance left after payment of the Court fees (z)

It is to be observed that in the Calcutta case cited above C was a creditor of A inasmuch as he was entitled to be paid his costs by A But he was merely an ordinary creditor as distinguished from a secured creditor It is also to be observed that Court fees form a Crown debt and the Crown was to that extent a creditor of A It has to be borne in mind that it is only when claims of the Crown and claims of ordinary creditors or common persons (to use an old expression) concur or come into competition that the Crown is preferred The Crown has no more right than a common person to seize X s property and apply it in or towards discharge of a debt due from X It was so observed by Lord Macnaghten in a case in which the Privy Council held that where a money decree is obtained by a pauper in a suit by him against X and X is directed by the decree to pay the Court fees the Government are not entitled to realize the Court fees by a sale of X s property previously mortgaged by him to Y so as to defeat the right of Y (a) All that could be sold by the Government in such a case is the equity of redemption of X in the property (b)

Appeal.—Questions arising between the Government and any party to the suit under this rule would be questions relating to the execution discharge and satisfaction of a decree within the meaning of s 47 And it is provided by r 13 below that they should be deemed to be questions arising between the parties to the suit

within the meaning of s 47 It follows that an order deciding any such question is appealable as a decree [see s 2 cl (2) and s 96] (c) Under the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Courts of Bombay and Madras that the Government not being a party to the suit such questions could not be said to be questions arising between the party to the suit within the meaning of s 244 [now s 47] and that orders determining such questions were not appealable as decrees (d) On the other hand the High Court of Allahabad held that such orders were appealable (e) Rule 13 (which is new) sets this conflict at rest by providing that though the Government is not a party to the suit the Government shall be deemed to be a party to the suit for the purposes of s 47

Costs where pauper partly succeeds and partly fails—Rule 10 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who succeeds in the suit Rule 11 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who fails in the suit There is no separate provision for the case in which a pauper plaintiff has partly succeeded and partly failed Presumably the Court is intended to deal with such a case by combining the provisions of the two rules In such a case therefore the Court fees payable on the plaint should be apportioned between the plaintiff and the defendant The Madras and Allahabad High Courts have held that it is illegal to lay upon the defendant in such a case a larger proportion of the Court fee leviable from the plaintiff than would have been payable by the plaintiff if the claim had been limited originally to that portion which was successful (f) But the Calcutta High Court considers that the Court has a discretion and is not bound by any hard and fast rule of apportionment (g) In a suit for Rs 3 000 the plaintiff got a decree for Rs 88 15-0 and was ordered to pay the defendant s costs amounting to Rs 151 The Court held that as plaintiff was precluded by O 21 r 19 from executing his decree the case fell under rule 11 (h) Again when a pauper appeal was allowed on a point that did not touch merits of the case the Court ordered the Court fees to be paid by the appellant and respondent in equal moieties (i)

See rules 12 and 13

Alterations in the rule

1 The word withdrawn has been newly added See notes below un l r the head Withdrawn.

2 Besides the liability to pay the Court fees the plaintiff was under the old section subject to a further penalty of fine or imprisonment if the Court found that the suit was frivolous or vexatious This provision has been omitted in the present rule

Scope of the rule —An order under this rule directing the pauper plaintiff to pay the Court fees can only be made in the following four cases —

(1) where the plaintiff fails in the suit

(2) where the plaintiff is dispaupered under r 9

(3) where the suit is withdrawn or

(4) where the suit is dismissed under the circumstances specified in cl (a) or cl. (b)

If follows from what has been stated above that where an application fo leave to sue in forma pauperis is returned under O 7 r 10 for want of jurisdiction to be presented to the proper Court no order can be made under this rule directing the applicant to pay the Court fees It cannot be said in such a case that the plaintiff has failed in the suit (j) The decision may also be put on the ground that the present rule does not apply until the application is granted and is numbered and registered under r 8 above But a dismissal of the suit at the request of the plaintiff and the defendant on the suit being settled out of Court amounts to a failure within the meaning of this rule (k)

Withdrawn. —This word has been newly added. Under the old section there was a conflict of decisions as to whether the Court could order the plaintiff to pay the Court fees if the suit was withdrawn (l) The insertion of the word withdrawn makes it clear that the Court has the power under this rule to order the plaintiff to pay the Court-fees if the suit is withdrawn whether the withdrawal is without the leave of the Court or with leave to bring a fresh suit under O 23 r 1

Costs —This rule does not preclude the Court from awarding a successful defendant his costs in a pauper suit. The Court has full power under s. 35 to give and apportion costs in any manner it thinks fit Nothing in this rule limits or otherwise affects the power conferred upon the Court by s. 35 to give and apportion costs (m)

Omission to make an order for payment of Court fees —The Government has the right at any time to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of the Court fees (r 12) If the order is refused the Government may by virtue of the provisions of r 13 (which is new) prefer an appeal from the order of refusal Under the Code of 1882 it was held that the Government not being a party to the suit had no right of appeal and it could therefore proceed only by an application for revision (n).

12 [New] The Government shall have the right at any time to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of Court fees under rule 10 or rule 11

Government may apply for payment of Court fees

This rule is new It enables the Government, in cases of error and omission with regard to Court-fees to have the error or omission rectified by a mere application to the Court. See r (13) below

15 [S 413] An order refusing to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper shall be a bar to any subsequent application of the like nature by him in respect of the same right to sue, but the applicant shall be at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of such right, provided that he first pays the costs (if any) incurred by the Government and by the opposite party in opposing his application for leave to sue as a pauper

Refusal to allow applicant to sue as pauper to bar subsequent application of like nature

Order refusing to allow applicant to sue as pauper—This rule provides that an order refusing to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper shall be a bar to any subsequent application of the like nature by him in respect of the same right to sue. The words order refusing to allow the applicant to sue have given rise to the question whether an order rejecting an application under r 5 above is an order refusing to allow the applicant to sue within the meaning of this rule or whether those words refer only to an order made under r 7 where the words used are also refuse to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper It has been held in some cases that there is no distinction between an order of rejection made under r 5 and an order of refusal made under r 7 and that rejection of an application under r 5 is a bar to a subsequent application in respect of the same right to sue (o) On the other hand it has been held that there is a distinction between orders made under r 5 and those made under r 7 and that the rejection of an application under r 5 is no bar to a subsequent application (p)

3 Dismissal of application for default or for want of prosecution.—It has 16 been held in some cases that the dismissal of a pauper application for default (q) or dismissal owing to the applicant's failure to prosecute the application is a bar to a subsequent application (r) while in some that it is not (s)

Bar to subsequent application—The bar to a subsequent application being a bar to the jurisdiction of the Court the Court is competent and bound to take notice of it at any stage of the suit (t)

Right to sue.—There is no substantial distinction between the words right to sue in this rule and the words cause of action in rule 5 It has accordingly been held that the dismissal of an application to sue in forma pauperis for maintenance for a particular period is no bar to a subsequent application for maintenance for a different period (u).

ORDER XXXIV

Suits relating to Mortgages of Immovable Property

· 1 1 [New Act 4 of 1882 s 85] Subject to the provisions of this Code, all persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption shall be joined as parties to any suit relating to the mortgage

Parties to suits for foreclosure sale and redemption

Explanation—A puisne mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or for sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit, and a prior mortgagee need not be joined in a suit to redeem a subsequent mortgage

Suits relating to mortgages—This Order is new It is a re enactment with some alteration of sections 85 90 92 94 96 97 and 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 relating to suits on mortgage The Transfer of Property Act did not contain any provision for the passing of a final decree in cases where payment was made in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree This omission has now been remedied and provision has been made in rules 3 5 and 8 for the passing of a final decree in such cases. The object of transferring the provisions relating to mortgage suits from the Transfer of Property Act to the Code is explained in the notes to r 3 below Limitation for application for final decree

Transfer of Property Act, 1882 s 85.—This rule is a reproduction with some alterations of s 85 of the Transfer of Property Act which ran as follows

Subject to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure s 437 [now O 31 r 1] all persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage must be joined as parties to any suit under this chapter relating to such mortgage provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest.

A comparison of the present rule with s 85 of the Transfer of Property Act will shew that the words in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption have been substituted for in the property comprised in the mortgage An Explanation has been added and the provi o relating to notice is omitted. The explanation was added as it was generally thought that s 85 made it imperative on a puisne mortgagee to make a prior mortgagee a party to his action for foreclosure The substitution of the words in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption have made it clear that an adverse claimant who is a stranger to the security or the equity of redemption need not be joined (t) see notes below Persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption

Scope and object of the rule—The object of this rule requiring all persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption to be joined as parties is to avoid multiplicity of suits (w) The rule applies only to suits relating to a mortgage that is to say to suits for foreclosure sale and redemption as indicated by the marginal note to the rule The rule therefore does not apply to suits by a mortgagee for a personal decree against the mortgagor (as to which see r 6 below)

Persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption—The corresponding words in the Transfer of Property Act s 85 were persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage The e words gave rise to a conflict of views According to one view which coincides with the English law and the law as enunciated in the present rule those persons only should be joined as parties to a suit relating to a mortgage who were either interested in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption A person who sets up a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee should not be joined as a party to such suit for he is neither interested in the mortgage security nor in the right of redemption (x) Thus if A lets his property on a lease to B and B mortgages the leasehold to C A holding the property by title paramount should not be joined as a party defendant to a suit by C to enforce the mortgage (y) Similary if A and B are co owners of certain property and B mortgages his undivided share to C A should not be joined as a party to a suit for sale by C as A has no interest in the right of redemption ( ) According to the other view which prevailed in Allahabad all persons must be joined as parties if they had an interest in the property though they might have no interest either in the mortgage security or in the equity of redemption The word property according to the Allahabad High Court means the actual immovable property mortgaged and not merely particular rights and interests in such property such as a bare right to redeem(a) The view held by the Allahabad High Court is no longer tenable The present rule gives effect to the former view which as already stated is in accordance with the English law

But though the Allahabad High Court held that all persons interested in the mortgage property must be joined as parties to a suit on mortgage that Court agreed with the other High Courts in holding that a person who claimed adversely to the mortgagor and the mortgagee is not a necessary party to such suit Thus if A mortgages certain property to B and B sues A for sale of the mortgaged property and C claims the property as his

1 [illegible] C is not a necessary party to the suit [illegible] of C's paramount title cannot be [illegible] in D's suit [illegible] is a tenant [illegible] the present rule.

On the other hand, the question is not one of [illegible] but at most one of [illegible], and when it is allowed that the person claiming adversely to the title [illegible] is a [illegible] of the mortgagee [illegible] is in possession [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] in the mortgage suit [illegible] be convenient [illegible] as a party.

See notes [illegible] under the head "Parties to suits [illegible]."

[illegible] prior mortgagees.—The [illegible] to the rule is new [illegible] enacted [illegible] s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act [illegible] the effect that a prior mortgagee is a necessary party to a suit for sale or [illegible] by a puisne or subsequent mortgagee [illegible]. The [illegible] declares that a prior mortgagee is not a necessary party [illegible] such a suit. Thus if A mortgages his property to B, and subsequently to C, C may sue for sale without making B a party to the suit. In such a case if a decree for sale is passed, the property will be sold subject to B's mortgage [illegible]. But this rule does not preclude C from joining B as a party [illegible] B would be a proper party if C offers to redeem B's mortgage [illegible]. But if C merely joins B as a party and claims no relief against him, B's position is that of a holder of a paramount title outside the controversy and he will not be affected by the decree for sale which C obtains [illegible] sale will be subject to B's mortgage. This is what happened in the case of [illegible] v. [illegible] [illegible]. The prior mortgage was of [illegible] and [illegible] in September [illegible] the plaintiff. The puisne mortgage was of [illegible] C who sued for sale in August [illegible] making D a party but claiming no relief against him. After [illegible] the decree for sale, the plaintiff sued on his prior mortgage and was met by the plea [illegible] on the ground that he [illegible] D might and ought to have enforced the security in the former suit. The defence failed as C had not in his suit sought to displace D's title or to redeem it as his own.

[illegible] from the first branch of the Explanation to the rule that where the same person holds two mortgages of different dates upon the same property he may sue on the mortgage of the later date subject to his rights under the first mortgage.

The second branch of the Explanation declares that a prior mortgagee need not be joined in a suit to redeem a subsequent mortgage. [illegible] mortgages his property first to B, and then to C. B is not a necessary party to a suit by [illegible] against C for redemption of the mortgage to C.

Parties to suits for redemption, foreclosure or sale.—All persons [illegible] in the [illegible] and therefore in the proper taking of the account [illegible] as the mortgagor, or [illegible] by operation of law as the

Official Assignee or Receiver of the assets of the mortgagor in insolvency (l) or by voluntary alienation as the transferee of the equity of redemption (m) should be made parties to a suit relating to a mortgage (n) In other words persons mentioned in s 91 of the Transfer of Property Act as persons entitled to redeem the mortgaged property should be joined as parties (o) If not joined as plaintiffs they should be joined as defendants (p) But a person not having any interest in the mortgage at the date of the suit need not be joined as a party (q)

If a mortgagee suing on his mortgage either for sale or foreclosure thinks fit to exempt from his suit some portion of the mortgaged property and to sell or to foreclose the mortgage in respect of the remainder there is nothing in law to prevent his doing so If he exempts a portion of the mortgaged property from his suit he is not obliged to make parties to the suit persons interested in the portion so exempted (r) The same rule applies where a part of the property originally mortgaged has been absolutely released from the mortgage and has become excluded from the operation of the security (s) If the mortgagee by his laches loses his remedy against the owner of part of the equity of redemption and does not make him a party to the suit that part of the property is treated as released from the mortgage and the mortgagee must submit to a deduction from his claim (t)

Where there are two or more mortgagors that is two or more persons interested in the equity of redemption any one of them may sue for redemption but then the other mortgagors must be made party defendants (u) Where there are two or more encumbrances created on the same property the mortgagor seeking to redeem the first mortgage must join the subsequent mortgagees as parties Similarly a second mortgagee seeking to redeem a prior mortgage must join the mortgagor as a party (v) But the prior mortgagee is not a necessary party to a suit by the mortgagor to redeem a subsequent mortgage see Explanation to the rule

All persons interested in the mortgage security either (1) primarily as the mortgagee or (2) derivatively (i) by operation of law as the Official Assignee or Receiver of the assets of the mortgagee in insolvency or (ii) by voluntary alienation as the transferee of the security or debt should be made parties to a suit relating to the mortgage (w) If not joined as plaintiffs they should be joined as defendants

A mortgages his property to B B sues A on the mortgage During the pendency of the suit A executes a second mortgage of his property to C C is not a necessary party to A s suit the mortgage to him having been executed subsequently to the institution of the suit (x) for suits concerning property vested in a trustee executor or administrator Having regard to the provisions of that rule a suit for redemption (y) or foreclosure ( ) or sale may be brought by trustees without making the beneficiaries parties.

Benamidar—A benamidar can maintain a suit on a mortgage Thus if a mortgage is executed ostensibly in favour of A but the real mortgagee is B A may sue the mortgagor on the mortgage It is not open to the mortgagor to contend that A being merely the benamidar he cannot maintain the suit (a)

Sub mortgagee—A mortgagee may create such estates as he pleases. He may convey by way of sub mortgage to whom and in as many parcels as he pleases (b) It has been held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court that when a mortgagee has sub mortgaged his interest in the property mortgaged to him the sub mortgagee is entitled to sell the interest in the property of his sub mortgagor without impleading the mortgagor and foreclosing his equity of redemption in other words he is entitled to sell the sub mortgagor s interest leaving the equity of redemption outstanding in the mortgagor (c) In an earlier case (d) the Allahabad High Court took the view that a sub mortgagee is entitled only to a decree for money against the sub mortgagor but this was doubted in later cases (e) and it is not good law See notes to r 2 below Sub mortgagee

A person cannot be both plaintiff and defendant.—In a foreclosure action by a first mortgagee where the plaintiff also joined himself as a defendant as one of the puisne mortgagees his name was struck out as a co defendant (f)

Consequences of non joinder—Under the corresponding section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act it was held by the Allahabad High Court that the non joinder of a person who ought to have been made a party to a suit on a mortgage was a defect fatal to the suit and that the suit should therefore be dismissed but that the Court if it sees fit to do so may add him as a party under s. 32 of the Code of 1882 [O 1 r 10 (2)] Those decisions proceeded on what the Court said was the imperative character of the word must in section 85 of that Act (g) In a recent case under the present rule the same Court held that the result of non joinder of a subsequent mortgagee in a suit on a prior mortgage though intentional would not be the dismissal of the whole suit but only so much of it as relate to the property affected by the subsequent mortgage (h) The High Courts of Bombay (i) and Calcutta (j) took the same view as the Allahabad High Court.

The word must which occurred in s 85 of the Transfer of Property Act having been dropped and the section having been transferred into the Code the question as to the effect on non joinder is it is submitted governed by the provisions of the Code O 1 r 9 provides that no suit shall be defeated by reason of non joinder of parties and O 34 r 1 is subject to O 1 r 9 (l) Under O 1 r 10 (2) the Court has the power to add parties at any stage of the suit By s 99 of the Code it is enacted that no decree shall be reversed or substantially varied in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties [which include non joinder (l)] unless it affects the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court The result is that no suit on a mortgage should be dismissed by reason of non joinder of parties unless the parties are necessary parties and the plaintiff refuses to add them as parties If the parties are merely proper parties as distinguished from necessary parties (m) the Court may though the plaintiff refuses to add them as parties proceed under O 1 r 9 to deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interest of the parties actually before it This was in effect held by the High Court of Bombay in Shahasheb v Sadashiv (n) a case under the present rule In that case a suit was brought by a mortgagee against the widow and daughters of the deceased mortgagor for sale of the mortgaged properties The deceased was a Mahomedan and besides the widow and daughters he left a brother as one of his heirs It was contended on behalf of the defendants that the brother having an interest in the right of redemption he ought to have been joined as a defendant and that the plaintiff having omitted to join him as a defendant the suit should be dismissed in its entirety At the date when the objection as to non joinder was taken by the defendants the period of imitation as against the brother had expired It was held overruling the contention that the brother was not a necessary party and that a decree could be passed against the widow and the daughters to the extent of their interest in the properties So in a mortgage suit a second mortgagee is a proper party but not a necessary party and the suit should not be dismissed because he has not been joined (o)

Where a person who ought to have been joined as a party under this rule is not joined as a party and a decree is passed in the suit the decree cannot affect his rights (p) [see notes below Mahomedan co heirs] To take a case which frequently occurs if a second or subsequent mortgagee who ought to be but is not joined as a party to a suit by the prior mortgagee the proceedings in the suit are not binding on him so as to affect his rights under the second mortgage (q) As second mortgagee he could have sued the mortgagor for a sale of the property subject to the first mortgage or he could have redeemed the first mortgage and then sued the mortgagor for sale on both the mortgages The point to be noted is that the second mortgagee does not lose either of these rights merely because a decree has been passed in the prior mortgagee s suit and the mortgaged property has been sold in execution of the decree The sale has not the effect of displacing the second mortgagee and leaving him with nothing but a claim against the balance (if any) of the sale proceeds of the property after satisfying the first mortgagee (r) The omission to implead the second mortgagee does not in any way

1 of the Privy Council (p) that where a suit is brought on a mortgage by or against the manager of a joint Hindu family in his representative capacity the other members of the family are not necessary parties to the suit and that the suit will not fail by reason of the non joinder of those members. It makes no difference whether the manager is a father or collateral relation such as an uncle or a brother

According to the Bombay decisions it would seem that the other co parceners are necessary parties to a suit brought on a mortgage by or against the manager (q) But if they are not joined as parties and a decree is passed for the sale of the joint family property against the manager in his representative character and the property is sold in execution of the decree the sale it has been held passes the interest of the other co parceners also in the property the mere fact that they were not parties to the mort gage suit is no ground for setting aside the sale unless it be shown by them that the debt contracted by the manager was one for which they are not liable (r)

According to the Calcutta High Court the other co parceners are necessary par ties to a suit on a mortgage of joint family property and if a decree is passed in such a suit without their being joined as parties the decree is not binding on them and they may by suit obtain a declaration that not being parties to the suit their interests are n t bound by the decree in the suit (s)

In another case before the Privy Council governed by the Transfer of Property Act 1882 where a foreclosure decree was passed against the manager of a joint Hindu family and the other members brought a suit to set aside the decree on the ground of their non joinder as persons interested in the equity of redemption under s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act their Lordships held that the decree was in the circumstances of the case binding upon them though they were not parties to the suit. Their Lordships said There seems to be no doubt upon the Indian decisions (from which their Lordships see no reason to dissent) that there are occasions including foreclosure suits when the managers of a joint Hindu family so effectively represent all other members of the family that the family as a whole is bound. It is quite clear from the facts of the case and the findings of the Courts upon them that this is a case where this principle ought to be applied Th re is not the slightest ground for suggesting that the manager of the joint family did not act in every way in the interests of the family its lf and no ques tion arises under s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act [O 34 r 1] because the mortgagee had no notice of the plaintiff's interests (t) Note that the words provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest which occurred in s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act do not occur in the present rule

The recent Privy Council case of Ganpat Lal v Bindbasini Prasad (u) is an autho rity for the proposition that in a suit on a mortgage against the manager of a joint Hindu family all the other members of the family are represented by the manager The mortgage was by the manager and the mortgagee obtained a decree for sale joining as parties the manager and the other members of the family The mortgagee purchased the property himself But one of the members of the family who was a minor was wrongly described in the suit as an adult. He sued to redeem on the ground that not having been represented in the suit by a guardian ad litem he was not a party to the mortgagee s suit. This claim would have been unanswerable if he had not been represented by the manager in the suit But the Privy Council held that as he had not sued to set aside the sale and did not impeach the mortgage or the decree the suit was not maintainable In other words he was represented by the manager and it did not matter whether he was a party or not The only ground which he could take was that he was not liable for the mortgage debt contracted by the manager and that he had not done The same rule was applied by the High Court of Bombay in a suit for sale on a mortgage against the grandfather who was the manager (t)

Where parties are not governed by the Hindu law and the only interest which a son has under the customary law is a reversionary interest in the property and a right to protect that interest by interfering to prevent unnecessary alienations the son has no such interest in the property as is contemplated by the present rule and he is not therefore a necessary party to a suit on a mortgage against his father (u)

Preliminary decree in foreclosure suit

2 [New Act IV of 1882, sec 86] (1) In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree—

(a) ordering that an account be taken of what was due to the plaintiff at the date of such decree for—

(i) principal and interest on the mortgage,

(ii) the costs of suit, if any, awarded to him, and

(iii) other costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him up to that date in respect of his mortgage security, together with interest thereon, or

(b) declaring the amount so due at that date, and

(c) directing—

(i) that, if the defendant pays into Court the amount so found or declared due on or before such date as the Court may fix within six months from the date on which the Court confirms and countersigns the account taken under clause (a), or from the date on which such amount is declared in Court under clause (b), as the case may be, and thereafter pays such amount as may be adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges and expenses as provided in rule 10, together with subsequent interest on such sums respectively as provided in rule 11, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant, or to such person as the defendant appoints,

2 all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, re transfer the property to the defendant at his cost free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall also, if necessary, put the defendant in possession of the property, and

(ii) that, if payment of the amount found or declared due under or by the preliminary decree is not made on or before the date so fixed, or the defendant fails to pay, within such time as the Court may fix, the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the property

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared to be due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged to be due in respect of subsequent costs and interest

(3) Where, in a suit for foreclosure, subsequent mortgagees or persons deriving title from, or subrogated to the rights of any such mortgagees are joined as defendants the preliminary decree shall provide for the adjudication of the respective rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No 9 or Form No 10, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require

The old rule —The above rule has been substituted for old r 2 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule will be in operation till the above date It is as follows —

2 In a suit for foreclosure if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to or

(b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree and directing—

(c) that if the defendant pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due to be fixed by the Court the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant or to such person as he appoints all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property and shall if so required re transfer the property to the defendant free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him or where the plaintiff claims by derived title by those under whom he claims and shall also if necessary put the defendant in possession of the property but

(d) that if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court the defendant shall be debarred from all rights to redeem the property

Transfer of Property Act 1882 s 86—This rule corresponds to s 86 of the Transfer of Property Act except in the following particulars —

1 The words to the plaintiff or which occurred in s 86 after the word pays in cl (c) have been omitted the object being that in every case the defendant should pay the money into Court

2 In cl (c) the words if so required have been added before the words re transfer the property as according to mofussil practice a re transfer is not ordinarily required

The old rule and the new rule —

1 The new rule expressly states that the decree to be passed under it is a preliminary decree

2 The old rule was not clear as to the date up to which accounts were to be taken The new rule makes it clear that the Court should direct accounts to be taken up to the date of the preliminary decree

3 The new rule expressly provides that in taking accounts the amount to be spent by a mortgagee for necessary costs charges and expenses incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security together with interest thereon should be taken into account

4 The old rule was not clear as to the day on which payment was to be made by the mortgagor in cases where accounts were directed to be taken This is now made clear in sub rule (1) (c) (i)

5 The provision in new sub rule (1) (c) (i) as to subsequent interest is new See rule 11 (b)

6 New sub rule (1) (c) makes it clear that the costs of re transfer are to be borne by the mortgagor

7 New sub rule (1) (c) (ii) makes it clear that if default is made by the mortgagor in payment of the amount due under the preliminary decree the mortgagee has to apply to the Court for a final decree

8 New sub rule (2) relates to the power of the Court to extend the time for payment It is in substance a reproduction of old rule 3 (2) See note below Power to extend time in foreclosure suits

9 New sub rule (3) draws specific attention to the forms of decrees to be passed where subsequent mortgagees are joined as parties to a suit for foreclosure

Form of preliminary decree for foreclosure—See Appendix D Form No 3 when accounts are directed to be taken and Form No 3A when no accounts are taken and the Court declares the amount due

Foreclosure and sale—Until 1st April 1930 i e until the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act 1929 comes into operation a suit for foreclosure can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a mortgage by conditional sale After that date it is no longer open to the holder of an English mortgage to sue for foreclosure In the case of a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds in Bombay where the remedy by way of foreclosure was held to be open to such a mortgagee s 1ა (2) of the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act allows a period of two years i e upto 1st April 193 to such a mortgagee to enforce his remedy by way of foreclosure Under the Transfer of Property Amending Act 1929 the remedy by way of foreclosure is allowed only (1) in the ca e of a mortgage by conditional sale and (2) an anomalous mortgage where there is an express stipulation in that behalf A suit for sale can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a simple mortgage

The holder of a mortgage by conditional sale cannot institute a suit for sale A simple mortgagee cannot institute a suit for foreclosure A usufructuary mortga ee cannot institute a suit either for foreclosure or sale [Transfer of Property Act s 6;] Rules 2 and 3 provide for decrees for foreclosure Rules 4 and 5 provide for decrees for sale

The Transfer of Property Amending Act 1929 places a mortgage by depo.it of title-deeds on the same footing as a simple mortgage In the case therefore of a mortgage by deposit of title deeds the only remedy open to the mortgagee is by way of sale except in Bombay where the mortgagee is allowed a further period of two years as stated above See secs 67 96 and 100 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 and r 15 below

Right of redemption—The mortgagor has at any time after the mortgage money has become payable by him a right on payment of deposit in Court or tender of the mortgage money to require the mortgagee to deliver up to him all documents in the mortgagee s possession relating to the mortgaged property and to re transfer the property to him This right is called the right of redemption The right to redeem subsists so long as a mortgage subsists (x) [Transfer of Property Act s. 60] Rules 7 and 8 provide for decrees for redemption

Account against mortgagor—Whether the suit be one for foreclosure sale or redemption the preliminary decree in each case must either declare the amount due or direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee for principal interest and costs and for other costs charges and expenses in respect of the mortgage security Where the same property is mortgaged to several persons in succes.ion and the subsequent mortgagees are joined as parties to the suit they are entitled if they appear and prove their mortgages to ask for a decree for an account on each of their mortgages and a declaration of their right in a suit for sale to participate in the surplus sale-proceeds in order of priority An account is then taken of what is due on each mortgage the sums so found due to each mortgagee are included in one report and the sale proceeds are subsequently divided between the plaintiff and the puisne mortgagees in accordance with their claims as found by the report (y) See Appendix D Forms of Decrees Nos 9 to 11 Where the mortgagee is in possession an account is to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee for principal and interest and also of the income derived by him from the property Whatever may be the nature of the suit it lies upon the mortgagee to prove what is due to him for principal and interest If the mortgage-deed is not put in evidence as where it is not stamped and the mortgagee refuses to pay the penalty he can only be credited in the account with the sum which the mortgagor admits was the amount of the principal ( )

Principal.—The amount of principal and the rate of interest payable thereon are almost invariably stated in the instrument of mortgage Such statement amounts to an admission on the part of the mortgagor that he has received the amount mentioned in the instrument But an admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted (a) and it is open to the mortgagor to show that a smaller consideration or no consideration at all passed under the instrument of mortgage (b) But the burden of proof in that case lies on the mortgagor (c) But though an admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted it may operate as an estoppel so as to preclude the mortgagor from asserting that a smaller consideration or no consideration passed under the instrument of mortgage (d) This is so in cases where the mortgagee transfers his interest in the mortgage to a third party who has no notice that the full amount acknowledged to have been received on the face of the mortgage deed has not been received In such a case the mortgagor is not entitled to redeem except on payment to the transferee of the amount stated in the mortgage deed to have been received by the mortgagor (e)

Interest—See r 11 below and notes See also notes to sec 34 The rule of damdupat

Costs of suit—Whether the suit is one for foreclosure sale or redemption the mortgagee is entitled to all costs properly incurred (f) by him including costs subsequent to decree (r 10) This right resting substantially upon contract can only be lost or curtailed by such inequitable conduct on the part of the mortgagee as may amount to a violation or culpable neglect of his duty under the contract (g) Thus costs incurred by the mortgagee after a proper tender has been made have been disallowed (h) And where in a suit for redemption the mortgagee though he had been fully paid contended that a large amount was still due to him he was directed to pay costs of the suit (i)

Other costs charges and expenses—Sec 72 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 enables the mortgagee to spend such money as is necessary for the preservation of the mortgaged property from destruction, forfeiture or sale for supporting the mortgagor s title to the property for making his own title thereto good against the mortgagor etc and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary to add such money to the principal money at the rate of interest payable on the principal Sec 63A enables the mortgagee in possession to make such improvements as are necessary to preserve the property from destruction or deterioration and to add such money to the principal money at the rate of interest payable on the principal These are the costs charges and expenses referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (iii) and they are to be taken into account in determining the amount payable by the mortgagor to the mortgagee (j) Rule 10 below provides for payment by the mortgagor to the mortgagee of similar costs charges and expenses incurred by the mortgagee after the date of the preliminary decree up to the time of actual payment

Subseqent Interest.—There was no provision either in old r 2 or in old r 3 for payment of interest by the mortgagor subsequent to the day fixed under the decree for payment of the amount due Provision has now been made for it in r 11 (b) below

2 Plaintiff to apply for final decree for sale—Sub rule (1) (c) (ii) makes it clear that if default is made by the mortgagor in payment of the amount due the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale. In one case the application was made by the transferee from the mortgagee and it was contended that the decree made on his application was a nullity but it was held that the decree having been passed in the presence of the mortgagor he was bound by it (k)

Account against mortgagee in possession—Where under the terms of a usufructuary mortgage the mortgagee is to enjoy the rents and profits in lieu of interest, or the rents and profits are to be taken as an equivalent of the interest and of specific portions of the principal there is no obligation on the mortgagee to render any accounts (l). In other cases a mortgagee in possession is bound to render an account of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property (m) As to annual rents against a mortgagee in possession see the undermentioned cases (n)

Power to extend time in foreclosure suits—The proviso to old r 3 (°) empowered the Court upon good cause shown and upon such terms as it thought fit from time to time to postpone the day fixed for payment by the mortgagor of the mortgage money This proviso has now been transferred to sub rule (2) of the present rule with some alterations Sub rule (2) empowers the Court upon good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court from time to time at any time before a final decree is passed to extend the time fixed for payment The power to extend the time is discretionary and the mortgagor is not entitled to an extension as of right (o) It is not a good ground for extending the time that the mortgagee was under a misconception or payment in time was unnecessary (p). It was held under the old rule that the application for extension of time need not be made before the expiry of the time originally fixed for payment and that it could be made even after the expiry of that time provided it was made before a final decree for foreclosure was passed (q) This is now made clear by substituting the words extend the time for the words postpone the day

It was held under the old rule that even if there was no order postponing the day fixed for the payment of the mortgage-money a payment into Court by the mortgagor of the mortgage money before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure was an effectual payment (r) Effect has been given to these decisions by substituting in r 3 (1) the words before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed for the words on or before the day fixed which occurred in old r 3 (1)

Appeal from order refusing to extend time—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43 (1) (o)

Sub mortgage—A sub mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale to the same extent as the mortgagee himself (s) Where the sub mortgagee is a party to the suit the preliminary decree must direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee and of what is due to the sub mortgagee As to the form of decree in a suit by a sub mortgagee against the mortgagee and mortgagor see Appendix D form No 11 As to the form of decree in a suit for redemption by the mortgagor against the

Final decree in foreclosure suit

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree,

(2) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall, on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree declaring that the defendant and all persons claiming through or under him are debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also, if necessary, ordering the defendant to put the plaintiff in possession of the property

3 The old rule —The above rule has been substituted for old r 3 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on 1st April 1930 The old rule will be in operation till the above date It is as follows —

3 (1) Where on or before the day fixed the defendant pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid, together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10 the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the document which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up and if so required—

(b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree

and also if necessary —

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

(2) Where such payment is not so made the Court shall on application made in that behalf by the plaintiff pass a decree that the defendant and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also if necessary ordering the defendant to put the plaintiff in possession of the property

Provided that the Court may upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit from time to time postpone the day fixed for such payments

Power to enlarge time

Discharge of debt.

(3) On the passing of a decree under sub-rule (²) the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged.

Transfer of property Act, 1882 s 87 —This rule corresponds to s 87 of the Transfer of Property Act except in two particulars :— (1) sub r (1) provides for the passing of a decree where payment is made s 87 of the Transfer of Property Act contained only the words the defendants shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property (2) Sub r (2) again provides for the passing of a decree where no payment is made Under s 87 the Court had merely to pass an order See as to this distinction notes to r 5 below Final decree for sale Limitation

(1) The new rule makes it clear that the decree to be passed under it is a final decree

(2) The words before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed in new sub rule (1) have been substituted for the words on or before the day fixed which occurred in old sub-rule (3).

(3) The defendant mortgagor has to apply to the Court for a decree after paying the amount into Court

(4) The proviso to old sub rule (2) regarding the power of the Court to extend the time for payment has been transferred to new rule 2

(5) In sub rule (3) it is made clear that on the passing of the final decree for foreclosure not only the mortgage debt is extinguished but all liabilities of the defendant in respect of the mortgage and on account of the suit are discharged.

Final decree for foreclosure —For form see Appendix D new form No 4 [old form No 10] Where the mortgagor fails to pay the amount due by him on the date fixed by the preliminary decree the mortgagee may apply under sub r (2) for a final decree declaring that the mortgagor is debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property No formal notice of such application is necessary to a mortgagor who is sui juris but notice is necessary where the mortgagor is a minor absence of notice however will not invalidate the final decree unless prejudice is caused to the minor (r) until a final decree is passed the mortgagor may apply under rule (2) for an extension of the time for payment He may even without an extension at any time before the final decree is passed pay the money into Court and so avert foreclosure (x) See note to r 2 above Power to extend time in foreclosure suits

Only one final decree for foreclosure —The law contemplates the passing of only one final decree and that a final decree can be made only after the Appellate Court has decided the appeal from the preliminary decree Thus if A sues B for foreclosure of a mortgage comprising two properties and a preliminary decree for foreclosure is passed as regards one of the properties but the suit is dismissed as regards the other and A appeals from that part of the decree by which his suit was dismissed and pending the appeal applies for and obtains a final decree for foreclosure in respect of the property ordered to be foreclosed he cannot afterwards if he succeeds in the appeal obtain another final decree for foreclosure of the other property (y) See note to r 5 below Only one final decree in a suit for sale

Payment into Court —The payment into Court may be made by the mortgagor at any time before the final decree for foreclosure has been passed See notes to r 2 above Power to extend time in foreclosure suits

Effect of appeal on time for payment.—A preliminary decree is passed in a foreclosure suit fixing a period of six months from the date of the decree for payment by the mortgagor of the amount due The mortgagor prefers an appeal from the decree but the decree is confirmed in appeal The decree of the appellate Court is silent as to the time allowed for redemption This does not operate as an extension of the time for payment so as to enable the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage within six months from the date of the appellate decree The mortgagee is entitled to a final decree for foreclosure after the expiration of six months from the date of the original decree though six months may not have expired from the date of the appellate decree The appellate decree simply confirming the original decree cannot be read as giving the mortgagor six months from the date of the decree on appeal (z) Nor does the summary dismissal of an appeal extend the time for payment (a) This is in accordance with the general principle that where time is prescribed by the decree of the lower Court for the performance of a condition precedent and the appellate Court simply confirms the decree of the lower Court or summarily dismisses the appeal it cannot be regarded as enlarging the time fixed by the original decree for the performance of the condition (b) The result is the same where the appeal is withdrawn and no decree is passed in appeal The withdrawal does not give the mortgagor a fresh period for redemption (c) To avoid the difficulty arising in such cases the mortgagor should take care to have a fresh date fixed for payment by the appellate Court offering at the same time to pay interest up to that date (d) or he should apply under r 2 (2) for an extension of the time for payment See note under s 34 Time for payment fixed by decree

Sub rule 3 Discharge of debt etc on foreclosure —Old sub rule (3) provided that on the passing of a final decree for foreclosure the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged. The present sub rule (3) provides that

The liabilities in respect of the mortgage refer not only to the mortgage debt but also to the other costs charges and expenses referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (iii). The liabilities on account of the suit include costs of the suit awarded against the mortgagor

Limitation for application for a final decree—The period of limitation for an application for a final decree in a suit for foreclosure sale or redemption is three years under art 181 of the Limitation Act 1908 As to limitation for execution of a final decree for foreclosure sale or redemption see note below Limitation for execution of final decree

Where no payment is made by the mortgagor of the amount due on or before the day fixed the mortgagee may apply for a final decree The procedure prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act in suits for foreclosure redemption and sale was in the first place to pass a decree and then an order absolute. This phraseology gave rise to conflicting decisions In some cases it was held that an application for an order absolute for sale under s 89 of the Transfer of Property Act was an application to execute the decree and that the period of limitation was three years from the date of the decree as provided by art 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 [Limitation Act 1908 art 182]. In other cases it was held that such an application was one to obtain a further decree that the only article of the Limitation Act that could possibly apply to it was the general article 178 [now art 181] but that even that article could not apply as it applied only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure and that there being no other article there was no period of limitation at all for an application for an order absolute under the Transfer of Property Act [It is interesting to note that the former view was taken by the Privy Council in cases under the Transfer of Property Act decided in 1914 (e)]. To put an end to this conflict of decisions it is now provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree is one to obtain a final decree [see r 3 (2) r 5 (3) r 8 (1)] so as to bring it within the purview of art 181 of the Limitation Act of 1908 [old art 178] and not one to execute the decree (f) Further the provisions relating to mortgage suits have been transferred from the Transfer of Property Act to the Civil Procedure Code so that it is no longer possible to contend that these applications are not under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (g) The result is that an application for a final decree for foreclosure sale or redemption is now governed by the residuary article 181 of the Limitation Act 1908 and the period of limitation is three years from the date on which the right to apply accrues (h) Where an appeal is preferred from the preliminary decree the right to make such an application accrues not on the expiry of the time limited by the preliminary decree but on the date of the decree of the Court of appeal (i) This rule applies although the decree of the Appellate Court has been made three years after the time fixed for redemption by the decree of the trial Judge (j) Where a decree was passed before the new Code came into force and the application for a final decree was made after the new Code came into force it was held that the right to apply never having accrued to the decree holder until the new Code conferred it upon him the period of limitation under art 181 did not begin to run until the new Code came into force that is until 1st January 1909 (k) If the preliminary decree directs the mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage but fixes no period for such payment the starting point for limitation for an application for a final decree is at the expiry of six months from the preliminary decree (l) In a case where the Court erroneously expressed an opinion that a puisne mortgagee could not sell the property without paying off a prior mortgagee it was held that limitation was suspended for the time spent in ascertaining the balance due to him (m) An omission to draw up a final decree has been treated as an irregularity and in a case where the Court erroneously made an order absolute instead of a final decree for sale execution was allowed to proceed (n)

Application for execution of final decree—Limitation for an application for execution of a final decree is under art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 (o)

Preliminary decree in suit for sale

4 [New Act 4 of 1882, s 88] (1) In a suit for sale, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree to the effect mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) (i) of sub rule (1) of rule 2, and further directing that, in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned, the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree directing that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what has been found or declared under or by the preliminary decree due to the plaintiff, together with such amount as may have been adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, and the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before a final decree for sale is passed, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

r 3 on the passing of a final decree for foreclosure all liabilities to which the defendant is subject in respect of the mortgage or on account of the suit shall be deemed to have been discharged. The liabilities in respect of the mortgage refer not only to the mortgage debt but also to the other costs charges and expenses referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (iii). The liabilities on account of the suit include costs of the suit awarded against the mortgagor

Limitation for application for a final decree —The period of limitation for an application for a final decree in a suit for foreclosure sale or redemption is three years under art 181 of the Limitation Act 1908 As to limitation for execution of a final decree for foreclosure sale or redemption see note below Limitation for execution of final decree

Where no payment is made by the mortgagor of the amount due on or before the day fixed the mortgagee may apply for a final decree The procedure prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act in suits for foreclosure redemption and sale was in the first place to pass a decree and then an order absolute. This phraseology gave rise to conflicting decisions In some cases it was held that an application for an order absolute for sale under s 89 of the Transfer of Property Act was an application to execute the decree and that the period of limitation was three years from the date of the decree as provided by art 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 [Limitation Act 1908 art 18] In other cases it was held that such an application was one to obtain a further decree that the only article of the Limitation Act that could possibly apply to it was the general article 178 [now art 181] but that even that article could not apply as it applied only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure and that there being no other article there was no period of limitation at all for an application for an order absolute under the Transfer of Property Act [It is interesting to note that the former view was taken by the Privy Council in cases under the Transfer of Property Act decided in 1914 (e)] To put an end to this conflict of decisions it is now provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree is one to obtain a final decree [see r 3 (2) r 5 (3) r 8 (1)] so as to bring it within the purview of art 181 of the Limitation Act of 1908 [old art 178] and not one to execute the decree (f) Further the provisions relating to mortgage suits have been transferred from the Transfer of Property Act to the Civil Procedure Code so that it is no longer possible to contend that these applications are not under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (g) The result is that an application for a final decree for foreclosure, sale or redemption is now governed by the residuary article 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908 and the period of limitation is three years from the date on which the right to apply accrues (h) Where an appeal is preferred from the preliminary decree the right to make such an application accrues not on the expiry of the time limited by the preliminary decree but on the date of the decree of the Court of appeal (i) This rule applies although the decree of the Appellate Court has been made three years after the time fixed for redemption by the decree of the trial Judge (j) Where a decree was passed before the new Code came into force and the application for a final decree was made after the new Code

came into force it was held that the right to apply never having accrued to the decree holder until the new Code conferred it upon him the period of limitation under art 181 did not begin to run until the new Code came into force that is until 1st January 1909 (k) If the preliminary decree directs the mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage but fixes no period for such payment the starting point for limitation for an application for a final decree is at the expiry o six months from the preliminary decree (l) In a case where the Court erroneously expres ed an opinion that a puisne mortgagee could not sell the property without paying off a prior mortgagee it was held that limitation was suspended for the time spent in ascertaining the balance due to him (m) An omission to draw up a final decree has been treated as an irregularity and in a case where the Court erroneously made an order absolute instead of a final decree for sale execution was allowed to proceed (n)

Application for execution of final decree—Limitation for an application for execution of a final decree is under art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 (o)

4 [New Act 4 of 1882, s 88] (1) In a suit for sale, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree to the effect mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) (i) of sub rule (1) of rule 2, and further directing that, in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned, the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree directing that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what has been found or declared under or by the preliminary decree due to the plaintiff, together with such amount as may have been adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, and the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before a final decree for sale is passed, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

(3) In a suit for foreclosure in the case of an anomalous mortgage, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court may, at the instance of any party to the suit or of any other person interested

4 in the mortgage-security or the right of redemption, pass a like decree (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit, including the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum fixed by the Court to meet the expenses of the sale and to secure the performance of the terms

(4) Where, in a suit for sale or a suit for foreclosure in which sale is ordered, subsequent mortgagees or persons deriving title from, or subrogated to the rights of, any such mortgagees are joined as parties, the preliminary decree referred to in sub rule (1) shall provide for the adjudication of the respective rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No 9, Form No 10 or Form No 11, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require

4 (1) In a suit for sale if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a decree to the effect mentioned in clauses (a) (b) and (c) of rule 2 and also directing that in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is declared due to the plaintiff as aforesaid together with subsequent interest and subsequent costs and that the balance (if any) be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same

(2) In a suit for foreclosure if the plaintiff succeeds and the mortgage is not a mortgage by conditional sale the Court may at the instance of the plaintiff or of any person interested either in the mortgage money or in the right of redemption pass a like decree (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit including the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum fixed by the Court to meet the expenses of sale and to secure the performance of the terms

Transfer of Property Act s 88 —This rule corresponds with sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act The reference to subsequent interest and subsequent costs is new

The old rule and the new rule —(1) The new rule expressly says that the decree to be passed under it is to be a preliminary decree

(2) The new rule says that on default in payment by the mortgagor the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale

(3) The new rule makes it clear that the mortgagee has to pay not only subsequent interest and subsequent costs as under the old rule but also subsequent costs charges and expenses See r 10 below

(4) Sub rule (2) of the new rule empowers the Court to extend the time for payment There was no such provision in the old rules

(5) Sub rule (4) of the new rule provides for decrees in suits to which subsequent mortgagees are parties

Preliminary decree for sale —A suit for sale of mortgaged property can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a simple mortgage or a mortgage by deposit of title deeds or where the property is subject to a charge within the meaning of sec 100 of the Transfer of Property Act (see r 15 below) The preliminary decree to be passed in a suit for sale corresponds to the preliminary decree in a suit for foreclosure in all respects except that instead of a direction providing for foreclosure the decree is to contain a direction providing for sale of the mortgaged property The notes therefore on r 2 above as to the taking of accounts and the determination of principal interest and costs apply equally to this rule

Sub rule (1) Subsequent costs charges expenses and interest —See rr 10 and 11 below

Sub rule (2) Power to extend time in suit for sale —This sub rule is new It empowers the Court in a suit for sale to extend the time fixed for payment of the amount due by the mortgagor on good cause shown There was no such provision in the old rule enabling the Court to extend the time for payment in a suit for sale It was therefore held that if the mortgagor failed to pay on or before the day fixed the Court had no power to extend the time for payment and that it was bound to pass a final decree for sale (p) At the same time it was held that even if time was not extended the mortgagor was entitled under O 21 r 69 to stop the sale by payment of the amount due and costs (q) and further if the property was sold to have the sale set aside on making the deposit as provided by O 21 r 89 (r) In the cases cited above the Court held that the provisions of the Code relating to execution of decrees applied to sales under mortgage decrees There were however cases in which it was held that the sections of the Code relating to execution did not apply to sales under mortgage decrees (s) But the latter view is no longer tenable and it was to negative that view that the sections of the Transfer of Property Act relating to decrees in mortgage suits were transferred to the Code As to O 21 r 83 it is expressly provided that nothing contained therein applies to a sale in execution of a mortgage decree (t) See notes to r 5 below Mortgagor s rights before confirmation of sale

Form of decree —As to the form of a preliminary decree for sale see App D Form No 5 [old Form No 4] On referring to the form it will be observed that it does not contain any declaration of personal liability of the defendant for principal interest or costs Such a declaration in fact ought not to be included in the decree for sale If the sale proceeds are not sufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee the mortgagee may apply for a personal decree against the mortgagor under r 6 below (u) See Appendix D Form No 8 [old Form No 11]

Subsequent incumbrancers —For the contents of a decree for sale in a suit by the first mortgagee (v) see Appendix D Form No 9 [old Form No 7] For the contents of a decree for sale in a suit by a second mortgagee see Appendix D Form No 10 [old form No 8]

Rights of second mortgagee in a suit for sale by first mortgagee —M mortgages his property first to A and then to B A sues M for a sale of the mortgaged property making B a party defendant In such a suit the only right of B the second mortgagee is to redeem A s mortgage or to receive his mortgage money out of the surplus sale proceeds after satisfaction of A s mortgage He is entitled to treat the suit brought by A the first mortgagee as one for his benefit It follows therefore that B cannot ask for a sale of the property if A s claim is satisfied by M before sale Also if a decree for sale is passed in A s suit B cannot ask for a decree for sale of another property of M included in his mortgage In either case B must bring a separate suit for sale on his mortgage (w)

Award and consent decree—An arbitrator is not bound by this rule A decree in terms of an award may order the sale of the property mortgaged although no preliminary decree under this rule or final decree under rule 5 has been passed (x) So also if the decree is a consent decree (y) In Kashi Chandra v Priyanath (z) Mookerjee J directed that before execution an order absolute should be obtained under O 34 r 5 but the consent decree in that case was in the form of a preliminary decree

Sub rule (3) Power to decree sale in a foreclosure suit—Under the Transfer of Property Amending Act 1929 foreclosure is allowed in the case only of anomalous mortgage where there is an express stipulation in that behalf and in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale The remedy by way of foreclosure is no longer open in the case of an English mortgage The words in the case of an anomalous mortgage have accordingly been added after the words in a suit for foreclosure in new sub-rule (3) which corresponds to old r 4 (2) In the case of a mortgage by conditional sale the only remedy open to the mortgagee is foreclosure and there is no scope for an alternative decree for sale

Appeal from order refusing to extend time—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43 r (1) (o) The provision for extension of time contained in sub rule (2) of this rule is now and so is the provision for an appeal from an order refusing to extend the time under sub rule (2) See O 43 r (1) (o) and notes clause (o)

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

(2) Where the mortgaged property or part thereof has been sold in pursuance of a decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule, the Court shall not pass an order under sub rule (1) of this rule unless the defendant, in addition to the amount mentioned in sub rule (1), deposits in Court for payment to the purchaser a sum equal to five per cent of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by the purchaser

Where such deposit has been made, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by him together with a sum equal to five per cent thereof

(3) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf pass a final decree directing that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with in the manner provided in sub rule (1) of rule 4

The old rule —The above rule has been substituted for old r 5 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule is as follows —

5 (1) Where on or before the day fixed the defendant pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10 the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up and if so required —

(b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree

and also if necessary —

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

(2) Where such payment is not so made the Court shall on application made in that behalf by the plaintiff pass a decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with as is mentioned in rule 4

Transfer of Property Act 1882 s 89 —This rule corresponds with sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act except in the following particulars —

1 The provision contained in sub r (1) for the passing of a decree in the case where payment is made in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree is new

5 2 By sub rule (2) it is provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree for sale is not for an order for sale as it was in sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act but for a decree for sale See notes below Final decree for sale Limitation

3 The words to the plaintiff or which occurred in sec 89 after the word pays (see l 2 of this rule) have been omitted See notes below Paym nt into Court

4 The words and thereupon the defendant s right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished which occurred at the end of sec 89 have been omitted. See notes to r 1 above Consequences of non joinder

The old rule and the new rule —

(1) The words or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule in sub rule (1) are new

(2) If the mortgagor pays the amount due into Court he has to apply for a final decree for a re transfer of the mortgaged property to him and if a final decree has already been passed and the amount is deposited before confirma tion of sale for an order for a re transfer

(3) Sub rule (2) is new There was no such provision in the old rule

(4) Sub-rule (3) makes it clear that if the mortgagor fails to pay the amount into Court the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale

Consent decree providing for payment in instalments —Where in a suit for sale on a mortgage the consent decree provides for payment of the mortgage money in instalments and does not provide for payment on a fixed date within six months from the date of declaring the amount due as provided by r 4 r 4 has no application and consequently it is not necessary for the mortgagee to apply for a final decree in terms of the present rule (a)

No power to go behind preliminary decree —On an application of the mortgagee for a final decree the Court has no power to go behind the preliminary decree Its powers are limited to those mentioned in this rule (b)

Only one final decree for sale —In Gajadhar v Kishen (c) Banerji J said It seems to me that this rule i e the rule regulating applications for final decrees in mortgage actions— contemplates the passing of only one final decree in a suit for sale upon a mortgage The essential condition to the making of a final decree is the existence of a preliminary decree which has become conclusive between the parties Where an appeal has been preferred it is the decree of the Appellate Court which is the final decree in the cause This statement of the law was approved by the Judicial Committee in Jowad Hussain v Gendan Singh (d) From this it is concluded by the Allahabad High Court (e) though not without a note of dissent (f) that if the mortgagee obtains a final decree for sale pending an appeal from the preliminary decree the decree is invalid and incapable of execution though the mortgagee may apply for a final decree on foot of the preliminary decree as passed by the Appellate Court In a Patna case (g) however a final decree in exactly similar circumstances prior to the dismissa of the mortgagor s appeal from a preliminary decree was treated as valid though operative only from the date of dismissal of the appeal

Mortgagor s rights before confirmation of sale—In sub rule (1) the words or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this rule are new They enable the mortgagor to pay the amount due into Court even after sale provided the sale is not confirmed under O 21 r 92 The mortgagor may exercise this right even if no order has been made extending the time for payment Where the deposit of the amount due is made after the property has been sold the mortgagor must also deposit for payment to the purchaser a sum equivalent to five per cent of the purchase money as provided by sub rule (2) If he does so the sale becomes ineffective and the purchaser is entitled to repayment of the purchase money paid by him into Court together with the deposit of five per cent On the mortgagor depositing the amount due and the five per cent he is entitled to an order under sub rule (1) ordering the mortgagee to deliver up the title deeds and to re transfer the mortgaged property to him See notes to r 4 above Power to extend time in suit for sale O 3

Payment into Court—Under sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act the defendant was at liberty to pay the amount to the plaintiff or into Court Under the present rule [sub r (1)] the payment has to be made into Court If the money is not paid into Court the Court must pass a final decree for sale [sub rule (3)] It has been held in some cases that if money payable under the preliminary decree is paid out of Court but the payment is not certified as required by O 21 r 2 the Court should not take any notice of the payment and no credit should be given to the mortgagor in respect thereof (h) On the other hand it has been held that an application for a final decree is not an application for execution and O 21 r 2 does not apply (i) and this seems to be the correct view In a Patna case (j) the High Court held that O 3 r 3 applied to such a case and directed the trial Court to take an account of the money alleged to have been paid by the mortgagor after the date of the preliminary decree If the decree is a consent decree or one which is not passed under rr 4 and 5 there is no obligation to pay into Court and the Court can inquire into the payment or adjustment whether certified or not (k)

Dismissal of mortgagee s application for final decree for default—Where an application is made by the mortgagee for a final decree it should not be dismissed for his subsequent absence If it is dismissed the order of dismissal must be set aside and a final decree must be passed (l)

Sufficient part thereof—It is not necessary to sell all the properties mortgaged at once Ordinarily the right of selling in a particular order rests with the decree holder but in view of equities arising in favour of various parties the Court may direct the order in which they should be sold (m)

Effect of sale under mortgage decree—By a sale of property in execution of a decree for the payment of money the interest of the judgment debtor alone passes to the purchaser (n) By a sale of mortgaged property in execution of a mortgage decree the interest both of the mortgagor and mortgagee passes to the purchaser (o) See notes to r 1 above under the head Consequences of non joinder

Injunction restraining mortgagor from receiving income of mortgaged property—It has been held in Allahabad that it is not competent to the Court after a final decree for sale has been passed to restrain the mortgagor by an injunction from

(3) Sub rule (2) is new There was no such provision in the old rule

(4) Sub rule (3) makes it clear that if the mortgagor fails to pay the amount into Court the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale

Consent decree providing for payment in instalments—Where in a suit for sale on a mortgage the consent decree provides for payment of the mortgage money in instalments and does not provide for payment on a fixed date within six months from the date of declaring the amount due as provided by r 4 r 4 has no application and consequently it is not necessary for the mortgagee to apply for a final decree in terms of the present rule (a)

No power to go behind preliminary decree—On an application of the mortgagee for a final decree the Court has no power to go behind the preliminary decree Its powers are limited to those mentioned in this rule (b)

Only one final decree for sale—In Gajadhar v Kishen (c) Banerji J said It seems to me that this rule i e the rule regulating applications for final decrees in mortgage actions— contemplates the passing of only one final decree in a suit for sale upon a mortgage The essential condition to the making of a final decree is the existence of a preliminary decree which has become conclusive between the parties Where an appeal has been preferred it is the decree of the Appellate Court which is the final decree in the cause This statement of the law was approved by the Judicial Committee in Jowad Hussain v Gendan Singh (d) From this it is concluded by the Allahabad High Court (e) though not without a note of dissent (f) that if the mortgagee obtains a final decree for sale pending an appeal from the preliminary decree the decree is invalid and incapable of execution though the mortgagee may apply for a final decree on foot of the preliminary decree as passed by the Appellate Court In a Patna case (g) however a final decree in exactly similar circumstances prior to the dismissal of the mortgagor's appeal from a preliminary decree was treated as valid though operative only from the date of dismissal of the appeal

Mortgagor s rights before confirmation of sale—In sub rule (1) the words or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule are new They enable the mortgagor to pay the amount due into Court even after sale provided the sale is not confirmed under O 21 r 92 The mortgagor may exercise this right even if no order has been made extending the time for payment Where the deposit of the amount due is made after the property has been sold the mortgagor must also deposit for payment to the purchaser a sum equivalent to five per cent of the purchase money as provided by sub rule (2) If he does so the sale becomes ineffective and the purchaser is entitled to repayment of the purchase money paid by him into Court together with the deposit of five per cent On the mortgagor depositing the amount due and the five per cent he is entitled to an order under sub-rule (1) ordering the mortgagee to deliver up the title deeds and to re transfer the mortgaged property to him See notes to r 4 above Power to extend time in suit for sale

Payment into Court.—Under sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act the defendant was at liberty to pay the amount to the plaintiff or into Court Under the present rule [sub r (1)] the payment has to be made into Court If the money is not paid into Court the Court must pass a final decree for sale [sub rule (3)] It has been held in some cases that if money payable under the preliminary decree is paid out of Court but the payment is not certified as required by O 21 r 2 the Court should not take any notice of the payment and no credit should be given to the mortgagor in respect thereof (h) On the other hand it has been held that an application for a final decree is not an application for execution and O 21 r 2 does not apply (i) and this seems to be the correct view In a Patna case (j) the High Court held that O 23 r 3 applied to such a case and directed the trial Court to take an account of the money alleged to have been paid by the mortgagor after the date of the preliminary decree If the decree is a consent decree or one which is not passed under rr 4 and 5 there is no obligation to pay into Court and the Court can inquire into the payment or adjustment whether certified or not (k)

Dismissal of mortgagee s application for final decree for default—Where an application is made by the mortgagee for a final decree it should not be dismissed for his subsequent absence If it is dismissed the order of dismissal must be set aside and a final decree must be passed (l)

Sufficient part thereof—It is not necessary to sell all the properties mortgaged at once Ordinarily the right of selling in a particular order rests with the decree holder but in view of equities arising in favour of various parties the Court may direct the order in which they should be sold (m)

Effect of sale under mortgage decree—By a sale of property in execution of a decree for the payment of money the interest of the judgment debtor alone passes to the purchaser (n) By a sale of mortgaged property in execution of a mortgage decree the interest both of the mortgagor and mortgagee passes to the purchaser (o) See notes to r 1 above under the head Consequences of non joinder

Injunction restraining mortgagor from receiving income of mortgaged property—It has been held in Allahabad that it is not competent to the Court after a final decree for sale has been passed to restrain the mortgagor by an injunction from

Appeal—Under the present Code a party aggrieved by a preliminary decree passed under r 4 of this Order may appeal from it if he does not appeal from it he is precluded from disputing its correctness in an appeal which may be preferred from the final decree passed under this rule [s 97] (q) Even under the old Code the correctness of the decree under sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act [now O 34 r 4] could not be questioned in an application for an order absolute under sec 89 [now O 34 r 5] or in an appeal from an order absolute made on such an application (r)

An adjudication dismissing an application under this rule for a final decree for sale is not an order under s 47 but a decree and is appealable as such under s 96 (s) and is therefore not open to revision (t)

Costs not recoverable from mortgagor personally—In a mortgage decree for sale costs are part of the amount due upon the mortgage and are recoverable from the mortgaged property and not personally from the mortgagor unless the decree itself so directs (w)

Recovery of balance due on mortgage in suit for sale

6 [New Act 4 of 1882 s 90] Where the net proceeds of any sale held under the last preceding rule are found insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff, the Court, on application by him, may, if the balance is legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold, pass a decree for such balance

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 6 by Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule is as follows —

6 Where the net proceeds of any such sale are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff if the balance is legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold the Court may pass a decree for such amount

The old rule and the new rule—The words any sale held under the last preceding section in the new rule have been substituted for the words any such sale It is thus made clear that this rule applies to a sale held in execution of a decree passed under rule 5 which rule 8 A applies to a sale held in execution of a decree passed under rule 8 O

Personal Decree for balance against mortgagor—Where after the sale of the mortgaged property there is still a balance due to the mortgagee and that amount is legally recoverable from the mortgagor the mortgagee may apply for and obtain a decree under this rule against the mortgagor personally which he may execute against the person of the mortgagor or by attachment and sale of his other properties (x) A decree under this rule is a decree to be passed in the original suit and not in a fresh suit (y) The object of the rule is to obviate the necessity of a fresh suit to recover the balance (z) Such a suit in fact could not be brought except where the mortgagee had reserved his right to do so with the leave of the Court under O 2 r 2 (a) A personal decree under this rule for the balance should not be passed until after the mortgaged property had been sold and the proceeds found insufficient to pay the mortgage money in other words the Court should not while passing a decree for sale under r 5 pass a personal decree for the balance and a personal decree can only be passed when the sale proceeds are found to be insufficient to satisfy the mortgagee s claim (b) In a recent case the Judicial Committee held that a decree for sale und sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 can validly provide that if the proceeds of sale are not sufficient to pay the mortgage debt the mortgagor should pay the balance personally though the personal decree could not be executed until after the property was sold and the nett sale proceeds were found to be insufficient to satisfy the debt (c) But the form of the decree to be passed under this rule Appendix D Form No 11 makes it clear that a personal decree cannot be passed until after the sale is held and the balance ascertained If it is passed before sale and the mortgagor does not object he is estopped from doing so at a later stage (d) When the decree only gives the mortgagee a remedy against the mortgaged property the personal remedy having become time barred the mortgagee can only recover against the mortgaged property (e) See App A Form No 45 and App D Form No 4

A personal decree cannot be passed under this rule unless all the properties directed to be sold under rr 4 and 5 have been sold This is because the remedy of the mortgagee in the first instance is against the properties mortgaged and such properties should in the first instance be exhausted before a personal liability can be imposed upon the mortgagor But this does not mean that if a portion of the properties is destroyed or has ceased to be available for sale through no fault of the mortgagee there can be no decree for personal liability against the mortgagor (f) It has similarly been held that the omission to include in the plaint a portion of the mortgaged property does not debar the mortgagee from obtaining a personal decree under this rule provided the omission was not intended to prejudice and has not prejudiced the mortgagor (g) In a case of a mortgage by the father of a joint Hindu family not being one for necessity the High Court of Madras held that the mortgagee was entitled to a conditional decree under this rule against the father personally and against the joint family property of himself and his undivided sons for the recovery of the balance in case the sale proceeds of the father's share of the mortgaged property was insufficient (h) Where a sale in execution of a decree on a mortgage by a Hindu lady was set aside at the instance of her grandson who was the real owner the Allahabad High Court passed a personal decree against her under this rule saying that the mortgagee having been compelled to refund the purchase money to the purchaser the net proceeds of the sale were nil and therefore insufficient to pay the amount due (i) The absence of any reservation in the preliminary decree of liberty to the decree holder to apply for a personal decree does not disable him from doing so later (j)

Where net proceeds of any such sale held under r 5 are found insufficient.— A personal decree under this rule can only follow th mortgage decre und r which the sale is held Therefore if a sale has taken place under a decree on a prior mortgage that would not entitle a subsequent mortgagee who has also obtained a decree for sale to apply for and obtain a decree under this rule The reason is that the sale was not held under his decree (k) Similarly where a person holding two mortgages over the same property brings two suits on those mortgages and obtains two decrees and the mortgaged property is sold under one of those decrees the fact that the sale proceeds after discharging that decree are not sufficient to pay the amount due under the other decree would not entitle him to apply for and obtain a personal decree under this rule for the balance due under the other decree The reason is that the property was sold not under that decree but under the first decree (l)

Amount due — A personal decree under this rule can only be passed where the net proceeds of the sale are insufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee The ex pre sion amount due includes costs (m) [see r 4 (1)] It also includes when a puisne mortgagee is plaintiff the amount paid by him in satisfaction of prior mortgages (n)

Personal obligation to pay a question of construction — In India a mortgage does not necessarily import a personal obligation to repay Prima facie this obligation is present in simple mortgages and of course in English mortgages Prima facie it is not present in mortgages by conditional sale and in usufructuary mortgages In each case the question is one of construction of the mortgage instrument and the personal liability to repay may become barred before the right of recourse to the mortgaged property is barred (o)

Legally recoverable — No decree can be passed for the balance under this rule unless the balance is legally recoverable The balance is not legally recoverable if the right to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally is barred by limitation at the date of the suit for sale It would be barred in the case of an unregistered instrument after the expiration of three years from the date on which it is repayable and in the case of a registered instrument after the expiration of six years from that date (p) unle s the right is kept alive by acknowledgment as provided by s 19 of the

Limitation Act 1908 or by payment of interest or part payment of principal as provided by s 20 of that Act If the right to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally is not barred at the date of the suit for sale the mortgagee is entitled if there is a deficiency to a personal decree for the balance though the application under this rule may be made after the expiry of the period of limitation for a suit for a personal decree (q) The mortgagee however is not entitled to wait indefinitely for a personal decree after the deficiency has been ascertained He must apply for a personal decree within three years from the date when the deficiency is ascertained as provided by Art 181 of the Limitation Act otherwise the application will be time barred (r)

Legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold —These words mean by way of illustration that the balance must be a balance which the mortgagee is not precluded by the terms of the mortgage from realizing otherwise than out of the property sold (s)

Personal liability of purchaser from mortgagor —The transferee of the equity of redemption in mortgaged property who has agreed with the mortgagor to pay to the mortgagee the amount due to him is not a person from whom the balance is legally recoverable within the meaning of this rule there being no contract between him and the mortgagee Hence no personal decree can be passed against the transferee under this rule at the instance of the mortgagee (t)

Costs against puisne mortgagee —A prior mortgagee is not entitled to a decree under this rule against a puisne mortgagee for the amount of his costs The present rule does not apply to such a case (u)

Limitation —See notes above Legally recoverable

Consent decree —A consent decree may provide for personal recovery from the mortgagor by execution of the decree if the sale proceeds are insufficient and in that case no further decree under this rule is necessary (v)

Appeal —An appeal from a decree under this rule lies to the District Judge and not to the High Court notwithstanding that the decree be for a sum exceeding Rs 5 000 if the original mortgage suit was valued at less than Rs 5 000 (w) See notes to sec 96 Forum of appeal

Limitation Act 1908 or by payment of interest or part payment of principal as provided by s 20 of that Act If the right to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally is not barred at the date of the suit for sale the mortgagee is entitled if there is a deficiency to a personal decree for the balance though the application under this rule may be made after the expiry of the period of limitation for a suit for a personal decree (q) The mortgagee however is not entitled to wait indefinitely for a personal decree after the deficiency has been ascertained. He must apply for a personal decree within three years from the date when the deficiency is ascertained as provided by Art 181 of the Limitation Act otherwise the application will be time barred (r)

Legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold —These words mean by way of illustration that the balance must be a balance which the mortgagee is not precluded by the terms of the mortgage from realizing otherwise than out of the property sold (s)

Personal liability of purchaser from mortgagor —The transferee of the equity of redemption in mortgaged property who has agreed with the mortgagor to pay to the mortgagee the amount due to him is not a person from whom the balance is legally recoverable within the meaning of this rule there being no contract between him and the mortgagee Hence no personal decree can be passed against the transferee under this rule at the instance of the mortgagee (t)

Costs against puisne mortgagee —A prior mortgagee is not entitled to a decree under this rule against a puisne mortgagee for the amount of his costs The present rule does not apply to such a case (u)

Limitation —See notes above Legally recoverable

Consent decree —A consent decree may provide for personal recovery from the mortgagor by execution of the decree if the sale proceeds are insufficient and in that case no further decree under this rule is necessary (v)

Appeal —An appeal from a decree under this rule lies to the District Judge and not to the High Court notwithstanding that the decree be for a sum exceeding Rs 5 000 if the original mortgage suit was valued at less than Rs 5 000 (w) See notes to sec 96 Forum of appeal

(ii) that, if payment of the amount found or declared due under or by the preliminary decree is not made on or before the date so fixed, or the plaintiff fails to pay, within such time as the Court may fix, the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, the defendant shall be entitled to apply for a final decree—

(a) in the case of a mortgage other than a usufruc tuary mortgage, a mortgage by conditional sale, or an anomalous mortgage the terms of which provide for foreclosure only and not for sale, that the mortgaged property be sold, or

(b) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale O 3
or such an anomalous mortgage as aforesaid, that the plaintiff be debarred from all right to redeem the property

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure or sale, as the case may be, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

The old rule —The above rule has been substituted for old r 7 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule is as follows —

7 In a suit for redemption if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the defendant for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to or

(b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree

and directing—

(c) that if the plaintiff pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due to be fixed by the Court the defendant shall deliver up to the plaintiff or to such person as he appoints all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property and shall, if so required retransfer the property to the plaintiff free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the defendant or any person claiming under him or where the defendant claims by derived title by those under whom he claims and shall if necessary put the plaintiff in possession of the property but

(d) that if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court the plaintiff shall (unless the mortgage is simple or usufructuary) be debarred from all right to redeem or (unless the mortgage is by conditional sale) that the mortgaged property be sold

1 The general changes in this rule are on the lines of those in new rules 2 and 4 above See note to r 2 and to r 4 The old rule and the new rule

2 In sub rule (1) (c) (ii) the cases in which a decree for sale and the cases in which a decree for foreclosure can be passed have been specifically mentioned See Transfer of Property Act sec 67

3 Sub rule (2) empowers the Court to extend the time for payment until a final decree for foreclosure or sale has been passed.

Preliminary decree for redemption —This rule excepting sub rule (1) (c) (ii) corresponds with r 2 above which relates to a preliminary decree for foreclosure The notes on that rule apply mutatis mutandis to this rule For the form of a preliminary decree for redemption see Appendix D form no 5

Other costs charges and expenses —See notes to r 2 above under the same head

Subsequent costs, charges and expenses —See r 10 below

Subsequent interest —See r 11 below

Power to extend time in suit for redemption—The proviso to old r 8 was in these terms provided that the Court may upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit from time to time postpone the day fixed for payment. Under the present rule the Court has the power to extend the time at any time before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure or sale It is clear that the new sub rule 7 ( ) applies in every case where a decree for redemption has been passed whatever may be the nature of the mortgage (x) When in a partition suit an alienation of part of the property was held binding for a certain amount only and the alienee was ordered to give possession on payment being made of that amount in a certain time this was held to be in effect a decree for redemption and subject to the power of enlargement of time (y) But this decision is of doubtful authority See notes to r (2) above Power to extend time in foreclosure suit The application for extension of time should be made to th Court of the first instance even if the decree for redemption was pas ed by the appellate Court (z)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43 r 1 (o)

8 [New Act 4 of 1882, s 93] (1) Where, before a final decree debarring the plaintiff from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed or before the confirmation of a sale held in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule, the plaintiff makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub rule (1) of rule 7, the Court shall, on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

Final decree in redemption suit

(a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree, and, if necessary,—

(b) ordering him to re-transfer at the cost of the plaintiff the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,

and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property of this rule, the Court shall not pass an order under sub rule (1) of this rule, unless the plaintiff, in addition to the amount mentioned in sub rule (1), deposits in Court for payment to the purchaser a sum equal to five per cent of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by the purchaser

Where such deposit has been made, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by him, together with a sum equal to five per cent thereof

(3) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall, on application made by the defendant in this behalf —

(a) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or of such an anomalous mortgage as is hereinbefore referred to in rule 7, pass a final decree declaring that the plaintiff and all persons claiming under him are debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and, also, if necessary, ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the mortgaged property , or

(b) in the case of any other mortgage not being a usufructuary mortgage, pass a final decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant, and the balance, if any, be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same "

The old rule —The above rule has been substituted for old r 8 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule is as follows —

8 (1) Where on or before the day fixed, the plaintiff pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10 the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents which under the terms o the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up and, if so required —

(b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree and also if necessary —

(c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property

(2) Where such payment is not so made and the mortgage is not simple or usufructuary, the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the defendant, pass a decree that the plaintiff and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also, if necessary, ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the property.

(3) On the passing of a decree under sub-rule (2) the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged.

(4) Where such payment is not so made and the mortgage is not by conditional sale, the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the defendant, pass a decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant, and that the balance (if any) be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same.

Provided that the Court may, upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit, from time to time postpone the day fixed for payment.

The old rule and the new rule.—The changes in this rule have been made on the lines of those in rules 3 and 5 above. See notes to rr. 3 and 5, "The old rule and the new rule".

The provision regarding the power of the Court to extend the time for payment which appeared as a proviso to old rule 8 (4) has been transferred to new rule 7.

Sub-rule (1): decree for mortgagor.—Sub-rule (1) of this rule corresponds with sub-rule (1) of rules 3 and 5. See notes to rules 3 and 5. Where the amount declared due in a decree for redemption is paid by the mortgagor into Court, the mortgagor does not lose his right to a decree under sub-rule (1) because he has attached and withdrawn from Court a portion of the sum so paid in execution of that portion of the decree which awarded him costs against the mortgagee (a). If time for payment has been extended, payment within the time so extended gives the mortgagor a right to a decree (b). The mortgagee is not entitled under O. 21, r. 1 (c) to notice of payment into Court (c).

Sub-rule (2): decree for foreclosure.—The mere fact that the preliminary decree for redemption does not contain a direction for foreclosure or sale in default of payment on the day fixed does not disentitle the mortgagee to a decree for foreclosure or sale as the case may be. The omission of the Court to draw up the proper decree under r. 7 does not deprive the mortgagee of the relief provided by this rule (d). The decree for foreclosure or sale under this rule should be passed by the Court which passed the preliminary decree for redemption, notwithstanding that the latter decree has been varied by the appellate Court (e).

8A. [New.] Where the net proceeds of any sale held under the last preceding rule are found insufficient to pay the amount due to the defendant, the Court, on application by him, may, if the balance is legally recoverable from the plaintiff otherwise than out of the property sold, pass a decree for such balance.

Personal decree in suit for redemption—This rule is new. It has been added by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929. Rule 6 provides for a personal decree against the mortgagor in a suit for sale brought by the mortgagee. The present rule provides for a personal decree in a suit for redemption brought by the mortgagor.

Decree where nothing is found due or where mortgagee has been overpaid

9 Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained if it appears upon taking the account referred to in rule 7, that nothing is due to the defendant or that he has been overpaid, the Court shall pass a decree directing the defendant if so required, to retransfer the property and to pay to the plaintiff the amount which may be found due to him and the plaintiff shall, if necessary, be put in possession of the mortgaged property.

This rule provides for cases where nothing is found due to the mortgagee and for cases where the mortgagee has been overpaid as may well happen where he is in possession. There was no such provision in the Transfer of Property Act but the practice followed under that Act was the same as that prescribed by this rule (f).

Costs of mortgagee subsequent to decree

10 [New Act 4 of 1882 s 94] In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a foreclosure sale or redemption the Court shall, unless in the case of costs of the suit the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him thereto, add to the mortgage money such costs of the suit and other costs, charges and expenses as have been properly incurred by him since the date of the preliminary decree for foreclosure, sale or redemption up to the time of actual payment.

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 10 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on 1st April 1930. The old rule is as follows —

10 In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a foreclosure or sale or redemption the Court shall unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs add to the mortgage money such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure or sale or redemption up to the time of actual payment.

Other costs charges and expenses—The words and other costs charges and expenses are new. The addition of these words makes it clear that all costs charges and expenses properly incurred by a mortgagee subsequent to the passing of the preliminary decree are to be added to the mortgage money and the mortgagor has to pay them before he can redeem the mortgage. Such costs charges and expenses were added to the mortgage money even before the amendment of the present rule by the Act of 1929 (g).

But costs of a successful appeal by the mortgagee from an order striking off execution proceedings cannot be so added. The mortgagor is liable for them personally (h) If the costs of an appeal from a preliminary decree have by mistake been omitted in the final decree the Court of execution cannot include them (i) Subsequent interest not mentioned in the final decree must be taken as refused (j)

11 [New] In any decree passed in a suit for foreclosure, sale or redemption, where interest is legally recoverable, the Court may order payment of interest to the mortgagee as follows, namely —

Payment of interest

(a) Interest up to the date on or before which payment of the amount found or declared due is under the preliminary decree to be made by the mortgagor or other person redeeming the mortgage—

(i) on the principal amount found or declared due on the mortgage,—at the rate payable on the principal, or, where no such rate is fixed at such rate as the Court deems reasonable

(ii) on the amount of the costs of the suit awarded to the mortgagee,—at such rate as the Court deems reasonable from the date of the preliminary decree, and

(iii) on the amount adjudged due to the mortgagee for costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security up to the date of the preliminary decree and added to the mortgage money,—at the rate agreed between the parties or failing such rate, at the same rate as is payable on the principal, or failing both such rates, at nine per cent per annum, and

(b) Subsequent interest up to the date of realization or actual payment at such rate as the Court deems reasonable—

(i) on the aggregate of the principal sums specified in clause (a) and of the interest thereon as calculated in accordance with that clause, and

(ii) on the amount adjudged due to the mortgagee in respect of such further costs, charges and expenses as may be payable under rule 10

The old rule—This rule relates to interest The old r 11 had nothing to do with interest It gave a right to a mesne mortgagee to redeem and foreclose It is not transferred to the Transfer of Property Act as sec 94 It was as follows — O

11 Where property is mortgaged for successive debts to successive mortgagees any mesne mortgagee may institute a suit to redeem the interests of the prior mortga ge s and to foreclo e the rights of those that are posterior to himself and of the mortgagor

Interest in mortgage suits—This rule is new It has been added by the Trans fer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 It comes into operation on 1st April 1930 It gives effect to judicial decisions under the Transfer of Property Act 1882 and under O 34 of the Code Summarising those deci ions it may be said that in a suit on a mortgage the Court awarded—

(1) int rest on the principal prior to the date of the suit at the rate provi led by th mortgage [Usury Laws Repeal Act 18__ s 2] unless the rate is penal in which case the Court may award such interest as it deems proper (k) [Indian Contract Act 187_ s 74] or the interest is exce ive and the transaction was substantially unfair in which case also the Court may reduce it [U urious Loans Act 1918 s 3] and

(2) interest on the principal from the date of the suit up to the date fixed by the Court for payment of the mortgage debt also at the rate provided by the mortgage [Transfer of Property Act ss 86 88 now O 34 rr _ and 4] unless the rate is penal in which case the Court may award interest at such rate as it deems proper (l) or the interest is excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair in which case also the Court may reduce it (m)

(3) intere t on the aggregate amount of principal interest and co ts from the date fixed for the payment of the mortgag debt up to the date of re li ation or actual payment at such rate as the Court deems proper It may be allowed at the Court rate that is 6 per cent per annum (n) or at any other rate (o) The Court is not bound to award it at the contract rate (p)

As to item (3) above it was contended on behalf of the mortgagor before their Lord ships of the Privy Council in Maharaja of Bharatpur v Kanno Dei (q) that according to the true construction of s 88 of the Transfer of Property Act the Court had no power to award interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment of the mortgage debt but this contention was overruled and it was held that that section did not preclude the payment of such interest and this view was reiterated by their Lordships in Sunder Koer v Rai Sham Kishen (r) and Raja Gokuldas v Sheth Gl asiram (s) O 34 r 4 which is in substance a reproduction of sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act now contains an express provision for payment of subsequent interest

11 On a preliminary decree for foreclosure or sale under rr 2 and 4 a mortgagee is entitled to interest at the rate and with the rests stipulated in the mortgage down to the date fixed for redemption by the decree and if the decree i varied on appeal down to the date fixed for redemption by the Appellate Court (t)

Although a mortgage for ample security provides for excessive and usurious interest no presumption arises that it was induced by undue influence in the absence of proof by the mortgagor that the mortgagee was in a position to dominate his will (u)

There was a considerable conflict of decisions as to whether if there was no express provision in the mortgage deed for payment of interest after the due date for payment specified in the deed the Court could allow interest subsequent to that date It was held in some cases that if on an examination of the deed the Court came to the conclusion that there was an intention to pay interest not only up to the due date but also after that date and up to the date of payment the Court should allow interest on the footing that the deed contained a provision for the payment of such interest (v) Where the deed contained a stipulation for periodical payment of interest and there was nothing in the deed to suggest that the liability in respect of interest should cease on the due date it was presumed by the Court that there was an intention to pay interest up to the date of payment (w) If on the other hand the Court came to the conclusion that there was no intention to pay interest after the due date the practice was to allow interest by way of damages at the contract rate At the same time it was recognised that the contract rate was not necessarily the measure of damages (x) Where interest was allowed by way of damages it was held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that it could be added to the mortgage money and recovered out of the mortgaged property (y) The High Court of Allahabad held that it could not be recovered out of the mortgaged property and that there could only be a personal decree against the mortgagor for such interest (z) It was thought in some cases that the claim for interest by way of damages being a claim for compensation for breach of contract the claim would be barred unless it was made in a suit on a mortgage within three years from the due date fixed for payment of the mortgage money in the case of an unregistered instrument and six years in the case of a registered instrument (a) In the undermentioned case (b) however the Judicial Committee observed that such a claim was a recurring one within the meaning of sec 23 of the Limitation Act and that so long as the principal was not barred interest for three or for six years as the case may be could be recovered These nice distinctions have been done away by the present rule and provision is made in sub r ile (b) for interest subsequent to the date of the preliminary decree and the rate of interest is left to the discretion of the Court

12 [Act 4 of 1882, s 96] Where any property the sale of which is directed under this Order is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, direct that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage

Sale of property free from prior mortgage—A puisne mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit [see the Explanation to r 1] In such a case as also where the prior mortgagee is joined as a party and his mortgage is admitted (c) the prior mortgagee may consent to the property being sold free from his mortgage in which case he acquires the right to have his claim satisfied first out of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property [see r 13 below]

Where the prior mortgagee is a usufructuary mortgage—A holds two mortgages on the same property the first a usufructuary and the second a simple mortgage Can A sue for sale of the mortgaged property on the simple mortgage free from the usufructuary mortgage and claim to be paid out of the sale proceeds the amount due upon the usufructuary mortgage under this and the next rule? Yes according to the Madras ruling (d) No according to the Allahabad rulings unless the two mortgages are in favour of different persons (e)

The High Court of Patna has held that where a person holds two mortgages on the same property the first a usufructuary and the second a simple mortgage he is entitled to sue for the sale of the mortgaged property on the simple mortgage subject to his prior usufructuary mortgage and also that he is entitled to have the prior mortgage notified at the sale in execution of the decree obtained on the subsequent mortgage for the information of bidders at the sale though the prior mortgage was not mentioned in his plaint The omission to mention the prior mortgage in the plaint does not preclude him from keeping alive that mortgage by notifying it at the sale (f)

13 [Act 4 of 1882 s 97] (1) Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows —

Application of proceeds

first in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale, secondly, in payment of whatever is due to the prior mortgagee on account of the prior mortgage, and of costs, properly incurred in connection therewith thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made, fourthly, in payment of the principal money due on 4 account of that mortgage, and

lastly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proving himself to be interested in the property sold, or if there are more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein or upon their joint receipt

(2) Nothing in this rule or in rule 12 shall be deemed to affect the powers conferred by section 57 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882

Application of proceeds—Compare s 73 proviso (c) which relates to subsequent and not prior incumbrances See notes to s 73 Clauses (a) (b) and (c)

Whatever is due to the prior mortgagee—This includes interest on the mortgage up to the date of the confirmation of the sale (g)

Persons interested in the property sold—It is provided by the last clause of sub r (1) that the residue of the sale proceeds should be paid to persons interested in the property sold This expression includes subsequent incumbrances (h) But it does not include unsecured creditors who cannot be said to be interested in the property sold they are at liberty however to enforce their claims against any surplus payable to the mortgagor (i)

Suit for sale necessary for bringing mortgaged property to sale

14 [Act 4 of 1882, s 99] (1) Where a mortgagee has obtained a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage, he shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale otherwise than by instituting a suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage, and he may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in Order II, rule 2

(2) Nothing in sub rule (1) shall apply to any territories to which the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has not been extended

Scope and object of the rule—This rule corresponds with s 99 of the Transfer of Property Act except that the words claim arising under the mortgage have been substituted for the words any claim whether arising under the mortgage or not The effect of this alteration is to confine the operation of the present rule to cases where a mortgagee has obtained a personal decree against the mortgagor on the mortgage debt In such a case the rule provides that the mortgagee shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree he can have the property sold only by instituting a regular suit for sale (j) and obtaining a decree for sale under rules 4 and 5 It is clear that where a mortgagee brings a regular suit for sale and a decree is passed in such suit what would be sold is the mortgaged property free from the mortgage while in the other case where the suit is not for sale but on the mortgage debt only what would be sold is the mortgaged property subject to the mortgage in other words it is only the mortgagor s equity of redemption that would be sold The object of the present rule is to prevent mortgages from suing their mortgagors on the mortgage debt as such and in the execution selling the bare equity of redemption thereby depriving the mortgagor of the right of redemption that would be given to him by the decree for sale (k) [see r 4 above] A mortgages his property to B to secure repayment of Rs 5 000 B sues A to recover Rs 5 000 and obtains a personal decree against A B then applies for attachment and sale of A s interest in the mortgaged property in execution of the decree The property may be attached for there is nothing in this rule to bar the attachment (l) but the sale must be refused under this rule B cannot bring the property to sale except by means of a regular suit for sale Suppose now that B sues A on a debt unconnected with the mortgage and obtains a decree against A Is he entitled to have A s interest in the mortgage sold in execution of such decree ? Yes for the rule only precludes B from bringing the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage Under sec 99 of the Transfer of Property Act however B could not bring the mortgaged property to sale even if the decree was for a debt unconnected with the mortgage debt (m) The scope of that section was very wide for it precluded a mortgagee from bringing the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree for the satisfaction of any claim whether arising under the mortgage or not It may here be stated that the present rule is a rule of procedure and not a rule of substantive law it has therefore a retrospective operation (n)

Sale made in contravention of this rule is voidable not void —It was at one time thought that a sale made in contravention of this rule was absolutely void (o) and that the purchaser at such sale was not therefore entitled to recover possession from the mortgagor (p) and that if he did acquire possession he was bound to account for the rents and profits realized from the mortgaged property during the term of his possession (q) But this view is no longer tenable and it has been held in recent cases that a sale in contravention of this rule is not void but only voidable at the instance of the mortgagor or any other person interested in the equity of redemption (r) The sale in other words is valid until it is set aside The procedure to set aside the sale is by way of application under sec 47 a separate suit is barred under that section The application must be made before confirmation of the sale unless the applicant proves that owing to fraud or other reasons he was kept in ignorance of the sale proceedings preliminary to sale The sale cannot be set aside after it is confirmed by the Court (s) Nor is it open to the mortgagor after confirmation of the sale to redeem the mortgage whether the property has been purchased by a third person (t) or by the mortgagee himself (u)

4 Decree —An order directing a person who has stood surety on behalf of a judgment debtor for the performance of a decree to pay the amount specified in the surety bond is not a decree within the meaning of this rule It is therefore competent to the decree holder to have the property secured by the bond for the performance of the decree sold in execution under sec 145 without instituting a regular suit for sale (t)

Decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage —This rule does not apply unless the decree obtained by the mortgagee is for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage The mortgage referred to in this rule must be a mortgage existing prior to the date of the decree and not one created by the decree [ills (1) and (2)] Further it must be a subsisting mortgage and not one which by reason of the efflux of time or any other like circumstance has ceased to be enforceable at law [ill (3)] Again the rule is not applicable when a usufructuary mortgagee has leased to the mortgagor and sues for rent (u) unless the lease was part of the mortgage transaction (x) Nor does the rule prevent a mortgagee purchasing with leave of the Court the equity of redemption at a Court sale in execution of his money decree on a claim independent of the mortgage (y)

Further the rule does not prevent a mortgagee who has two distinct mortgages one on property A and another on property B from selling B in execution of a money decree on a claim arising out of the mortgage on A and selling A in execution of a money decree on a claim arising out of the mortgage on B ( )

Yes for the claim in respect of cost is not a claim arising under the mortgage within the meaning of this rule It arises under the decree passed for costs (a)

(2) In a suit for money a decree is passed by consent whereby the defendant is directed to pay to the plaintiff Rs 3,000 It is further declared by the decree that the plaintiff should have a first charge on certain immovable property belonging to the defendant Is the plaintiff entitled to have the property sold in execution of the decree without instituting a regular suit for sale on the charge? Yes because their being no mortgage or charge prior to the decree the decree cannot be said to have been obtained for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage within the meaning of this rule The immovable property must have been made security for the payment of the money before the decree was obtained otherwise the provisions of this rule do not apply (b)

He may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in O 2 r 2.—See notes to O 2 r 2 under the head Exceptions to the rule against the splitting of reliefs

Charge—This rule applies not only to mortgages but also to charges (e) In a Calcutta case the holder of a charge on certain properties brought a suit on the charge and obtained a d cree against the defendant personally with a declaration that the plaintiff was entitled to a charge on the properties It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to sell the properties in execution but must file a suit to enforce the charge as provided by this rule (f) But where in a suit on a mortgage bond a decree was passed by consent in the terms that the plaintiff will be entitled to realise the whole amount by taking out execution the property mortgaged shall remain charged under the mortgage it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to sell the property in execution (g)

In Patna it has been held that where in a suit for maintenance a decree is passed for the plaintiff directing the defendant to pay a fixed sum every month and declaring that the allowance fixed by the decree shall be a charge on certain property the plaintiff is entitled to sell the property in execution and no separate suit is necessary (h) In a Bombay case the suit was for money and a consent decree was passed directing the defendant to pay a sum of money to the plaintiffs and declaring a charge on certain properties belonging to the defendant It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to sell the property in execution and that it was not necessary to bring a separate suit for sale (i)

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 15 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule is as follows —

15 All the provisions contained in this Order as to the sale or redemption of mortgaged property shall so far as may be apply to property subject to a charge within the meaning of sec 100 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882

The old rule and the new rule —

1 The words as to the sale or redemption of the mortgaged property which were in the old rule have been omitted and instead thereof it is now provided in general terms that the provisions applying to simple mortgages shall apply to charges

2 The words mortgage by deposit of title deeds within the meaning of sec 58 are new

Mortgage by deposit of title deeds—By sec 96 of the Transfer of Property Act a mortgage by deposit of title deeds is now placed on the same footing as simple mortgages

ORDER XXXV

Interpleader

1 [S 471] In every suit of interpleader the plaint shall, in addition to the other statements necessary for plaints, state—

Plaint in interpleader suits

(a) that the plaintiff claims no interest in the subject-matter in dispute other than for charges or costs,

(b) the claims made by the defendants severally, and

(c) that there is no collusion between the plaintiff and any of the defendants

Interpleader suits —See s 88 and notes thereto

2 [S 472] Where the thing claimed is capable of being paid into Court or placed in the custody of the Court the plaintiff may be required to so pay or place it before he can be entitled to any order in the suit

Payment of thing claimed into Court

May be required to so pay or place it —These words have been substituted for the words must so pay or place it in view of the addition of the words immovable property in s 88 The procedure by payment or deposit is plainly not applicable to immovable property

3 [S 47] Where any of the defendants in an interpleader suit is actually suing the plaintiff in respect of the subject matter of such suit the Court in which the suit against the plaintiff is pending shall, on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted, stay the proceedings as against him, and his costs in the suit so stayed may be provided for in such suit but if, and in so far as, they are not provided for in that suit, they may be added to his costs incurred in the interpleader suit

Procedure where defendant is suing plaintiff

Alteration in the rule —The words on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted have been substituted for the words on being duly informed by the Court which passed the decree in the interpleader suit in favour of the stakeholder that such decree has been passed Under the old section proceedings in other litigation relating to the same subject matter could only be stayed on the passing of a decree in the interpleader suit Under the present rule they can be stayed on the very institution of the interpleader suit

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O 43 r 1 cl (p)]

Procedure at first hearing

4 [S 473, R.S C, O 57, r 7] (1) At the first hearing the Court may—

(a) declare that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the thing claimed, award him his costs, and dismiss him from the suit, or

(b) if it thinks that justice or convenience so require, retain all parties until the final disposal of the suit

(2) Where the Court finds that the admissions of the parties or other evidence enable it to do so, it may adjudicate the title to the thing claimed

(3) Where the admissions of the parties do not enable the Court so to adjudicate, it may direct—

(a) that an issue or issues between the parties be framed and tried, and

(b) that any claimant be made a plaintiff in lieu of or in addition to the original plaintiff, and shall proceed to try the suit in the ordinary manner

Non appearance of claimant defendants—Where the claimants do not appear at the first hearing the Court may if the suit is properly instituted declare under sub r (1) that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the money claimed award him his costs and dismiss him from the suit (p)

Sub rule 3—This sub rule has been taken from O 57 r 7 of the English Rules.

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O 43 r 1 cl (p)]

Agents and tenants may not institute interpleader suits

5 [S 474] Nothing in this Order shall be deemed to enable agents to sue their principals, or tenants to sue their landlords, for the purpose of compelling them to interplead with any person other than persons making claim through such principals or landlords

Courts of Small Causes in Calcutta Madras and Bombay —The corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1882 applied also to Presidency Small Cause Courts Cl (c) of s 538 of the Code which expressly mentioned those Courts has been omitted in this rule the reason given being that its appropriate place would now be in rules under the Presidency Small Cause Act See O 51 r 1

2 2 [S 532] (1) All suits upon bills of exchange, hundis or promissory notes may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed hereunder, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed, but the summons shall be in Form No 4 in Appendix B or in such other form as may be from time to time prescribed

Institution of summary suits upon bills of exchange etc

(2) In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms, respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit unless he obtains leave from a judge as hereinafter provided so to appear and defend, and, in default of his obtaining such leave or of his appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted, and the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree—

(a) for the principal sum due on the instrument and for interest calculated in accordance with the provisions of section 79 or section 80, as the case may be, of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, up to the date of the institution of the suit, or for the sum mentioned in the summons, whichever is less, and for interest up to the date of the decree at the same rate or at such other rate as the Court thinks fit, and

(b) for such subsequent interest, if any, as the Court may order under section 34 of this Code, and

(c) for such sum for costs as may be prescribed

Provided that, if the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum for costs, the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way

(3) A decree passed under this rule may be executed forthwith

Old section—This rule corresponds with s 532 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

1 The explanation to s 532 has been omitted and in lieu thereof the words the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted have been added into sub r (2) See notes below under the head The allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted

- The fourth paragraph of s 53[2] which provided that the Court should not require the defendant to pay the amount claimed into Court or to give security therefor unless the Court thought that the defendant had not a prima facie case or that the defence was not made in good faith has been omitted See r 3 sub r (2) below

3 See also notes below Changes in sub r (2)

Changes in sub rule (2)—Clauses (a) (b) and (c) of sub r (2) and sub rule (3) were substituted after the words shall be entitled to a decree in sub r (2) for the following words by Act 30 of 1926 s 4 — for any sum not exceeding the sum mentioned in the summons together with interest at the rate specified (if any) to the date of the decree and such sum for costs as may be prescribed unless the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way and such decree may be executed forthwith

See notes below Interest

Points of difference between summary suit and ordinary suit on negotiable instruments

(1) A plaintiff enforcing a negotiable instrument may either bring a summary suit or he may bring a suit in the ordinary manner The advantage of a summary suit is that the defendant is not as in a suit brought in the ordinary manner entitled as of right to defend the suit The defendant in a summary suit must apply for leave to defend within 10 days from the service of the summons upon him (see Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 159) and such leave will be granted only if the affidavit filed by the defendant discloses such facts as would make it incumbent on the plaintiff to prove consideration or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient for granting leave to the defendant to appear and defend the suit If no leave to defend i granted the plaintiff is entitled to a decree

(2) A summary suit must be brought within one year from the date on which the debt becomes due and payable [Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 5] The period of limitation for a suit brought in the ordinary manner on a negotiable instrument is 3 years Article 5 of the Limitation Act 1908 as it originally stood referred to suits under the summary procedure referred to in section 128 (2) (f) of the Code and this was construed as not including suits under O 37 (x) That article was accordingly amended by Act 30 of 1925 by adding to the entry in the first column the words where the provision of such summary procedure does not exclude the ordinary procedure in such suits and under O 37 of the said Code At the same time the period of limitation was extended from six months to one year

(3) A summary suit can only be brought in the Courts mentioned in r 1

A negotiable instrument means a promissory note bill of exchange or cheque expressed to be payable to a specified person or his order or to the order of a specified person or to the bearer thereof or to a specified person or the bearer thereof (Negotiable Instruments Act 26 of 1881 s 13)

A bill of exchange is an instrument in writing containing an unconditional order signed by the maker directing a certain person to pay a certain sum of money only to or to the order of a certain person or to the bearer of the instrument (Negotiable Instruments Act s 5)

(x) Rabindra v Abdul (19 5) 5? Cal 954 88 I C 400 ( ) A C 781

2 A promissory note is an instrument in writing (not being a bank note or a currency note) containing an unconditional undertaking signed by the maker to pay a certain sum of money only to or to the order of a certain person or to the bearer of the instrument (Negotiable Instruments Act s 4)

Limitation for suit—See notes above Points of difference between summary suit and ordinary suit on negotiable instruments

Limitation for application for leave to defend—The period of limitation for an application for leave to appear and defend is 10 days from the date when the summons is served Limitation Act sch I art 159 The Court has no power to extend the time (y) unless the Court has by a rule framed in that behalf made sec 5 of the Limitation Act applicable to such application as has been done by the High Court of Bombay See App IV below [Rules made by the High Court of Bombay]

Form of summons in a summary suit—The summons in such a suit requires the defendant to obtain leave from the Court within 10 days from the service thereof to appear and defend the suit and within such time to cause an appearance to be entered on his behalf see Appendix B Form No 4

Defendant shall not appear unless he obtains leave—This rule provides that a defendant who has failed to obtain leave to defend cannot be allowed to appear while the hearing is proceeding It is therefore irregular for the Court to pass at his instance an order for the payment of the decretal amount by instalments under O 20 r 11 (1) above (z)

Interest—Sub rule (2) before it was amended by Act 30 of 1926 was in almost the same terms as s 532 of the Code of 1882 The sub rule has now been amended and provision has been made for interest first up to the date of the institution of the suit secondly up to the date of the decree and thirdly after the decree As to interest up to the institution of the suit it is to be calculated in accordance with the provisions of sec 79 or sec 80 as the case may be of the Negotiable Instruments Act 1881 As to interest from the date of the institution of the suit to the date of the decree it may be awarded at the discretion of the Court at the same rate as aforesaid or at such other rate as the Court thinks fit As to interest from and after the date of the decree the same may be awarded under sec 34 of the Code Sec 79 of the Negotiable Instruments Act provides that when interest at the specified rate is expressly payable on a promissory note or bill of exchange interest shall be calculated at the rate specified on the amount of the principal money due thereon from the date of the instrument Sec 80 of that Act was amended by Act 30 of 1926 being the same Act by which sub rule (2) was amended By that section as amended it is provided that when no rate of interest is specified in the instrument interest on the amount due thereon shall notwithstanding any agreement relating to the interest between any parties to the instrument be calculated at the rate of six per centum per annum from the date at which the same ought to have been paid by the parties charged This excludes oral agreements to pay interest (a) O rr

The allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted—These words have been substituted for the explanation to the old section The explanation was inserted to negative the effect of a Calcutta decision (b) But the Explanation was characterized as wholly unintelligible and meaningless by Amir Ali J in the under mentioned case (c) and it has accordingly been replaced by the words cited in the head note The effect of those words is to enable the plaintiff to succeed on his own allegations though the allegations may be of such a nature that if the defendant appear and denied them they would have to be proved by the plaintiff

Suit against firm—The question whether when a summary suit is brought against a firm and service is effected upon a person as an alleged partner and such person appears under protest denying that he was a partner he could appear without obtaining leave under this rule is discussed in the undermentioned case (d)

3 [S 533] (1) The Court shall, upon application by the defendant, give leave to appear and to defend the suit upon affidavits which disclose such facts as would make it incumbent on the holder to prove consideration, or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application

Defendant showing defence on merit to have leave to appear

(2) Leave to defend may be given unconditionally or subject to such terms as to payment into Court giving security, framing and recording issues or otherwise as the Court thinks fit

Alterations in the rule—Under the old sections it was obligatory upon the Court to grant leave to the defendant to appear and defend if he paid into Court the amount claimed by the plaintiff and mentioned in the summons It is no longer so under the present rule The words upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons or which occurred in s 533 after the word suit in the third line have been omitted

Limitation—The application for leave to appear and defend must be made within 10 days from the date of service of the summons on the defendant The date shown in the Sheriff s return as the date of service is the only date to which reference could be made to determine the question of limitation arising on an application under this section (e)

Sub rule (2)—As a rule leave to defend should be given unconditionally if the defendant shows a prima facie case or raises a triable issue Leave should be made conditional if the Court doubts the bona fides of the defendant or thinks the defence is only put in to gain time (f)

Appeal—No appeal is allowed under the Code from an order under this rule It has been recently held by the High Court of Calcutta that an order under this rule directing a defendant to give security as a term on which leave to defend should be

ORDER XXXVIII

Arrest and Attachment before Judgment

Arrest before judgment.

1 [Ss 447, 478] Where defendant may be called upon to furnish security for appearance Where at any stage of a suit, other than a suit of the nature referred to in section 16, clauses (a) to (d) the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise,—

(a) that the defendant, with intent to delay the plaintiff, or to avoid any process of the Court or to

(g) Sukhlal v Eastern B k Ltd (1915) 4 Cal 73 31 I C. 33

obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,— O 38

(i) has absconded or left the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(ii) is about to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(iii) has disposed of or removed from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or

(b) that the defendant is about to leave British India under circumstances affording reasonable probability that the plaintiff will or may thereby be obstructed or delayed in the execution of any decree that may be passed against the defendant in the suit, the Court may issue a warrant to arrest the defendant and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not furnish security for his appearance

Provided that the defendant shall not be arrested if he pays to the officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant any sum specified in the warrant as sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim , and such sum shall be held in deposit by the Court until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court

The proviso to the rule is new

Scope of the Order —Order 21 deals with the arrest of a judgment debtor and the attachment of his property in execution of a decree passed against him The present Order lays down rules for the arrest of a defendant and the attachment of his property before judgment The object of these rules is to secure the plaintiff against any attempt on the part of the defendant to defeat the execution of any decree that may be passed against him

Reasonable probability —Where the defendant is about to leave British India it is not necessary to prove any intent on his part to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him It is enough of the circumstances under which he is about to leave British India afford a reasonable probability that any decree that may be passed against him in the suit will thereby be obstructed or delayed in execution (h) The Court must be satisfied on two points (1) that the plaintiff has a cause of action which is prima facie unimpeachable subject to his proving the allegations in his plaint and (2) that the Court should have reason to believe on adequate materials that unless jurisdiction is exercised there is real danger that the defendant will remove himself from the ambit of the powers of the Court (i)

(h) C t er v Pot ert (18 0) 2 N W P 3 | Mad " 94 I C 1 (6) A M 584
( ) eth Ch t M H v I n Potta (19) 0 |

The suit must be bona fide—In every case where an application is made under this rule the Court must be satisfied that the suit is bona fide Where the plaintiff is indisputably entitled to a part of the relief claimed in the plaint the mere circumstance of the rest of the plaintiff s claim being of a disputable character does not render the suit mala fide (j)

Consequences of obtaining arrest on insufficient grounds—See s 95

Form—For form of warrant of arrest before judgment see App F form no 1

2 [S 479] (1) Where the defendant fails to show such cause the Court shall order him either to deposit in Court money or other property sufficient to answer the claim against him, or to furnish security for his appearance at any time when called upon while the suit is pending and until satisfaction of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit, or make such order as it thinks fit in regard to the sum which may have been paid by the defendant under the proviso to the last preceding rule

Security

(2) Every surety for the appearance of a defendant shall bind himself, in default of such appearance, to pay any sum of money which the defendant may be ordered to pay in the suit

Rateable distribution—Insolvency of defendant—Where money is deposited by the defendant in Court under this rule it is a payment into Court to the general credit of the action and charged with a lien in favour of the plaintiff on the latter obtaining a decree in his favour Where after payment into Court other judgment creditors of the defendant attach the money or the defendant becomes an insolvent the plaintiff on obtaining his decree is entitled to priority over the claims respectively of the attaching creditors and the Official Receiver The reason is that the amount so paid cannot be taken to have been ordered and levied as security for the defendant s appearance (k) See notes to r 5 below Rateable distribution Insolvency of defendant

Money sufficient to answer the claim—In a Calcutta case (l) Rankin C J said When one looks at Order 38 Rule 2 and Form 2 of Appendix F one does not find it contemplated that a defendant on failing to make deposit is to give security for appearance in a particular sum to be fixed by the Judge but that if this security takes the form of a bond by a surety it is to be the whole amount of the decree If the defendant can give the security himself he will give it for the claim by deposit of moneys or property Otherwise he will get some one to go bail for his appearance This is I think the scheme of Order 38

3 [S 480] (1) A surety for the appearance of a defendant may at any time apply to the Court in which he became such surety to be discharged from his obligation

Procedure on application by surety to be discharged

(2) On such application being made, the Court shall summon the defendant to appear or, if it thinks fit, may issue a warrant for his arrest in the first instance

(3) On the appearance of the defendant in pursuance of the summons or warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Court shall direct the surety to be discharged from his obligation, and shall call upon the defendant to find fresh security

Form —For form of summons to defendant see App F form no 3

4 [S 481] Where the defendant fails to comply with any order under rule 2 or rule 3, the Court may commit him to the civil prison until the decision of the suit or, where a decree is passed against the defendant, until the decree has been satisfied

Procedure where defendant fails to furnish security or find fresh security

Provided that no person shall be detained in prison under this rule in any case for a longer period than six months, nor for a longer period than six weeks when the amount or value of the subject matter of the suit does not exceed fifty rupees

Provided also that no person shall be detained in prison under this rule after he has complied with such order

Appeal —An order for arrest is appealable (m) under section 104 (h) though it is not specified under O 43 r 1

Attachment before Judgment

5 [Ss 483, 484] (1) Where, at any stage of a suit, the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise, that the defendant, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,—

Where defendant may be called upon to furnish security for production of property

(m) Syed Hoosein v Chettiar (19 4) 2 Rang 36 84 I. C 70 (4) A R 361

5 (b) is about to remove the whole or any part of his property from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court,

the Court may direct the defendant, within a time to be fixed by it, either to furnish security, in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree, or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security

(2) The plaintiff shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, specify the property required to be attached and the estimated value thereof

(3) The Court may also in the order direct the conditional attachment of the whole or any portion of the property so specified

Alterations in the rule—The words or has quitted the jurisdiction of the Court leaving therein property belonging to him which occurred in the old section after cl (b) of sub r (1) have been omitted

Object of the rule—The main object of an attachment before judgment is to enable the plaintiff to realize the amount of the decree if one is eventually passed from the defendant s property (n)

The Court is satisfied—Vague allegations are insufficient (o) The power to attach is not to be exercised lightly and without clear proof of the mischief aimed at (p)

Is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property—The expression property includes property of every description whether movable or immovable (q) The expression his property refers to the property of the defendant It does not refer to property which is the joint property of the plaintiff and the defendant Thus where A sued B for partnership accounts and applied for an attachment before judgment of the Partnership property on the allegation that B was about to dispose of the same it was held that the case was not one for an attachment before judgment but for the appointment of a receiver under O 40 below (r) A man is not debarred from dealing with his property because a suit is filed against him and an attempt to sell a small portion of a large estate does not warrant the inference that the defendant intends to obstruct or delay execution (s) on the insolvency of the defendant (t) For the same reason the amount deposited is subject to rateable distribution under sec 73 above (u)

Liability of surety—The Rangoon High Court holds that the liability of the surety ceases with the dismissal of the suit and does not continue during the appeal (v) The Bombay High Court makes the liability continue during the appeal (w) If the defendant dies pending the suit and the cause of action survives against his legal representatives and the legal representatives are brought on the record the death of the defendant does not operate as a discharge of the surety (x)

Mortgage suit—An attachment before judgment may be granted in a suit on a mortgage (y)

Principle of sec 64 applies to attachment before judgment—Sec 64 of the Code provides that when property is attached in execution of a decree any private transfer of the property contrary to the attachment shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment The same principle applies to the case of attachment before judgment provided that a decree is ultimately passed for the plaintiff at whose instance the attachment was made This clearly appears from r 9 below which provides that an attachment before judgment shall be removed when the suit is dismissed (z)

Property situated outside jurisdiction—Where the property sought to be attached is outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court the proper course to follow is to transmit the order for attachment to the Court in whose jurisdiction the property is situated (a) See s 136 above

(2) Where the defendant shows such cause or furnishes the required security and the property specified or any portion of it has been attached, the Court shall order the attachment to be withdrawn, or make such other order as it thinks fit

Property specified —That is the property specified by the plaintiff as required by r 5 sub r (2) Such property may be within or without the jurisdiction of the Court The words in sec 483 of the Code of 1882 were property within the jurisdiction of the Court It was accordingly held by the High Courts of Madras and Bombay that the only property that could be attached before judgment was property within the jurisdiction of the Court (c) On the other hand it was held by the High Court of Calcutta and recently also by the Madras High Court that sec 483 was to be read with sec 648 [now s 136] and that the two sections read together enable the Court to attach before judgment property situate beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction (d) The omission of the words within the jurisdiction of the Court clearly shows that the Court may attach property before judgment even though it may be situated beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction (e)

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order under this rule in so far as it directs an attachment The portion of the order which demands security is not appealable (f) See O 43 r 1 cl (q)

Limitation is under article 120 but if the claim is preferred in execution proceedings article 11 applies (g)

Removal of attachment where suit dismissed—The latter part of the rule which requires that the attachment shall be removed when the suit is dismissed is no more than directory Hence even if no order is made withdrawing the attachment the attachment falls to the ground on dismissal of the suit (h) or if the suit abates the attachment dies with it (i) A sues B and obtains an attachment before judgment The suit is dismissed but the Court omits to make an order withdrawing the attachment A then appeals from the decree Pending the appeal B sells the property that was attached before judgment to C Thereafter the suit is decreed on appeal A then applies for execution of the decree by the sale of the property on the footing that the attachment before judgment subsisted and that it was not therefore necessary to re attach it A is not entitled to have the property sold The attachment before judgment came to an end on the dismissal of A s suit though no order was made withdrawing the attachment (j) Thus the reversal of the order dismissing of the suit does not revive the attachment and in this respect the rule differs from that in regard to attachment after judgment For in the case of attachment in execution a decree in a suit under O 21 r 63 setting aside a release from attachment operates to revive the attachment and a private transfer made after release from attachment under O 21 r 60 will be void under sec 64 if the right to attach is subsequently established by suit (k) See notes to O 21 r 60 Effect of order of release

10 [S 489] Attachment before judgment shall not affect the rights, existing prior to the attachment, of persons not parties to the suit, nor bar any person holding a decree against the defendant from applying for the sale of the property under attachment in execution of such decree

Attachment before judgment not to affect rights of strangers nor bar decree holder from applying for sale

Effect of order of adjudication on attachment before judgment—Attachment before judgment does not confer any priority as against the Official Assignee though the plaintiff at whose instance the attachment was made may ultimately obtain a decree in the suit A sues B and attaches B s property before judgment A decree is then passed for A Between the date of the attachment and the date of the decree B s property vests in the Official Assignee under a vesting order The Official Assignee applies to the Court for removal of the attachment on the ground that the property has vested in him A contends that the attachment being prior to the date of the vesting order his claim has a priority over that of the Official Assignee A s contention will not be upheld and the attachment will be removed (l) See notes to s 64 under the head Effect of order of adjudication on attachment on p 213 above

Attachment before judgment not to affect rights of persons not parties to the suit—A and B are members of a joint Hindu family C sues A and obtains an attachment before judgment of A s interest in the joint family property C then obtains a decree against A A dies after the decree On A s death his interest in the property passes by survivorship to B and C is not entitled to have A s share

Property attached before judgment not to be re attached in execution of decree

Scope of the rule—The effect of this rule is merely to do away with the necessity for a re attachment of the property But it does not exempt the plaintiff when a decree follows the attachment from making the usual application for execution under O 21 r 11 (?) (p) This is now made clear by the substitution of the words it shall not be necessary upon on application for execution of such decree to apply for re attachment of the property for the words it shall not be necessary to re attach the property in execution of such decree The rule was applied when the property attached before judgment was attached and brought to sale by another decree holder the judgment debtor paid the amount of the second decree and on the sale being set aside it was held that the attachment before judgment revived and that the first decree holder could in execution bring the property to sale without a fresh attachment (q) The rule does not give the decree holder at whose instance the property was attached before judgment any right to preferential treatment over other decree holders who may have applied for a rateable distribution under s 73 (r) Again if the execution application is dismissed O 21 r 57 applies and the attachment ceases (s)

Whether re attachment in execution operates as a waiver—Re attachment in execution of a decree though no re attachment is necessary under this rule is not of itself a waiver or abandonment of the attachment before judgment The case is different whether there is an express or manifest abandonment (t)

Objection that property attached before judgment is not saleable—The defendant's omission to object to an application for attachment before judgment on the ground that the property is not saleable within the meaning of s 60 does not preclude him from raising that objection when an application is made for execution of the decree passed in the suit (u)

ORDER XXXIX

Temporary Injunctions and Interlocutory Orders

Temporary Injunctions

O 39, r 1

Cases in which temporary injunction may be granted

1 [S 402] Where in any suit it is proved by affidavit or otherwise—

(a) that any property in dispute in a suit is in danger of being wasted, damaged or alienated by any party to the suit, or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree, or

(b) that the defendant threatens, or intends, to remove or dispose of his property with a view to defraud his creditors

the Court may by order grant a temporary injunction to restrain such act, or make such other order for the purpose of staying and preventing the wasting, damaging, alienation, sale, removal or disposition of the property as the Court thinks fit, until the disposal of the suit or until further orders

Temporary and perpetual injunctions—Injunctions are of two kinds temporary and perpetual Temporary injunctions are regulated by rr 1 and 2 of this Order perpetual injunctions are regulated by ss 55 57 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877 A party against whom a perpetual injunction is granted is thereby restrained for ever from doing the act complained of A perpetual injunction can only be granted by final decree made at the hearing and upon the merits of the suit A temporary or interim injunction on the other hand may be granted on an interlocutory application at any stage of the suit The injunction is called temporary for it endures only until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court (w) Thus if A s neighbour commences to build on a plot of land belonging to him a house which if completed, would obstruct the access of light and air over the said plot to the windows of A s house in respect of which A claims an easement he may sue his neighbour for a perpetual sold in execution of the decree (m) But according to the Madras High Court attachment before judgment followed by a decree does operate to defeat the right of survivorship (n)

Attachment before judgment not to bar rights of other decree holders— A institutes a suit against B and obtains an attachment before judgment of *B*s property Subsequently C another creditor of B obtains a decree against B C is entitled to have the property attached and sold in execution of this decree The attachment before judgment does not confer any right upon A to have his decree satisfied in priority to that of C (o)

11 [S 490] Where property is under attachment by virtue of the provisions of this Order and a decree is subsequently passed in favour of the plaintiff, it shall not be necessary upon an application for execution of such decree to apply for a re attachment of the property

Property attached before judgment not to be re attached in execution of decree

Scope of the rule—The effect of this rule is merely to do away with the necessity for a re attachment of the property But it does not exempt the plaintiff when a decree follows the attachment from making the usual application for execution under O 21 r 11 (2) (p) This is now made clear by the substitution of the words it shall not be necessary upon on application for execution of such decree to apply for re attachment of the property for the words it shall not be necessary to re attach the property in execution of such decree The rule was applied when the property attached before judgment was attached and brought to sale by another decree holder the judgment debtor paid the amount of the second decree and on the sale being set aside it was held that the attachment before judgment revived and that the first decree holder could in execution bring the property to sale without a fresh attachment (q) The rule does not give the decree holder at whose instance the property was attached before judgment any right to preferential treatment over other decree holders who may have applied for a rateable distribution under s 73 (r) Again if the execution application is dismissed O 21 r 57 applies and the attachment ceases (s)

Whether re attachment in execution operates as a waiver—Re attachment in execution of a decree though no re attachment is necessary under this rule is not of itself a waiver or abandonment of the attachment before judgment The case is different whether there is an express or manifest abandonment (t)

Objection that property attached before judgment is not saleable—The defendant s omission to object to an application for attachment before judgment on the ground that the property is not saleable within the meaning of s 60 does not preclude him from raising that objection when an application is made for execution of the decree passed in the suit (u)

Effect of temporary injunction—A temporary injunction granted under this rule has not the effect of making a subsequent alienation of the property void Hence if a party against whom a temporary injunction is granted restraining him from alienating the property sells or mortgages the property pending the injunction the sale or mortgage is not void The only penalty A incurs by alienating the property in spite of the injunction is that prescribed by r 2 (3) namely that other property belonging to him may be attached and sold in order to award out of the sale proceeds compensation to the party on whose application the injunction was granted and he may also be detained in the civil prison In this respect a temporary injunction has a different effect from an attachment for it will be seen on referring to s 64 that when property is attached any private transfer of the property contrary to the attachment is void against all claims enforceable under the attachment (f)

Property in dispute in a suit—Note that the property in respect of which an injunction may be granted in the circumstances mentioned in cl (a) of this rule must be property in dispute in the suit and no other (g) for you cannot get an injunction to restrain a man who is alleged to be a debtor from parting with his property (h) Where a plaintiff who is out of possession claims possession the Court will not grant an injunction against the defendant in possession under a claim of right unless the threatened injury will be irreparable and an injunction may be granted as to the user of premises which the plaintiff has leased to the defendant (i) In any event the plaintiff must show a prima facie case in support of the title asserted by him (j) For this reason the Court will as a rule refuse interim injunctions to protect patents of recent origin (k) See notes to r 7 below

An application for an injunction restraining a party to the suit from interfering with the applicant's right to worship in and to have free access to a temple which was the subject matter of the suit pending the disposal of the suit does not fall either under cl (a) or cl (b) of this rule (l)

Disposal of property in fraud of creditors—The threat or intent to remove or dispose of property with a view to defraud creditors must be proved by definite evidence (m)

Property in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of a decree—Certain property attached in execution of a decree obtained by A against B is notified for sale at the instance of A C alleging that the property belongs to him and not to B sues A and B for a declaration of his title to the property and applied for an injunction under this rule to restrain A from bringing the property to sale until the suit is disposed of Has the Court power to grant the injunction under this rule? Yes for the case is one in which the property in dispute in the suit is in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of the decree It is immaterial that the Court in which the suit is brought is different from the Court executing the decree or so long as it has jurisdiction to entertain the suit that it is a Court of lower grade than the Court executing the decree Thus if the Court executing the decree is the Court of a District Judge and the Court in which the suit is brought is the Court of a Subordinate Judge the latter Court though a Court of inferior grade has power under this rule to stay the sale and execution proceedings pending before the District Court (n)

Injunction against a person not a party to the suit—No injunction can be granted under this rule against a person who is not a party to the suit (o)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order refusing as well as from one granting a temporary injunction (p) An appeal also lies from an order purporting to be made under this rule though not warranted by it (q) See O 43 r 1 cl (r)

Revision—No appeal lies to the High Court from an order made by the lower Appellate Court under this rule [s 104 sub s (2)] In two recent cases where a temporary injunction was refused by the lower Appellate Court the High Court of Calcutta without deciding whether it has power to revise the order made an order granting an injunction in the exercise of powers conferred upon High Courts by s. 15 of the Charter Act (r)

Breach—Disobedience of an injunction can be punished by the High Court as a contempt of Court (s)

Power of Chartered High Courts to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in another Court—As regards Chartered High Courts it has been held that the powers of these Courts to grant an injunction are not confined to the terms of rules 1 and 2 of this Order A carrying on business at D sues B in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of D to recover from B a sum of Rs 1 100 as balance due to him in respect of certain goods sent by him from D to B in Calcutta for sale as commission agent B then sues A in the High Court of Calcutta to recover from A a sum of Rs 2 300 as balance due to him in respect of the same transactions and applies to the High Court of Calcutta for a temporary injunction to restrain A from proceeding with the suit in the Court at D until the disposal of the suit in the High Court It is clear that this case is not covered either by r 1 or r 2 of this Order Has the High Court power to grant the injunction ? It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the powers of High Court to grant a temporary injunction are not confined to the terms of rr 1 and 2 and that these Courts have inherent power under their general equity jurisdiction to grant such an injunction independently of the provisions of the Code and also that such power can be exercised by a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court (t) The same view has been recently taken by the High Court of Bombay but the injunction granted in that case was rather peculiar in form namely that A should be restrained from proceeding with the suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at D in such a way as to delay or embarrass the trial of the suit in the High Court (u) The Calcutta decision however are not uniform as to whether this power can be exercised if A is not resident within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court for Sale J held that the power can be exercised even if A did not reside within the limits of the jurisdiction (v) while Fletcher J (w) and Stephen J (x) held that it cannot be exercised unless A resided within those limits The point arose in a Bombay case but it was there held that as A had been served and had appeared in the suit without protest he must be deemed to have submitted to the jurisdiction of the Bombay Court and the Court had therefore power to grant the injunction (y) so also in a Patna case ( )

The High Court of Bombay has also held that it has inherent power to restrain b injunction a defendant in a suit in the High Court from proceeding with a suit filed b him in the Small Causes Court at Bombay referring to the same matter (a)

The next question to consider is whether the power of a Chartered High Court t restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in another Court is confined to sui pending in a Court subordinate thereto or whether it extends to suits pending in any Cou in British India In one of the cases cited above (b) the High Court of Calcutta mad an order restraining a party from proceeding with a suit pending in the Court of th Subordinate Judge of Bareilly a Court subordinate to the High Court of Allahaba In a recent Bombay case Macleod J expressed the opinion that though the Hig Court has power to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in a Cour subordinate to it it has no such power in respect of a suit pending in a Court not sub ordinate to it (c) In support of the above view the learned Judge relied on the pro visions of s 56 cl (b) of the Specific Relief Act 1877 by which it is enacted that a injunction cannot be granted to stay proceedings in a Court not subordinate to tha from which the injunction is sought

A further question that arises in this connection is whether a British Indian Cour has power to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in a Court of a Nati State It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that it has if there was a rea hardship on the party before it or something vexatious or oppressive (d) The Calcutt High Court will grant such an injunction if applied for promptly and before time an trouble has been expended in the foreign suit (e) In England an injunction is grante to stay an action commenced in a foreign jurisdiction only if the applicant proves substantial case of vexation resulting from the identity of proceedings remedies an benefits or from the existence of some motive other than a bona fide desire to determin disputes (f)

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order of a High Court refusing to restrain defendant from prosecuting his suit in another Court Such an order is not appealabl under the Code Nor is it a judgment within the meaning of cl 12 of th Charter (g)

Power of High Court to stay proceedings pending in a subordinat Court—The preceding paragraph refers to the power of a Chartered High Court t restrain a party to a suit pending before it from proceeding with a suit pending in anothe Court The question now to be considered is whether a Chartered High Court ha power in a suit pending before it to issue a prohibition to a subordinate Court in th mufassal from proceeding with a suit pending before the latter Court and if so whethe that power can be exercised by a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the Hig Court It has been held by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court that a Chartere High Court has power to make an order directing a Subordinate Court not to procee further with a suit pending in the latter Court but that such an order appertains to th Appellate and not to the Original Side of the High Court and that it can therefore onl be made by those Judges to whom the Appellate Side work so assigned by Rules mad under sec 13 of the Charter Act that is by a Division Court consisting of two Judge and that it cannot be made by a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court (h) In the case cited above an order was made by Macleod J in a suit pending before him staying a suit pending in the Ratnagiri Court It was assumed by a majority of the Full Bench that such an order was a prohibition to the Ratnagiri Court and not merely to the parties from proceeding with the suit in that Court and it was held that Macleod J had no jurisdiction to make the order On the other hand Macleod J who was one of the Judges constituting the Full Bench declined to read his order as a direct prohibition to the Ratnagiri Court and held that a single Judge sitting on the Original Side was competent to restrain the parties in a suit before him from proceeding with a suit in a Subordinate Judge s Court in the mufassal and so in effect stay the proceedings within the meaning of sec 56 cl (b) referred to above As to transfer of suits from Presidency Small Cause Courts to High Court see notes to cl 13 of the Letters Patent

This rule does not apply to probate proceedings—An injunction cannot be granted under this rule in a probate proceeding The reason is that the only question in controversy in such a proceeding is that of representation of the estate of the deceased there is no question of title in such a proceeding and it cannot therefore be said that there is any property in dispute in such a proceeding as contemplated by this rule If the Court is satisfied that the estate of the deceased is in danger of being wasted or wrongfully alienated it may appoint an administrator pendente lite and it may also make an order under r 7 below, but it cannot grant an injunction under this rule (i)

Form—For form of temporary injunction see App F form no 8

2 [S 493] (1) In any suit for restraining the defendant from committing a breach of contract or other injury of any kind, whether compensation is claimed in the suit or not, the plaintiff may, at any time after the commencement of the suit, and either before or after judgment, apply to the Court for a temporary injunction to restrain the defendant from committing the breach of contract or injury complained of, or any breach of contract or injury of a like kind arising out of the same contract or relating to the same property or right

Injunction to restrain repetition or continuance of breach

(2) The Court may by order grant such injunction, on such terms as to the duration of the injunction, keeping an account, giving security, or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit

(3) In case of disobedience, or of breach of any such terms, the Court granting an injunction may order the property of the person guilty of such disobedience or breach to be attached, and may also order such person to be detained in the civil prison for a term not exceeding six months, unless in the meantime the Court directs his release

(4) No attachment under this rule shall remain in force for more than one year, at the end of which time if the disobedience or breach continues, the property attached may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award such compensation as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance, if any, to the party entitled thereto

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words of any kind after the word injury in sub r (1) are new See notes below under the head Scope of the rule

2 The words unless in the meantime the Court directs his release in sub r (3) are also new See in this connection the undermentioned case (j)

Scope of the rule—Rule 1 enables the Court to grant temporary injunctions in the cases specified in cls (a) and (b) thereof The present rule enables the Court to grant temporary injunctions to restrain a defendant from committing the breach of a contract or other injury of any kind The words of any kind are new They have been added to supersede an Allahabad decision where it was held that the words other injury in the old section did not include acts of trespass upon property (k) Such acts are now within this rule In a Bombay case a lessee sought to execute a decree to evict his sub lessee But at the date of the decree the term of the head lease had expired and the head lessor sued to restrain the lessee from taking pos ession Macleod C J held that neither rule 1 nor rule 2 applied (l) A Court hearing an election petition under rules framed under the Madras District Municipalities Act cannot grant a temporary injunction restraining the candidate from taking his seat (m)

Principles governing temporary injunction to restrain breach of contract—Temporary injunctions to restrain the breach of a contract are regulated by the present rule Perpetual injunctions to restrain the breach of a contract are regulated by the Specific Relief Act 1877 s 56 cl. (f) and s 57 Section 56 cl (f) of the Specific Relief Act provides that a perpetual injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced Now the performance of a contract is not specifically enforced where damages would afford adequate relief Hence no injunction can be granted where damages afford adequate relief The very first principle of injunction law is that you do not obtain injunctions for actionable wrongs [or for breach of contracts] for which damages are the proper remedy (n) In the Bombay case of Nusserwanji v Gordon (o) Sir Charles Sargent said that the issue of a temporary injunction is governed by the same principles as the granting of a permanent injunction at the trial of a case Referring to these observations Sir Arnold White in a Madras case said Now having regard to the fact that the law with regard to the granting of a perpetual injunction is to be found in the Specific Relief Act and is laid down with great precision and that the law with regard to the granting of a temporary injunction is to be found in the Code of Civil Procedure and is declared to be a matter for discretion if it were necessary to consider the point I am not sure I should be prepared to go quite so far as Sir Charles Sargent (p) However that may be the following two rules seem to govern all cases on the subject now under consideration —

1 If a suit is brought for specific performance of a contract and for an injunction to restrain the defendant from committing a breach of the contract and the plaintiff applies for a temporary injunction to prevent the breach of the contract until the suit is disposed of the Court will decline to grant a temporary injunction if the plaint and the affidavits filed by the parties show on the face of them that the case is not one for a perpetual injunction or for specific performance The refusal of the application for a temporary injunction in (1) Bhikaji v Bapu Saju (q) (2) Haji Abdul v Haji Abdul (r) (3) Nusserwanji v Gordon (s) (4) Assur v Ratanbai (t) and (5) In the matter of Ganpat Narain (u) may be referred to this rule In the first case the suit was by an association of artisans consisting of 57 members for an injunction against one of them to restrain him from committing the breach of a contract which provided that all the members of the association should bring the business of working and carving in wood into one shop and should divide the profits among them and that no member should take any order on his own account The plaintiffs applied for a temporary injunction against the defendant to prevent the breach of the contract until the disposal of the suit but the injunction was refused for the agreement being on the face of it illegal (as the association though it consisted of 57 members was not registered as a Company) no specific performance or injunction could be granted. In the second case the suit was for a perpetual injunction to prevent the breach of an agreement for a charter party The Court refused to grant a temporary injunction to restrain the breach on the ground that a perpetual injunction could not be granted to restrain the breach of such an agreement though a perpetual injunction might be granted to prevent the breach of an actually completed charter party In the third case an application for a temporary injunction was made by the agents of a company as plaintiffs to restrain the company from employing a firm of solicitors in contravention of an agreement between the company and the agents where by the plaintiff s firm were appointed agents of the company for 25 years and the agents were empowered to employ solicitors for the company during that period The Court refused the application on the ground that since a perpetual injunction could not be granted to restrain the company from employing persons other than the plaintiff s firm as agents of the company a temporary injunction should not be granted to restrain the company from employing solicitors other than those of the plaintiff s choice In the fourth case the Court refused to grant a temporary injunction to restrain a Hindu widow from adopting a son in breach of an agreement entered into by her not to adopt a son The order of refusal was based on the ground that the Court could not grant a perpetual injunction to prevent the breach of such a contract In the last of the cases cited above the parties were Hindus and the suit was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for specific performance of a contract whereby the defendant agreed to give his minor daughter in marriage to the plaintiff The plaintiff applied for an interim injunction to restrain the defendant from giving away the girl in marriage to another person but the application was refused on the ground that the contract was not one of which specific performance could be enforced or the breach of which could be restrained by a perpetual injunction

2 The converse of rule (1) is not always true that is the Court will not grant a temporary injunction before the hearing in every case where a perpetual injunction might fitly be granted at the hearing for to justify a temporary injunction not only must the case be such that an injunction is the appropriate relief but there must be the further ingredient that unless the defendant is restrained forthwith by a temporary injunction irreparable injury or inconvenience may result to the plaintiff before the suit is decided upon its merits (v) But if a case is a proper one for specific performance and irreparable injury is likely to be caused to the plaintiff unless the breach of the contract is forthwith restrained the Court will grant a temporary injunction to restrain the breach of the contract. Thus where A sued B for specific performance of a contract whereby in consideration of A having advanced money to B to working certain mica mines B had agreed to deliver all the mica produced from the mines to A and not to deliver any portion thereof to any other person and also sued for an injunction to restrain the breach of this agreement and in the suit applied for a temporary injunction to restrain B from delivering any portion of the mica to another firm to whom B had arranged in breach of his contract to consign a portion the Court held that the case was a fit one for a temporary injunction and the injunction was granted (w) But if the existence of the contract itself is denied no temporary injunction can be granted (x)

Sub rule (3)—The powers conferred by this sub rule can only be exercised if the Court is set in motion by a party who deems himself aggrieved hence where a District Court committed a defendant to jail of its own motion for disobeying an injunction of the Court it was held that the order of committal was ultra vires Note however that a High Court has inherent power to commit a defaulting party for contempt hence a High Court can commit a defendant to jail of its own motion for disobeying an injunction issued by such Court (y) See sec 151 above

Under sub r (3) the Court can in its discretion order either arrest or attachment of property it is not bound in the first instance to make an order of attachment and then order impri onment ( ) There is no foundation for the proposition that the Court can only make an order of imprisonment after an order of attachment Persons who abet disobedience of an injunction cannot be punished under this rule (a)

If the application to commit was made while the suit was pending the fact that the order on the application was made after the suit was dismissed does not affect the powers of the Court to take action for disobedience to the injunction (b)

A Court to which the business of the Court granting the injunction is transferred can exercise powers of punishment under this sub rule (c)

Temporary mandatory injunction—The Courts in England have the power to grant mandatory injunctions on interlocutory applications (d) And so have Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction (e) The same power is possessed by Courts in the mofussil (f)

Appeal—An appeal lies under O 43 r 1 (r) from an order declining to order arrest or attachment of property for disobedience of an interlocutory injunction granted under this rule and the Appellate Court may on appeal pass the order which the lower Court should have passed (g)

Before granting injunction Court to direct notice to opposite party

Appointment of Receivers

Appointment of Receivers

1 [S 503] (1) Where it appears to the Court to be just and convenient, the Court may by order—

(a) appoint a receiver of any property, whether before or after decree,

(b) remove any person from the possession or custody of the property,

(d) confer upon the receiver all such powers as to bringing and defending suits and for the realisation, management, protection, preservation and improvement of the property, the collection of the rents and profits thereof, the application and disposal of such rents and profits, and the execution of documents as the owner himself has, or such of those powers as the Court thinks fit

Alterations in the rule—

1 The words to be just and convenient have been substituted for the words to be necessary for the realization preservation or better custody or management of any property movable or immovable the subject of a suit or attachment The effect of this amendment is that the Court may now appoint a receiver not only in the particular cases specified in the old section but in every case in which it appears to the Court to be just and convenient to do so Thus a receiver may be appointed in a suit for partition (j) See notes below under the head Just and convenient As to execution of decrees by appointment of a receiver see s 51 cl (d)

2 The words whether before or after decree in cl (a) are new They give effect to the undermentioned decision under the old section (k)

3 The words subject matter of a suit which occurred in the corresponding s. 503 of the Code of 1882 have been omitted See notes below under the head Receiver in proceedings other than a suit

Receiver in proceedings other than a suit—Sec 503 of the Code of 1882 contained the words subject matter of a suit The result was that under that section a receiver could only be appointed in a suit Those words have been omitted in the present rule so that a receiver may now be appointed even in proceedings other than a suit (l) A Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver in proceedings under the Succession Certificates Act (m) or in proceedings for the removal of a trustee under s 74 of the Trusts Act (n) but may appoint a receiver in a testamentary suit (o) or proceeding under the Guardian and Wards Act (p) If no suit or litigious proceeding is pending with reference to the property the Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of it A receiver therefore cannot be appointed after the suit is compromised (q)

Courts empowered under this order—Under the Code of 1882 (s 503) a receiver could only be appointed by High Courts and District Courts and not by the Courts subordinate to District Courts This bar has been now removed by the omission of s 503 A receiver may now be appointed by Subordinate Judges also

A receiver is an officer of the Court— The object and purpose of the appointment of a receiver may generally be stated to be the preservation of the subject matter of the litigation pending a judicial determination of the rights of the parties thereto (r) The receiver is appointed for the benefit of all concerned he is the representative of the Court and of all parties interested in the litigation wherein he is appointed (s) The appointment [of a receiver] is the act of the Court and made in the interests of justice [A receiver] is an officer or representative of the Court and subject to its orders His possession is the possession of the Court by its receiver and the tenants in possession when he is appointed to receive rents and profits of immovable property become virtually tenants pro hac vice of the Court their landlord His possession is the possession of all the parties to the proceedings according to their titles The moneys in his hands are in custodia legis for the person who can make a title to them (t)

, r 1 Legal consequences arising from the fact that a receiver is an officer of the Court —

(1) Attachment —Property in the hands of a receiver cannot be attached without the leave of the Court first obtained. Thus if a receiver is appointed of certain property in a suit between A and B and C obtains a decree against A or B C cannot in execution of his decree attach the property in the hands of the receiver without the leave of the Court such an attachment is an interference with the Court s possession through its officer the receiver (u) But if a receiver is appointed of certain property in a suit between A and B and the property was mortgaged by A to C before the receiver was appointed and C obtains a decree for sale of the mortgaged property C may brin the property to sale though it may be in the hands of the receiver without the leave of the Court The reason is that no attachment is necessary before sale in the case of a mortgage-decree and no attachment being necessary there cannot be any interference with the possession of the receiver (v)

(2) Suit by or against receiver Leave of Court —A receiver cannot sue or be sued except with the leave of the Court by which he was appointed receiver (w) A party feeling aggrieved by the conduct of a receiver may seek redress against him in the very suit in which he was appointed receiver or he may bring a separate suit against the receiver in which case he must obtain the leave of the Court (x) The application in the suit is for an examination pro interesse suo (y) The Court will dispose of the matter summarily in simple cases ( ) and if the applicant has shown diligence (a) But if questions of title are involved the Court will authorize a suit to be brought against the receiver (b) No appeal lies against an order granting leave to sue a receiver (c) There is no statutory provision which requires a party to take the leave of the Court to sue a receiver The rule has come down to us as a part of the rules of equity binding upon all Courts of Justice in this country It is a rule based upon public policy which requires that when the Court has assumed possession of a property in the interest of the litigants before it the authority of the Court is not to be obstructed by suits designed to disturb the possession of the Court The institution of such suits is in the eye of the law a contempt of the authority of the Court and therefore the party contemplating such a suit is required to take the leave of the Court so as to absolve himself from that charge The grant of such leave is made not in exercise of any power conferred by statute but in exercise of the inherent power which every Court possesses to prevent acts which constitute or are akin to an abuse of its authority (d) By giving leave to sue its receiver the Court does not relinquish possession of the property to the Court where the claim of the third party is asserted (e) The Court in which the suit is filed has no jurisdiction to issue an injunction restraining the receiver from dealing with the property (f) nor can the third party if he obtains a decree enforce it in execution His proper course is to apply to the Court which appointed the receiver to direct the receiver to act in accordance with the decree (g) In Pramatha Nath v Khetra Nath (h) Bodilly J held that the leave of the Court to sue a receiver was a condition precedent to the right to sue and that if the leave was not obtained before suit it could not be granted subsequent to the

It may here be noted that a receiver is not a necessary party to a suit for a [illegible]tion of title and possession of property of which he is appointed receiver (m) nor [illegible] be made a party to a proceeding under sec 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code [illegible] in his capacity of receiver (n) There is no right of action against a Tahsildar or [illegible] appointed by a receiver (o)

(3) Debts incurred by receiver in business —If a receiver is appointed of the [illegible] of a decea ed person with authority to continue the business carried on by the d[illegible] and in the course of such bu iness debts are properly incurred by the receiver the [illegible] to whom the debts have become due may proceed not only against the [illegible] personally but also against the estate of the decea ed for the recovery of their d[illegible] they are entitled to payment of their debts in priority to other creditors [illegible] estate The right to proceed against the estate is founded on the just and [illegible] principle that as the acts of a receiver acting within his authority are the [illegible] Court the estate cannot be permitted to enjoy the benefits of those acts with[illegible] held liable for the obligations ari ing out of them (p)

(4) Loss occasioned by receiver s default —If any loss is occasioned to the [illegible] by the wilful default or gross negligence of the receiver the loss is to be borne [illegible] party on who e application the receiver was appointed (for a receiver is n t [illegible] such party) but by the estate in the first instance The party damnified by t[illegible] then proceed again t the receiver (q) See r 4 below

O. 40, r 1 of Criminal Procedure to interfere with him in respect of his possession of the property without the sanction of the Court his possession being the possession of the Court (t). It may here be noted that a Civil Court has no power under this rule to appoint a receiver in supersession of a receiver appointed by a Magistrate under sec 146 cl. (°) of the Criminal Procedure Code (u) See sub rule (2)

(8) Prosecution of receiver —A receiver appointed by the High Court who has under its orders taken possession of property cannot be prosecuted for criminal breach of trust in respect thereof without first obtaining the leave of the Court (v)

(9) Attorney of party —The attorney of a party should not be appointed receiver as such an appointment interrupts the arrangement made by the party for his defence in the suit (w)

' Just and convenient. —These words have been taken from the Judicature Act 1873 s 25 sub s (8) The words in that Act are just or convenient but they have been constructed to mean just and convenient (x) The words just and convenient do not mean that the Court is to appoint a receiver simply because the Court thinks it convenient they mean that the Court should appoint a receiver for the protection of rights or for the prevention of injury according to legal principles (y) The order is discretionary and the discretion must be exercised in accordance with the principles on which judicial discretion is exercised (z) Hence the Court should not appoint a receiver of property in the possession of the defendant who claims it by a legal title unless the plaintiff can show prima facie that he has a strong case and a good title to the property (a) The Court must consider whether special interference with the possession of a defendant is required there being a well founded fear that the property in question will be dissipated or that other irreparable mischief may be done unless the Court gives its protection (b) On the other hand where property is shown to be in medio i e in the enjoyment of no one the Court can hardly do wrong in appointing a receiver for it is the common interest of all parties to prevent a scramble (c) The mere circumstance that the appointment of a receiver will do no harm to any one is no ground for appointing a receiver (d) and a receiver cannot be appointed merely for the purpose of ascertaining the income of an estate in order to fix the amount of maintenance to be paid out of it (e) See notes above Alterations in the rule No 1 and notes below Cases in which a receiver may be appointed" See also Specific Relief Act 1 of 1877 s 44

Which Court may appoint a receiver.—The power to appoint a receiver rests only with the Court trying the suit in which it is sought to appoint a receiver. Hence a District Judge has no power to appoint a receiver of property which is the subject of a suit in another Court even though subordinate to his own (f) A Court should not appoint a receiver when another receiver has been appointed of the same property by another Court in another suit for such a procedure will lead to a conflict of jurisdiction (g)

Whether a receiver can be appointed when an executor is in possession—In England the rule is that the Court will not appoint a receiver against an executor unless gross misconduct is shown (h) and the same rule it is submitted applies to the case of an executor of the will of a person subject to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act This rule however does not apply in the case of an executor of the will of a Mahomedan The reason is that while in the case of persons governed by the Succession Act a testator can dispose of the whole of his property by his will a Mahomedan testator cannot dispose of more than one third of the property by his will (i)

Where a receiver is appointed of the estate of a deceased person and the estate is being administered by the Court the Court may authorize the receiver to pay out of the estate in his hands pressing claims against the estate (j)

Company—The Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of a company (k) If it is necessary to protect the assets recourse must be had to the provisions of the Companies Acts

Reference to arbitration—The Court has power to appoint a receiver even after a suit has been referred to arbitration (l)

Temporary injunctions and appointment of receiver—The distinction between a case in which a temporary injunction may be granted and a case in which a receiver may be appointed is that while in either case it must be shown that the property should be preserved from waste or alienation in the former case it is sufficient if it be shown that the plaintiff in the suit has a fair question to raise as to the existence of the right alleged while in the latter case a good prima facie title to the property over which the receiver is sought to be appointed has to be made out (m)

When receiver may be appointed—The appointment of a receiver is in the discretion of the Court The power to appoint a receiver is not to be exercised as a matter of course or for the reason that it can do no harm to appoint one A receiver should not be appointed in supersession of a bona fide possessor of the property in dispute unless there is some substantial ground for interference (n) The mere fact that a plaintiff in his plaint makes violent and wholesale charges of waste is no ground for the appointment of a receiver (o) The Court will not in a suit against trustees for the possession of land and for mesne profits appoint a receiver merely because the trustee is a poor man from whom mesne profits if awarded could not be recovered unless it is alleged and shown that he was wasting the property (p) The removal however under suspicious circumstances of a large amount of property by the defendant during the pendency of a suit in which the question of title to that property would be determined is a good ground for the appointment of a receiver (q) The anxiety of a life tenant to transfer lands to a stranger is a danger to the interests of the reversioner and it is a matter to be taken into consideration on an application for the appointment of a receiver (r)

Joint Hindu family—The Court will not as a general rule appoint a receiver in a partition suit between members of a joint Hindu family especially where the family property consists of immovable property To appoint a receiver in such a case special circumstances must be proved (s) A receiver may be appointed in a suit for partition

1 of joint Hindu family property where there is a prima facie case of misappropriation by the manager of the family (t)

Mortgage suits —In a mortgagee s suit for foreclosure or sale where the mortgagee is entitled to enter into possession on default in payment of the mortgage moneys the mortgagee is entitled prima facie to an order for the appointment of a receiver (u) The mortgagee in possession also is entitled to the appointment of a receiver notwithstanding that he has been paid all his interest and costs out of rents received by him while in possession and that he has surplus rent in his hands It was so held in Mason v Westoby (v) In that case Bacon V C said It is said that the appointment of a receiver will cause great expense to the mortgagors but that cannot be helped The mortgagee acting in accordance with her strict right enters into possession because she cannot get her interest As mortgagee in possession she becomes subject to heavy responsibilities and from those responsibilities she is entitled to be relieved by the appointment of a receiver She has however while in possession received more than the amount of her interest and costs but that surplus she must pay to the receiver The appointment of a receiver will be made almost as a matter of course in the case of an English mortgage on an application of the mortgagee if the interest payable under the mortgage is in arrears and the mortgagee is entitled to sell the property for default in payment of interest (u) A receiver may also be appointed at the instance of an equitable mortgagee (x)

Testamentary suit —A receiver may be appointed in a testamentary suit (y)

Receiver in charity suits —A receiver may be appointed in a suit by the Advocate General under sec 92 of the Code for the administration of public religious or charitable trusts (z)

Partnership suits —In considering the question of the appointment of a receiver in partnership suits a distinction has to be drawn between cases in which the contest is between partners and cases in which the contest is between partners on the one hand and non partners on the other

In the first class of cases that is where one partner seeks to have a receiver appointed against his co partners it is necessary to distinguish cases in which the partnership has already been dissolved from those in which the partnership is still subsisting If the partnership is already dissolved the Court usually appoints a receiver almost as a matter of course (a) The jurisdiction of the Court to appoint a receiver is not ousted by an arbitration clause providing for a reference to arbitration of all matters in dispute between the parties (b) But if the partnership is still subsisting no receiver will be appointed unless some special grounds for the appointment can be shown There must be fraud or gross misconduct of some kind (c) or wilful denial of the complaining partners rights (d) or persistence under cover of right in conduct endangering the assets (e)

In the second class of cases that is where the contest is between partners on the one hand and non partners on the other e g legal representatives of a late partner a receiver will not be granted against a member of the firm at the instance of the legal representatives unless some special grounds for the interference of the Court can be established But it is a matter of course to appoint a receiver where such appointment is sought by a partner against the legal representatives of his late co partner or where all the partners are dead and an action is pending between their representatives (f)

Decree for maintenance —Where a decree is passed for maintenance and a charge is created on a specified property to secure payment of the allowance it is desirable in order to facilitate execution and to avoid further litigation to appoint a receiver by the decree itself with directions in case of default of payment to take possession of the property and sell the same and out of the sale proceeds to pay the allowance (g)

Criminal Procedure Code sec 145 —The fact that there exists in respect of any immovable property an order of a Magistrate passed under sec 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is no bar to the exercise by a Civil Court of the power conferred on it by this rule to appoint a receiver in respect of the same property (h) It is however different where a receiver is appointed by a Magistrate under sec 146 cl (2) of that Code See note above Legal consequences arising from the fact that a receiver is an officer of the Court no (7)

Receiver and administrator pendente lite —A receiver may be appointed under this rule in a testamentary suit governed by the Probate Act 1881 (i) The Chancery Division of the High Court of England may appoint a receiver of the estate of the deceased though proceedings have been commenced by the defendant in the Probate Court and though the defendant is prepared to apply at once in that Court for an administrator pendente lite (j)

Remove any person —This refers to a person other than the receiver (k) The Court should inquire into any claims made by persons not parties to the suit before appointing a receiver (l) A usufructuary mortgagee who has obtained a decree for sale is not entitled to possession as against the receiver on an agreement made with the mortgagor (m)

Where security not furnished by receiver —Where the order whereby a person is appointed receiver requires him to give security so that the order is conditional upon his giving the security he cannot be receiver until the security is given (n) It is otherwise where the order is not conditional but absolute in its terms in such a case the order takes effect immediately it is made (o)

Receiver of future earnings of judgment debtor —The Court has no jurisdiction to enforce satisfaction of a judgment debt by appointing a receiver of the future earning of the judgment debtor Unless a man has assigned or charged his future earnings or has made a sum payable out of them they cannot be prospectively impounded by any of his creditors by any ordinary process of execution, whether legal or equitable (p) Similarly a receiver cannot be appointed of future allowances of maintenance payable to a judgment debtor (q) See notes to sec 51 above

1 Receiver in execution proceedings—See notes to sec 51 See also notes to O 21 r 46 Procedure where garnishee denies debt

Receiver after decree—A receiver may be appointed even after a decree has been passed (r) See cl (a) of the rule

All such powers as to bringing and defending suits as the owner himself has—These words are wide enough to empower the Court to authorise a receiver to sue in his own name hence where a receiver is authorised in that behalf he may sue in his own name (s) And it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that where a receiver is appointed with full powers under sub r (1) cl (d) that is with such powers as to bringing suits as the owner him elf has the receiver is entitled to sue in his own name though not expressly authorized to do so (t) As regards suits for possession it is to be noted that though ordinarily a suit to recover possession of property can only be brought by him in whom there is a present title to it yet if a receiver is appointed under this rule with such powers as to bringing suits as the owner himself has he is entitled to sue for possession (u) But a receiver takes such title as the owner himself had in the property and he cannot therefore sue for possession in a case in which the owner himself could not have done so (v) A receiver empowered to collect outstandings and do all things necessary for the realization and preservation of the assets of a firm has no power to mortgage the property of the firm (w) But a receiver of mortgaged properties on whom has been conferred the same powers of realization management and protection as the owners themselves have has a discretionary power of sale (x)

Realization of property—After the dismissal of a suit in which a receiver has been appointed the Court has no power to give the receiver any fresh power as for instance liberty to sell (y)

'All such powers as to the execution of documents which the owner himself has—This includes a power to the receiver to execute a conveyance including the share of a minor defendant (z)

Suit by or against receiver—leave of Court—See notes above under the same head

Contempt proceedings—Where a receiver is appointed of property the subject of a suit and the property is forcibly taken possession of by any person not only the parties interested in the property but also the receiver may proceed against such person for contempt There is nothing to prevent the receiver from himself applying for a rule for contempt (a)

Appointment of new receiver in place of old receiver—Where a receiver appointed under this rule institutes civil proceedings and is then replaced by another receiver it is necessary that the new receiver should be made a party to the proceedings (b)

Continuance of office—A Court appointing a receiver may by its order provide that the office should continue permanently after the decree when such continuance is necessary or for so long as it may be so (c)

O. 40, r 1 appoint includes a power to remove (q) but it is difficult to see what this principle has to do with the right of appeal

It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (r) Bombay (s) and Allahabad (t) that an order that a receiver be appointed without appointing anybody by name as receiver and adjourning the application to a later date for nominating a receiver is not an order within the meaning of this rule and it is not therefore appealable under O 43, r 1 cl (s) The contrary has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (u), and by the Patna High Court (v) No appeal lies from an order merely expressing an intention of appointing a receiver and calling upon parties to suggest names (w)

A receiver is appointed of *B*s property in a suit by A against B C claims to be in possession of the property under an agreement between him and B and he objects to the appointment of the receiver but the objection is dismissed The order comes within this rule though C is not a party to the suit and is therefore appealable (x). But a stranger who is not in possession has no right to object and no appeal lies from an order dismissing his objection (y) An order appointing a receiver pending an application for the appointment of a common manager under s 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 8 of 1885 also falls under this rule and is therefore appealable under O 43 r 1 cl. (s) (z).

Letters Patent appeal —An order directing a receiver in a suit to advance money to a guardian ad litem to enable him to conduct the defence on behalf of a minor defendant is not a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and no appeal lies therefrom (a) An order appointing a receiver is a judgment under the letters patent and appealable (b)

Revision —If a Court appoints a receiver in a case in which it has no jurisdiction to do so as for instance in a proceeding under the Succession Certificate Act 1889 the High Court may interfere in revision (c)

A receiver cannot delegate his powers to others —Where a receiver is appointed to collect the rents of an estate it is his duty to collect the rents himself or where the rents are collected by a clerk on his behalf to receive the rents and to keep proper accounts thereof If the rents received by the clerk are misappropriated the receiver is bound to make good the loss He is not justified in delegating or entrusting to another a duty entrusted to him by the Court (d)

Summary jurisdiction —Where the matter complained of rests on an agreement which has not been carried out the Court may interfere to prevent its receiver giving effect to the proposed agreement and this it may do on the mere application of a party to the suit (e) But where the matter has passed out of the stage of agreement as where a lease has already been granted by the receiver no summary order could be passed to set aside the lease but the party aggrieved must proceed by suit against the receiver (f)

When receiver should be joined as a party to a suit —It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that where the property in the hands of a receiver is intended

ORDER XLI

Appeals from Original Decrees

1 [S 541] (1) Every appeal shall be preferred in the form of a memorandum signed by the appellant or his pleader and presented to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf The memorandum shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed from and (unless the appellate Court dispenses therewith) of the judgment on which it is founded O 41,

Form of appeal What to accompany memorandum

(2) The memorandum shall set forth concisely and under distinct heads, the grounds of objection to the decree appealed from without any argument or narrative, and such grounds shall be numbered consecutively

Contents of memorandum

Appeal from original decree—See s 96 and notes thereto

Defective vakalatnama—A memorandum of appeal cannot be said to be properly presented if it is presented by a vakil whose name does not appear in the vakalatnama even though the omission is due to an oversight In such case the appeal should be dismissed though the objection to its validity is taken at a very late stage of the proceedings (u) A power of attorney expressly authorising presentation of the appeal is sufficient (x)

Signed—If the memorandum of appeal is signed it matters not that the grounds of appeal are set forth in an unsigned annexure (y)

Memorandum shall be accompanied by a copy of decree and judgment—O 41 r 1 makes it an inflexible rule that in the case of appeals from ... the memorandum of appeal shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree The Court ...

r 1 cannot dispense with it for the rule is imperative ( ) A copy merely of the judgment is not sufficient even if the decree has not yet been drawn up (a) nor will a copy of a translation suffice (b) If a copy of the decree is filed after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the appeal the appeal is time barred this is because there is no valid appeal until a copy of the decree is filed The same rule applies where an appeal is preferred from an order in such a case the memorandum should be accompanied by a copy of the order (c) see O 43 r 2 When the judgment incorporated by reference an interlocutory order the omission to annex copy of that order was excused (d) Though the Court cannot dispense with a copy of the decree it may dispense with a copy of the judgment Where a copy of the judgment is not dispensed with all that is necessary to file is a copy of the final judgment (e)

Grounds of objection —The grounds of objection must be such as arise from the pleadings and evidence and are necessary for the decision of the case (f) The appellant must not be allowed in appeal to make out a new case (g) or a case incon istent with the case set up by him in the lower Court (h) Nor can an appellate Court make an entirely new case for a plaintiff which he never made for himself at any period of the trial (i)

In drawing up the grounds of appeal it should be remembered that no subsequent event such as a devolution of interest can affect the decision of a question as it stood at the time the decree appealed against was pronounced. To give effect to these some supplementary proceeding and not an appeal is the right procedure (j)

Grounds of objection which may be taken for the first time in appeal.— There are certain points which though not taken in the lower Court may yet be taken for the first time before the appellate Court Thus an objection to the jurisdiction of the lower Court to entertain the suit may be taken for the first time in appeal (k) Similarly a point of law arising out of admitted facts and which does not take the opponent by surpri e (l) or an objection on the score of a defect fatal to the suit may be taken for the first time in appeal e g that a person interested in the mortgaged property was not joined as a party to the suit as required by O 34 r 1 (m) or that a notice required to be given by a zamindar to a putnidar under s 8 of Regulation 18 of 1819 was defective in some essential particulars (n) But the defect in each case must appear on the face of the proceedings otherwi e the objection will not be entertained (o) Similarly the plea of res judicata may be taken for the first time in appeal provided it can be decided upon the record before the Court (p) But a plea of adverse possession may not be raised for the first time in appeal (q) And where in a suit for a declaratory decree it was contended for the first time in appeal that the Court had on the facts of the particular case no power to pass a declaratory decree it was held that the objection should not be entertained Such an objection does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court (r)

Limitation —As to the period of limitation for appeals see Limitation Act 1908 ch I arts 151 152 and 156 S 5 of the Limitation Act provides that an appeal may be admitted after the period of limitation if the appellant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal within such period S 12 of the same Act provides that in computing the period of limitation provided for an appeal the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree appealed from should be excluded An appeal under s 169 of the Indian Companies Act 1882 to which the Code of Civil Procedure applies was filed as a joint appeal under the mistaken impression that the cases had been consolidated but the Lahore High Court on the ground that the mistake was one of form allowed the second appellant to put in a separate appeal (s) See notes to r 3 below Leave of Court Limitation

When appellat Court may not interfere with findings of fact —Two conflicting view points have to be reconciled namely on the one hand the undoubted duty of the Court of appeal to review the recorded evidence and to draw its own inferences and conclusions and on the other hand the unquestioned weight which must be attached to the opinion of the Judge of the primary Court who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses and noting their looks and manner (t) Generally speaking it is undesirable for an appellate Court to interfere with the findings of fact of the trial judge who sees and hears the witnesses and has an opportunity of noting their demeanour especially in cases where the issue is simple and depends on the credit which attaches to one or other of conflicting witnesses The view of the trial judge as to the credibility of witnesses should not be put aside on a mere calculation of probabilities by the appellate Court (u)

Consolidation of appeals —The Code contains no provisions for consolidating suits or appeals Whether or not the Court has jurisdiction to consolidate appeals it will not do so unless before the hearing of the suits consolidation is asked for of the suits and unless the evidence given in the two cases is common to both of them (v) See notes to s 151 Inherent powers of Court Cl (a)

Form —For form of memorandum of appeal see App G form no 1

2 [S 542] The appellant shall not, except by leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal, but the appellate Court, in deciding the appeal, shall not be confined to the grounds of objection set forth in the memorandum of appeal or taken by leave of the Court under this rule

r 2 his had a sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground

Leave of Court Limitation—The appellant cannot except by leave of the Court urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal Thus if the plea that the suit is barred by limitation is not taken in the memorandum of appeal the appellant cannot urge that plea in appeal without the leave of the Court The appellate Court may grant leave but it is not bound to do so Notice to the respondent does not dispense with the necessity for leave of the Court (w) But the leave should not be refused if the point of limitation arises on the face of the plaint (x) Again under the latter part of this rule the appellate Court can of its own motion take cognizance of the question as to whether the suit is barred by limitation though the plea of limitation has not been taken in the memorandum of appeal and rest its decision on that ground provided the opposite party is given an opportunity of being heard on the point In either case however the bar of limitation must be patent on the face of the proceedings (y) If it is not and the plea involves a fresh finding of fact the plea should not be allowed (z) The same rules apply where the plea that the suit is barred by limitation is raised for the first time in second appeal (a)

The case put above must be distinguished from the case contemplated by s. 3 of the Limitation Act 1908 That section provides that every suit instituted and every appeal preferred after the period of limitation shall be dismissed although limitation has not been set up as a defence This means that under s 3 it is the duty of the Court of first instance to dismiss a suit if it is barred by limitation whether the plea of limitation has been taken by the defendant or not (b) Similarly it is the duty of the appellate Court to dismiss an appeal before it if the appeal was barred by limitation when presented, whether limitation has been set up as a defence or not that is to say if it is a first appeal, the appeal should be dismissed by the first appellate Court and if it is a second appeal it should be dismissed by the second appellate Court But that section does not impose any duty upon an appellate Court to entertain the plea of limitation if the question is not whether the appeal before it is barred by limitation but whether the suit was so barred Similarly the said section does not impose any duty upon the second appellate Court to entertain the plea of limitation if the question is not whether the second appeal is barred by limitation but whether the first appeal was so barred It is the provisions of the present rule that apply to the two last mentioned cases and not the provisions of s 3 of the Limitation Act Hence in those cases the plea of limitation must be specifically taken in the memorandum of appeal or by leave of the Court under this rule

Proviso to the rule—The appellate Court is not precluded from basing its decision upon a ground not set forth in the memorandum of appeal nor taken by leave of the Court under this rule (c) but this power is exercised by the Court alone and neither party can claim it as of right (d) A litigant who has all along maintained a position in support of one branch of his suit cannot be permitted when he fails upon this branch to withdraw from the position and assert the contrary before the appellate Court more especially when he thereby places his opponent at a great disadvantage In such a case the doctrine of estoppel owing to the conduct of the litigant applies (e). Further a litigant should not be allowed to take in appeal a point in the pleadings which has been decree, and thereupon the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants, as the case may be

Ground common to all defendants—This rule provides that where there are more defendants than one and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the defendants any one of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree and thereupon the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the defendants (m) The rule will not apply to different appeals on a common ground unless they have been consolidated (n) It is not necessary for the application of this rule that the decree should proceed on every ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants it is quite sufficient if it proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants. A sues B C and D for recovering possession of certain lands on declaration of title thereto alleging that he was dispossessed by all the defendants together in pursuance of a conspiracy between them B C and D file separate written statements denying A s title and also denying dispossession and each claiming to hold separate par els of land from third parties The Court of first instance finds in favour of the title and the po session of A and that A was dispossessed by B C and D B alone appeals from the decree. The appellate Court finds that A had failed to prove the title set up by him or that he was in possession of the land. Should the appellate Court reverse the decree of the lower Court in favour of B alone who appealed from the decree or should it reverse the decree of the lower Court in favour also of C and D though they did not join in the appeal? The answer is that if the decree of the lower Court proceeded on a ground common to all the three defendants the decree should be reversed under this rule not only in favour of B but also in favour of C and D Now the ground of defence common to all the defendants was that A had no title to the lands and the decree of the lower Court proceeded on the ground that A had a title to the lands The decree therefore proceeded on a ground common to all the defendants. The appellate Court should therefore reverse the decree not only in favour of B but also in favour of C and D It is quite immaterial that the defendants claimed to be interested by different titles in separate portions of lands It is enough if any one ground on which the decree appealed from proceeds is common to all the defendants (o) But the provisions of this rule do not apply unless the lower Court whose decree is appealed from has proceeded upon some ground common to all the plaintiff or all the defendants. If the lower Court has not proceeded upon any such ground it is not competent to the appellate Court to reverse the decree as to all the plaintiffs or all the defendants upon a ground which the appellate Court considers to be common to all the plaintiffs or all the defendants (p)

If in the case put above the appellate Court while reversing the decree in favour of B refuses to reverse it in favour also of C and D on the ground that it has no power to do so the decree of the appellate Court will be subject to revision for failure of exercise of jurisdiction (q) See s 115 cl (b) If the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all the defendants the appellate Court may reverse the decree in favour of all the defendants even if some of the defendants suffered the decree to be passed ex parte against them (r)

Ground common to all the plaintiffs—A and his son B jointly sue C to recover Rs. 2 000 A decree is passed for the plaintiffs for Rs 500 only A alone appeals from the decree C files cross objections under r 22 below The appellate Court rejects the plaintiff s claim in toto and reverses the decree of the lower Court Subsequently B who did not join in the appeal applies for execution of the original decree against C B is not entitled to take out execution for although he was not a party to the appeal he is bound under this rule by the decree of the appellate Court (s)

See notes to r 22 below A respondent may urge cross objections against the appellant but not as a rule against a co respondent

May reverse decree in favour of all plaintiffs or defendants—The word may shows that the appellate Court is given a discretion in the matter It may therefore reverse the decree in favour of some only of the plaintiffs or defendants It is not bound to do so in favour of all of them (t)

Death of one of several appellants in cases where the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all of them—See notes to O 22 r 3 This rule applies to appeals

Stay of proceedings and of execution

Stay by appellate Court

5 [S 545] (1) An appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from except so far as the appellate Court may order, nor shall execution of a decree be stayed by reason only of an appeal having been preferred from the decree, but the appellate Court may for sufficient cause order stay of execution of such decree

Stay by Court which passed the decree

(2) Where an application is made for stay of execution of an appealable decree before the expiration of the time allowed for appealing therefrom, the Court which passed the decree may on sufficient cause being shown order the execution to be stayed

(3) No order for stay of execution shall be made under sub rule (1) or sub rule (2) unless the Court making it is satisfied—

(a) that substantial loss may result to the party applying for stay of execution unless the order is made,

(b) that the application has been made without unreasonable delay, and

(c) that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree or order as may ultimately be binding upon him

(s) Babaji v Collector of Salt Revenue (1887) 11 Bom 596

(t) Narain v Binaik (1914) 36 All 510 24 I C 439

5 (4) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub rule (3), the Court may make an ex parte order for stay of execution pending the hearing of the application

Alterations in the rule—

1 The first part of sub r (1) namely An appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from except so far as the appellate Court may order is new The object is to make express provision for a stay of proceedings from a decree pending an appeal from the decree Thus if a preliminary decree is passed in a suit for accounts between a principal and an agent [O 20 r 16] and an appeal is preferred from the decree the appellate Court may under this rule stay the inquiry into the accounts pending the appeal from the decree Under the Code of 1882 the Court directed a stay in cases like these in the exercise of its inherent power as there was no express provision in the Code in that behalf (u).

2 Sub r (4) is new It authorizes an ex parte stay The need for such an order constantly arises in practice

Stay of proceedings —Under this part of the rule the Bombay High Court in appeal suspended a sentence of imprisonment for an offence under s 43 of the Provincial Insolvency Act 1907 now Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 s 69 the provisions of the Code being applicable to such appeal (v) See notes above Alterations in the rule

Stay of execution —Once an appeal is preferred from a decree it is the appellate Court alone that is seized of the matter and an application for a stay of execution should be made to that Court Where no appeal is preferred the appellate Court has no jurisdiction not being seized of the case and cannot stay execution even on the assurance of a pleader that an appeal will be filed (w) The application for a stay in that case should be made to the Court which passed the decree but the application must not be entertained unless the decree is one from which an appeal lies and the application is made before the expiry of the time allowed by law for appealing therefrom (x) The application should be made to the Judge who decided the case and without unreasonable delay (y)

Though the appellate Court may under this rule stay proceedings in execution when an appeal is preferred from a decree it has no power to stay execution of a decree when an appeal is preferred from an order appealable under s 104 A obtains a decree ex parte against B B applies under O 9 r 13 to have the decree set aside but the application is rejected B appeals from the order rejecting the application under O 43 r 1 cl. (d) and applies to the appellate Court to stay execution of the ex parte decree against him But as no appeal has been preferred from the decree the appellate Court is not competent to stay execution (z) Contrast r 8 below

Where decree has been executed — An order for a stay of execution implies that the decree has not been executed Therefore where a decree has been executed no order can be made under this rule (a) See r 6 below

Circumstances under which stay of execution may be granted —The Court has power under this rule to make an order for a stay of execution for sufficient cause But no order should be made for a stay of execution unless the Court is sati fied that substantial loss may result to the party applying for a stay of execution if the execution is not stayed (b) And even if the Court is satisfied that substantial loss may result no order should be made unless the application has been made without unreasonable delay and further unless the Court is satisfied that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree as may ultimately be binding upon him [sub r (3)] The Court should not accept a security the validity of which is not free from reasonable doubt and the enforcement of which may lead to protracted litigation (c) It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that where the decree appealed from is for the payment of money execution should be stayed unless the respondent gives security for the repayment of the money in the event of the decree being reversed (d)

Notice to decree holder —It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that a final order staying execution should not be made without notice to the decree holder if it is made without notice it is illegal and it may be set aside under s 115 above (e) The High Court of Patna however differs (f) An interim stay however may be granted ex parte [see sub r (4)]

Application of the rule —A obtains a decree against B for the recovery of certain immovable property and applies for execution of the decree If B has preferred an appeal from the decree B may apply to the appellate Court for a stay of execution on the ground that if execution is not stayed and the property is delivered to A A may do away with the property which may result in substantial loss to him If the appellate Court is satisfied the substantial loss may result if the execution is not stayed and if the application has been made without unreasonable delay the appellate Court may order execution to be stayed under this rule upon security being given by B that if the decree of the lower Court is confirmed he will deliver possession of the property to A If the decree of the lower Court is confirmed and if B fails to deliver possession of the property to A A may proceed against the surety

Security for performance of decree —The nature and extent of the liability of a surety under this rule depends on the words of the security bond (g) Thus where the bond was to perform all orders and decrees passed in appeal it was held that the obligation under the bond extended to the final decree passed in second appeal (h) When immovable property is given by a judgment debtor as security for the due performance of a decree under sub r (3) (c) it can be realized in execution without attachment The provisions of O 34 r 14 do not apply to such a case and the matter being one relating to execution s 47 bars a separate suit (i) As to the mode of enforcing a security bond given under this rule see notes to s 145 Security for the performance of any decree

There is a conflict of opinion whether a security bond given under this rule mortgaging immovable property exceeding Rs 100 in value requires registration under the Transfer of Property Act s 59 and the Registration Act s 17 it being held in same cases that it does (j) and in some that it does not (k)

Enforcement of security bond given under this rule—See notes to sec. 145 Security for restitution of property taken in execution of a decree

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order under this rule

Form—For form of security bond see App G form no 3

7 [S 547] No such security as is mentioned in rules 5 and 6 shall be required from the Secretary of State for India in Council or, where the Government has undertaken the defence of the suit, from any public officer sued in respect of an act alleged to be done by him in his official capacity

No security to be required from the Government or a public officer in certain cases

8 [New] The powers conferred by rules 5 and 6 shall be exercisable where an appeal may be or has been preferred not from the decree but from an order made in execution of such decree

Exercise of powers in appeal from order made in execution of decree

Scope and object of the rule—This rule is new It has been added to meet particularly the case where the litigant does not quarrel with the decree but appeals from an order passed in execution of that decree In such a case the rule provides that the appellant may apply for a stay of execution of the decree under r 5 or for security for restitution under r 6 A obtains a decree against B and applies for execution. B objects to the execution but the objection is disallowed B prefers an appeal from the order disallowing his objection B may apply for a stay of execution of the decree under r 5 pending the disposal of the appeal from the order This is in accordance with the undermentioned decision under the Code of 1882 (b)

10 [s 549] (1) The appellate Court may in its discretion, either before the respondent is called upon to appear and answer or afterwards on the application of the respondent, demand from the appellant security for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit, or of both O 41

Appellate Court may require appellant to furnish security for costs

Provided that the Court shall demand such security in all cases in which the appellant is residing out of British India, and is not possessed of any sufficient immovable property within British India other than the property (if any) to which the appeal relates

Where an appellant resides out of British India

(2) Where such security is not furnished within such time as the Court orders, the Court shall reject the appeal

Scope and object of the rule—The object of the rule is to secure the respondent in an appeal from the risk of having to incur further costs which he might never recover from the appellant Under sub r (1) the appellate Court may in its discretion require security for costs Under the proviso to that sub rule the Court shall demand security for costs If no security is furnished the Court should reject the appeal whether the order for security is made under the sub rule or the proviso (c)

To what appeals the rule applies—This rule applies not only to appeals from substantive decree but also to appeals from interlocutory orders under sec 104 and to appeals from orders in execution under sec 47 (d) The Privy Council have recently decided that it applies also to appeals under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent (e) The Madras High Court has held that it was not so applicable because the Code dealt with appeals from one Court to another of higher grade while cl 15 of the Letters Patent dealt with a different class of appeals (f) This was a good reason for holding that the right of appeal under the Letters Patent was not excluded by the words "and from no other orders" occurring in sec 588 of the Code of 1882 corresponding to sec 104 of the present Code (g) but it does not follow that the procedure of the Court in dealing with an appeal under the Letters Patent (now expressly saved by the words "save as otherwise provided by any law" inserted in sec 104) is not regulated by the Code Where any part of the Code does not apply to High Courts specific provision is made to that effect There is no such provision in respect of this rule However a Chartered High Court is competent under sec 129 to make a rule inconsistent with O 41 r 10 and if it does the Code rule would not apply (h) Bombay High Court rule 736 prescribes a deposit of Rs 500 as security for respondent's costs as a condition of filing the appeal but this is not inconsistent with the present rule (i) Nor is rule 3_1 of the Madras High Court rules inconsistent (j)

10 Appeals in forma pauperis—It has been held by the High Court of Madras (k) that this rule applies to pauper appeals, thus an appellant who has presented his appeal in forma pauperis may be called upon to give security for costs under this rule but very special grounds must be shown to support such an application. On the other hand it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (l) Bombay (m) and Lahore ( ) that this rule does not apply to appeals preferred in forma pauperis.

"In its discretion—Except in the case referred to in the proviso to sub-r (l) the power of the appellate Court to require security for costs is discretionary The mere fact that the appellant is poor or insolvent is no ground for demanding security for costs (o) Similarly mere non payment of the costs of the original suit is no ground for calling upon the appellant to furnish security under this rule unless his conduct be shown to be vexatious that is such as indicates a wilful determination on his part not to obey the order of the Court in respect of costs (p) On the other hand when the respondent had failed to recover his costs in the lower Court Macleod C J made an order for security observing that the Court s discretion was absolute and could not be fettered by cases (q) It is submitted that this was a misuse of the word absolute for the discretion is a judicial discretion to be exercised in accordance with legal principles expounded in the cases. But the Court will as a general rule demand security for costs from a poor or insolvent appellant if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the appellant is not the real litigant but a mere puppet in the hands of others who are well able to furnish security (r) or if the merits of the case are plainly in favour of the respondent (s) See notes to O 25 r 1 Poverty of plaintiff

At what stage respondent should apply for security—The respondent should apply promptly or else it might be urged that he had waived his right (t)

Order for security—When an order is made under this rule for security for costs, it is not necessary that any specific sum should be named in the order It is sufficient if the order directs the appellant to furnish security for the costs of the original suit or for the costs of the appeal or for the costs of the appeal and the original suit (u) A surety for the costs of the appeal is discharged if the appeal is decided in favour of the appellant even if the appellate decree is reversed on second appeal (v) The taxing officer s decision as to the amount of the security is subject to revision by the High Court (w)

Extension of time for furnishing security—The appellate Court may under exceptional circumstances extend the time for furnishing security [see s 148]. Thus where the appellant alleged that he was unable on account of plague in Bombay to raise the money required for security within the time fixed by the Court the Court extended the time for giving security The time for giving security may be extended either before or after its expiry (x).

Court shall reject the appeal —The appeal should not be rejected if the order for security has been made without notice to the appellant (y)

Restoring of appeal —An appeal although it may have been rejected by the appellate Court under this rule upon failure of the appellant to furnish security may be restored on sufficient grounds at the Court's discretion ( ) It is no excuse for not furnishing security in time that the appellant is a wandering fakir for it is the duty of every litigant to keep in touch with his case (a) Where the applicant applies for extension of time and the Court after hearing him on the application refuses to extend the time and rejects the appeal the appeal should not subsequently be restored (b) No appeal lies from an order refusing to restore an appeal (c)

Appeal from order rejecting appeal under sub rule (2) —An order rejecting an appeal under this rule is not appealable as an order under O 43 for it is not one of the orders specified therein. Nor is it appealable as a decree for it does not conclusively determine the rights of the parties with regard to any of the matters in controversy in the appeal within the meaning of the definition of decree [s 2 cl (2)] (d)

Appeal from order dismissing application to receive security for costs —An order is made under sub rule (1) directing an appellant to furnish security for costs. The order is indefinite in that it does not fix the exact date on or before which security is to be given The appellant believing that the time for giving security has expired, applies to the Court to receive the amount fixed by the order as security The Court hold that the time for furnishing security has expired and refuses the application. The appellant is entitled to appeal from the order under cl 15 of the Letters Patent as the effect of the order would be to finally deprive the appellant of his right of prosecuting his appeal (e)

Insolvency appeal —There is a conflict of decisions as to whether this rule applies to the case of an appeal from an order passed by a Judge of the High Court exercising jurisdiction in insolvency under the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909 the High Court of Madras holding that it does not (f) while the High Court of Calcutta holds that it does (g)

(3) The dismissal of an appeal under this rule shall be notified to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred

Alteration in the rule —

1 In sub r (1) the words after sending for the record if it thinks fit to do so are new These words have been added to empower the Court to send for the record if it thinks fit to do so before summarily dismissing an appeal without giving notice to the respondent

2 The words the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed have been substituted for the words the appeal shall be dismissed for default to make it clear that no appeal lies from an order of dismissal for default See s 2 cl (2) sub cl. (b) Under the old section it was held that a decision dismissing an appeal for default was a decree and was therefore appealable (h)

Dismissal of appeal under sub rule (1) whether judgment necessary —Under the corresponding section of the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the dismissal of an appeal under sub r (1) did not relieve the lower appellate Court from the necessity of writing a judgment in the manner prescribed by s. 574 of that Code [now r 31 of this Order] (i) A different view however was taken by the High Court of Allahabad (j) The present Order is divided into distinct parts under appropriate headings an arrangement which did not appear in the corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1882 Rule 11 comes under the heading Procedure on admission of appeal The next heading of the Order is Procedure on hearing and r 31 comes under the next following heading Judgment in appeal Relying upon this classification it was held by the High Court of Bombay in Tanaji v Shankar (k) that under the present Code it is not obligatory upon the lower appellate Court in dismissing an appeal under this rule to write a judgment as required by r 31 But this decision has since been overruled by a Full Bench of the same Court on the ground that it was in conflict with the previous practice of that Court which was based on a Civil Circular being Circular 51 published in 1890 under the provisions of the High Courts Act 1861 by which it is provided that when an appellate Court dismisses an appeal under s. 551 [now r 11 of this Order] a judgment should be written and a formal decree drawn up In the course of the judgment Sir Basil Scott C J said There is nothing in the new Code of Civil Procedure which introduces any change in the law except in so far as the rules commencing with rule 9 of Order XLI are headed Procedure on admission of appeal That change is not sufficient to abrogate the rule published under the High Courts Act which is quite consistent with the provisions of the Code (l). The result is that according to the Bombay High Court when an appeal is dismissed under this rule a judgment should be written and a formal decree drawn up The High Courts of Calcutta and Rangoon have given the same decision under the present Code (m). Even if the judgment is not pronounced in the form prescribed by rule 31 the decision is a decree (n)

Dismissal of appeal for default under sub rule (2)—Where an appeal is dismissed for default it is the decree of the lower Court alone that can be enforced in execution (o) See notes to s 36 What decrees may be executed

Review—Dismissal of an appeal under this rule bars a review of the judgment appealed against see notes under O 47 r 1 The order under this rule dismissing the appeal is itself subject to review and the practice of the Calcutta High Court is to grant a review and order the rehearing of the appeal ex parte (p) When a second appeal is dismissed under this rule the High Court has no power to review its judgment on the ground of the discovery of new and important matter (q) See notes to O 47 r 1 No review allowed on a question of fact after decision of second appeal

Re admission of appeal dismissed for default under sub rule (2)—An appeal dismissed under sub r (2) may be re admitted under r 19

Day for hearing appeal

12 [S 552] (1) Unless the appellate Court dismisses the appeal under rule 11, it shall fix a day for hearing the appeal

(2) Such day shall be fixed with reference to the current business of the Court, the place of residence of the respondent, and the time necessary for the service of the notice of appeal, so as to allow the respondent sufficient time to appear and answer the appeal on such day

Appellate Court to give notice to Court whose decree appealed from 13 [S 552] (1) Where the appeal is not dismissed under rule 11, the appellate Court shall send notice of the appeal to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred

Transmission of papers to appellate Court

(2) Where the appeal is from the decree of a Court, the records of which are not deposited in the appellate Court, the Court receiving such notice shall send with all practicable despatch all material papers in the suit, or such papers as may be specially called for by the appellate Court

Copies of exhibits in Court whose decree appealed from

(3) Either party may apply in writing to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, specifying any of the papers in such Court of which he requires copies to be made, and copies of such papers shall be made at the expense of, and given to, the applicant

14 [S 553] Publication and service of notice of day for hearing of appeal

(1) Notice of the day fixed under rule 12 shall be affixed in the appellate Court house, and a like notice shall be sent by the appellate Court to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, and shall be served on the respondent or on his pleader in the appellate Court in the manner provided for the service of a defendant of a summons to appear and answer, and all the provisions applicable to such summons, and to proceedings with reference to the service thereof, shall apply to the service of such notice

Appellate Court may itself cause notice to be served

(2) Instead of sending the notice to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, the appellate Court may itself cause the notice to be served on the respondent or his pleader under the provisions above referred to Form —For form of notice to respondent see Appendix G form no 6

15 [S 554] Contents of notice

The notice to the respondent shall declare that, if he does not appear in the appellate Court on the day so fixed, the appeal will be heard ex parte

Procedure on hearing

16 [S 555] Right to begin

(1) On the day fixed, or on any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, the appellant shall be heard in support of the appeal

(2) The Court shall then, if it does not dismiss the appeal at once hear the respondent against the appeal, and in such case the appellant shall be entitled to reply

Right to begin —The mere fact that the respondent calls in question the right of the appellant to appeal does not give the respondent the right to begin (r)

It is the duty of the appellant to satisfy the Court of appeal that the decision of the trial Court is erroneous (s) In every appeal it is incumbent upon the appellant to show some reason why the judgment appealed from should be disturbed There must be some balance in his favour to justify the alteration of the judgment as it stands (t)

Alterations in the rule—The words the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed have been substituted for the words the appeal shall be dismissed for default to make it clear that no appeal lies from the order of dismissal for default (u) See sec 2 cl (2) sub cl. (b) and notes Order of dismissal for default p 11 above

Order that the appeal be dismissed—See notes above Alteration in the rule

18 [S 557] Where on the day fixed, or on any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, it is found that the notice to the respondent has not been served in consequence of the failure of the appellant to deposit, within the period fixed, the sum required to defray the cost of serving the notice, the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed

Dismissal of appeal where notice not served in consequence of appellant's failure to deposit costs

Provided that no such order shall be made although the notice has not been served upon the respondent, if on any such day the respondent appears when the appeal is called on for hearing

The Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed—The language of the rule clearly shows that the order of dismissal should not be made before the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal (w)

19 [S 558] Where an appeal is dismissed under rule 11, sub rule (2), or rule 17 or rule 18, the appellant may apply to the appellate Court for the re admission of the appeal, and, where it is proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the appeal was called on for hearing or from depositing the sum so required, the Court shall re admit the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit

Re admission of appeal dismissed for default

Shall re admit the appeal —These words have been substituted for the words may re admit the appeal The word may in the old section was construed by the High Court of Madras to mean shall ( )

Sufficient cause —The carelessness of an advocate s clerk does not constitute sufficient cause (a) But where the appellant s pleader appeared soon after the appeal was dismissed it was restored on the ground that the failure to appear was unintentional (b) The absence of appellant s pleader owing to an engagement in another Court has been held to be sufficient cause (c)

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order of refusal to re admit an appeal [O 23 r 1 cl (t)] But no appeal lies from an order re admitting an appeal (d)

Dismissal of appeal for failure to deposit costs of paper book or to pay court fees —Where an appeal is dismissed under the rules of a High Court for failure to deposit the costs of preparation of the paper book as required by the rules the decree may be set aside not by an order under this rule but by an order on an application for a review (e) So also if it is dismissed for failure to pay Court fees (f)

Inherent power to restore appeal dismissed for default —Although a cause may not amount to a sufficient cause within the meaning of this rule the Court has inherent power to pass an order of restoration if it considers that a case for restoration has been made out (g) According to the Bombay High Court (h) the Court has inherent power to admit an application for re admission that is time barred under Art 168 of the Limitation Act but the Lahore(i) and Madras (j) High Courts differ following Neelarent v Narayana (k) See note under O 9 r 9 Inherent power to restore suit dismissed for default

Other remedy —The applicant is not confined to the remedy of restoration but may file another appeal if he is still within the period of limitation (l)

20 [s 559] Where it appears to the Court at the hearing that any person who was a party to the suit in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, but who has not been made a party to the appeal, is interested in the result of the appeal, the Court may adjourn the hearing to a future day to be fixed by the Court and direct that such person be made a respondent

Power to adjourn hearing and direct persons appearing interested to be made respondents

Interested in the result of the appeal —Where one of the holders of a decree has not been joined as a respondent to an appeal and the time limited for appeal has elapsed he is not interested in the result of the appeal within the meaning of this rule The rule therefore gives no jurisdiction to the appellate Court to join him (m) See notes to r 33 below

Limitation —A person who was a party to the proceeding in the Court below may be added as a respondent though the time to appeal against him has expired (n) But this cannot be done if the misjoinder has rendered the appeal incompetent as when an appeal is filed against some only of several joint decree holders (o)

Adding of parties under this rule discretionary —It is a question for the Court in its discretion to determine in each case whether or not it will make an order for the addition of a party as contemplated by this rule (p) A party will not be added merely in order to enable a respondent to file cross objections against him (q) According to the Madras High Court its powers are not limited by this rule and it can also act under O 1 r 10 (r) But the Allahabad High Court has held that a Court of appeal cannot add a party who was not a party to the suit (s) The Appellate Court has no power under this rule to add as a respondent to the appeal a person who was not a party to the original suit (t)

The Court will not under this rule add representatives of a deceased party to save an appeal that has abated (u) Nor will it add a respondent after the appeal against him is time barred (v)

Adding of parties in second appeal —Has the High Court power in second appeal to add a party who was a party to the suit but not a party in the first appeal? No according to the Allahabad High Court (w) Yes according to the Madras (x) Calcutta (y) and Patna (z) High Courts

Form —For form of notice to a party to a suit not made a party to the appeal see Appendix G form no 7

21 [S 560] Where an appeal is heard ex parte and judgment is pronounced against the respondent, he may apply to the appellate Court to re hear the appeal, and, if he satisfies the Court that the notice was not duly served or that he was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing when the appeal was called on for hearing, the Court shall re hear the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit to impose upon him

Re hearing on application of respondent against whom ex parte decree made

See O 9 r 13 and notes thereto

Sufficient cause —Where counsel for respondent was unable to appear at the hearing as the respondent s agent had taken away the papers it was held that it was not sufficient cause for re hearing the appeal (a) But when the party s agent could not appear to instruct the pleader because of his daughter s illness this was considered sufficient cause (b)

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order of refusal to re hear an appeal [O 43 r 1 cl (t)]

22 [S 561] (1) Any respondent, though he may not have appealed from any part of the decree, may not only support the decree on any of the grounds decided against him in the Court below, but take any cross objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed such objection in the appellate Court within one month from the date of service on him or his pleader of notice of the day fixed for hearing the appeal, or within such further time as the appellate Court may see fit to allow

Upon hearing respondent may object to decree as if he had preferred separate appeal

(2) Such cross objection shall be in the form of a memorandum, and the provisions of rule 1, so far as they relate to the form and contents of the memorandum of appeal, shall apply thereto

Form of objection and provisions applicable thereto

(3) Unless the respondent files with the objection a written acknowledgment from the party who may be affected by such objection or his pleader of having received a copy thereof, the appellate Court shall cause a copy to be served, as soon as may be after the filing of the objection on such party or his pleader at the expense of the respondent

(4) Where, in any case in which any respondent has under this rule filed a memorandum of objection the original appeal is withdrawn or is dismissed for default, the objection so filed may nevertheless be heard and determined after such notice to the other parties as the Court thinks fit O 41, r

(5) The provisions relating to pauper appeals shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply to an objection under this rule

Alterations in the rule —The words upon the hearing which occurred in the first paragraph of s 561 of the Code of 1882 [now sub r 1] between the words may and not only support have been omitted and sub rule (4) has been added See notes below under the head Sub rule (4) where the appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default The words the party who may be affected by such objection in sub r (3) have been substituted for the words the appellant which occurred in s 561

Cross objections —If in a suit brought by A against B B sets up two defences and the Court of first instance decides both in B s favour and A appeals there is no scope for cross objections for cross objections cannot be filed as criticisms of a judgment (c) but if the Court decides in B s favour as to one and against him as to the other then if A appeals B may support the decree at the hearing of the appeal not only on the ground decided in his favour but also on the ground decided against him without filing any cross objections (d) In the case put above the decree was entirely in B s (respondent s) favour But if A s claim is decreed in part A may appeal from the decree alleging that the decree ought to have been for the full amount claimed by him And B also may appeal from the decree alleging that the suit ought to have been dismissed altogether If A appeals from the decree and B also appeals B s appeal is called a cross appeal. But instead of filing a cross appeal B may file cross objections under this rule In cross objections B may take any objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal (e) If no cross objections are filed by a respondent the appellate Court has no power to grant any relief to him in a case where the granting of such relief is not necessarily incidental to the relief granted to the appellant (f) nor has it the power in the absence of cross objections to disturb so much of the original decree as is favourable to the appellant so as to place the appellant in a worse position (g) Appellate Court should not proceed to decide on a point not raised either by the appellant or respondent (h)

Support the decree —The respondent without filing cross objections may support the decree on grounds decided against him by the lower Court But this does not authorize the respondent to make out a case for a decree for the same amount by questioning some adjudication as to right found against him and as to which no appeal or objection has been filed The expression support the decree means support the decision and does not refer to the quantum of the decree (i)

r 22 Sub rule (4) where the appeal is withdrawn or has abated or is dismissed for default —The old section commenced with the words any respondent may upon the hearing not only support the decree etc It was accordingly held that a respondent can be heard in support of his cross objections only upon the hearing of the appeal. If the appeal was withdrawn before the hearing the respondent it was held, had no right to be heard in support of his cross objections (j) though the Court might in such a case allow him to prefer a regular appeal from the decree (k) But if the hearing had once commenced the appeal it was held could not be withdrawn so as to prevent the cross objections being heard and determined (l) This distinction has now been done away with by the omission of the words upon the hearing in sub r (1) and by the addition of sub r (4) Under the present rule the withdrawal of an appeal is no bar to the hearing of cross objection filed by a respondent whether the appeal is withdrawn before or after the hearing Similarly the dismissal of an appeal for default is no bar to the hearing of cross objections This was correctly admitted in Bhimasena v Venugopal (m) a Letters Patent appeal but the reasoning so far as it proceeds on the assumption that O 41 does not apply to Letters Patent appeals seems opposed to the Privy Council decision in Savitri v Savi (n) The dismissal of an appeal upon the appellant s failure to give security for costs is a dismissal for default within the meaning of sub r (4) (o) But if the appeal has abated the respondent is not entitled to have his cross objections heard (p)

Under the old section the High Court of Allahabad held that the dismissal of an appeal as filed out of time was a bar to the hearing of cross objections (q) A Full Bench of the Madras High Court holds that the law is the same under the present rule (r) The Lahore High Court has held that an appeal must be properly filed before the Court in order that cross objections may be heard (s) and it has been held that where an appeal is dismissed on the ground of insufficiency of Court fee stamp the Court has no power to hear cross objections (t) The last mentioned decision is based on the ground that except in the case of the original appeal being withdrawn or dismissed for default as expressly provided for in sub r (4) the general rule that cross objections cannot b heard unless the appeal is decided on the merits is still in force But the dismissal of an appeal on the ground of non joinder of a party in a mortgage suit has been held not to be a bar to the hearing of cross objections the reason given being that in such a case the appeal is heard the question of non joinder being one that arises in the appeal itself and is not extraneous to it as would be a question as to whether it was presented in proper time or not (u)

Who may file cross objections —Cross objections under this rule can only be filed by a party who might have appealed from the decree of the Court below but has not done so It is not open to the party who has appealed and whose appeal has been dismissed subsequently to prefer cross objections under this rule A sues B for damages A s claim is decreed in part A appeals from that part of the decree which is against him B also appeals from that part of the decree which is against him A s appeal is heard and dismissed Before B s appeal is heard A files cross objections in B s appeal setting up the same grounds upon which in his own appeal he had asked for relief A s cross objections should not be heard (v) Again A obtains a decree in a partnership suit which is against B one of the defendants as ex parte B does not apply under O 9 r 13 to set aside the ex parte decree B cannot therefore file cross objections in A s appeal that he should have been given a hearing (w) But in a case where B before the ex parte decree was passed presented a petition asking to be heard under the erroneous impression that the ex parte decree had already been passed it was held that he was not barred from filing cross objections on the ground that he was not heard (x) Cross objections as to costs in the Courts below will not be entertained in second appeal (y) O 41,

A respondent may urge cross objections against the appellant but not as a rule against a co respondent—It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta Bombay and Allahabad that as a general rule the right of a respondent to urge cross objections should be limited to his urging them only against the appellant and that it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge cross objections as against other respondents the exception holding good in those cases in which the appeal opens up questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co respondents (z) Thus in suits for dissolution of partnership and for accounts it is open to any respondent to prefer cross objections against a co respondent on any item in dispute between them The reason is that in such suits accounts are taken not between the plaintiff on the one hand and the defendants on the other but between all the partners A B and C constitute a partnership firm A sues B and C for dissolution of partnership and for accounts A decree is passed in the suit declaring the amount coming to the share of each partner on the taking of accounts A appeals from the decree B and C are joined as respondents to the appeal In such a case it is open to B to prefer cross objections against C in respect of an item in dispute between B and C (a) Similarly when the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all the parties against whom it is passed and the appeal is preferred by some only of such parties e g where the suit is—A v B and C and a decree is passed both against B and C and the appeal is—B v A and C A who is the plaintiff respondent may prefer cross objections not only against B the appellant but against C the co respondent A sues B and C to recover Rs 5 000 alleged to be his share of the profits of certain lands A decree is passed for A for Rs 3 000 against B and C B appeals from the decree C does not join B in the appeal and he is therefore made a party respondent The appeal thus is—B v A and C In such a case it is open to A to prefer cross objections not only against B but also against C in respect of that portion of his claim that was disallowed by the Court of first instance namely Rs 2 000 (b) According to the Madras (c) and Lahore (d) High Courts a respondent may urge cross objections against a co respondent in any and every case Note in this connection the substitution in sub r (3) of the words the party who may be affected by such objection for the words the appellant which occurred in sec 561 of the Code of 1882

O 41, r 23 Application for leave to file cross objections in forma pauperis—An application for leave to file cross objections in forma pauperis may be received by the Court at any time (e)

Or within such further time—This rule requires that cross objections should be filed by the respondent within one month from the date of the service of notice of the appeal But the time may be extended if sufficient cause is shown (f)

Application of the rule—Cross objections may be filed not only in first appeal but also in second appeal (O 42) They may also be filed in appeals from orders preferred under sec 104 and O 43 [See O 43 r 2]

Second appeal—A second appeal will lie from a decree of the first appellate Court disallowing the cross objections of a respondent (g)

Letters Patent appeal—The Allahabad and Calcutta High Courts have held that the provision for respondents filing cross objections does not apply to Letters Patent appeals (h) but it is doubtful if this is correct in view of the Privy Council decision in Sabitri v Savi (i)

Form—As to form of memorandum of cross objections see App G form no 8

23 [S 562] Where the Court from whose decree an appeal is preferred has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point and the decree is reversed in appeal, the appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, by order remand the case, and may further direct what issue or issues shall be tried in the case so remanded, and shall send a copy of its judgment and order to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, with directions to re admit the suit under its original number in the register of civil suits, and proceed to determine the suit and the evidence (if any) recorded during the original trial shall, subject to all just exceptions, be evidence during the trial after remand

Remand of case by appellate Court

Alterations in the rule—The words and the evidence (if any) recorded during the original trial shall subject to all just exceptions be evidence during the trial after remand at the end of the rule are new

Scope of the rule—It is not competent to the appellate Court under this rule to remand the case for further evidence to the lower Court and to require that Court to pass another decree All that the appellate Court is empowered to do is to frame an issue and to send down that issue to the Court below for the return of a finding and it is the duty of the appellate Court after receiving that finding to dispose of the appeal upon the evidence before it (j) The appellate Court cannot after finding on facts remand the case to the lower Court to pass a decree in accordance with that finding (k)

Preliminary point—This rule enables the appellate Court to remand a case to the lower Court for determination on the merits if the lower Court has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point and the decree of that Court is reversed in appeal The expression preliminary point is not confined to such legal points only as may be pleaded in bar of a suit but comprehends all points or issues whether of fact or of law the determination of which has precluded the necessity for determining other points or issues which have therefore been left undetermined (l) A Full Bench of the Madras High Court defined it as any point whether of fact or of law the decision of which avoids the necessity for a full hearing of the suit (m) Thus where the lower Court dismisses the plaintiff's suit on the ground that it is barred by limitation or that the Court has no jurisdiction to hear the suit or that the necessary leave has not been obtained or that the plaint does not on the face of it disclose any cause of action (n) or that it is barred by the events in an earlier suit (o) and the appellate Court reverses the decree of the lower Court on those grounds it may remand the case to the lower Court to be proceeded with on the merits Where several issues are raised in a suit one of which is that of undue influence and the Court dismisses the suit on a finding that there was undue influence without a finding on the other issues the decision amounts to a disposal of the suit upon a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule (p) Similarly if A sues B to recover a sum of money on the basis of an award and four issues are framed one of which is whether the award is valid and binding and the Court after recording evidence on all the issues dismisses the suit on the ground that the award is invalid leaving the other issues undecided the appellate Court may if it finds that the decision of the lower Court on the issue as to the validity of the award is wrong remand the case to the lower Court to be disposed of on the merits It does not matter that evidence has been recorded on all the issues (q) But where the first Court has decided a suit on the merits of the whole ca e as where the suit is decided on all the evidence and on all the issu s the appellate Court cannot remand the case under this rule (r) Where the first Court heard the entire suit and found all issues in favour of the plaintiff except one namely whether the su t was maintainable having regard to the provisions of O 21 r 92 and dismissed the suit on the finding that the suit was not maintainable it was held by the Patna High Court that the suit was disposed of on a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule (s) This decision is in conflict with the decisions referred to above and it is submitted, is not good law To pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff on the strength of a plan put in by the plaintiff in a suit for possession of land is not a decision of the suit on a preliminary point and no remand can be made in such a case under this rule (t) In a Bombay ca e the appellate Court was of opinion that certain findings of facts were necessary for the disposal of the appeal and that evidence should be taken on those points and it made an order of remand under this rule It was held that the Court had no power to make the order under this rule though such an order could be made under Rule 25 below (u)

No order of remand can be made under this rule unless the lower Court has disposed of the whole suit upon a preliminary point This rule authorises a remand only where

r 23 the entire suit and not only a portion of it has been disposed of by the Court b low on a preliminary point (v) Assuming that the entire suit is decided on a preliminary point it is further necessary before an order of remand can be made under this rule that the appellate Court should also find that the decision on the preliminary point is wrong It is not a good ground therefore for making an order under this rule that the preliminary issue e g an issue of limitation has been decided by the Court of first instance on a wrong view of the burden of proof unless the appellate Court finds that the issue itself has been wrongly decided (w) Again if the lower Court decides the suit on several preliminary points the appellate Court should not remand the suit without deciding all those preliminary points (x)

Inherent power of remand Remand in case of error omission or irregularity—No order of remand can be made under the present rule except when the suit has been disposed of on a preliminary point There are however cases in which suits have not been disposed of on a preliminary point and yet the Courts have claimed the power to remand the cas professing to do so in the exercise of their inherent power [see s 151] These are cases in which the lower Court has committed any error omission or irregularity by reason of which there has not been a proper trial or an effectual or complete adjudication of the suit and the party complaining of such error omission or irregularity has been materially prejudiced thereby Thus if a suit is defective for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action the proper course is to return the plaint to the plaintiff for amendment and not to dismiss the suit (see notes to O 2 r 3 on p 441 above) If the lower Court dismisses the suit instead of returning the plaint for amendment the appellate Court may set aside the decree and remand the suit w th a direction to the lower Court to return the plaint to the plaintiff for amendment and to proceed with the suit after the plaint is amended (y) Similarly where a suit is brought in the name of a wrong person as plaintiff the appellate Court may direct the plaint to be amended and remand the case for re trial (z) Where time was granted to the plaintiff to produce his evidence—but neither he nor his pleader appeared on the day to which the hearing was adjourned and the lower Court instead of proceeding to dispose of the suit under O 17 r 3 dismissed the suit for default under O 17 r 2 it was held that the appellate Court had power to remand the case to be disposed of in the manner prescribed by O 17 r 3 (a) A case may also be remanded where the decision of the lower Court is given without taking the defendant s evidence (b) In a Bombay case (c) the lower Court had erroneously presumed the death of the mortgagor and decreed redemption by a person claiming to be his heir and the High Court reversed the decree and remanded the case for retrial after joining the mortgagor as a party

Sections 562 and 566 of the Code of 1882 [now rr 23 and 25 of this Order] were the only sections that provided for a remand The cases cited in the preceding paragraph did not fall under either of those sections Moreover the Code of 1882 contained a section (s 564) which prohibited the appellate Court from remanding a case except as provided by s 562 This section was found in its working to be embarrassing and to get over the difficulty presented by cases of the kind cited in the preceding paragraph the Courts resorted to their inherent jurisdiction That section has been omitted in this Code on the ground that it was unduly restrictive The absolute prohibition of s 564 having been removed the Court it is said is free under s 151 to make an order of remand though the case may not fall either under this rule or rule 25 (d) It has O 41 accordingly been held that as under the old Code so under the new Code an order of remand can be made though the suit was not disposed of on a point which can be called a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule provided such an order is necessary for the ends of justice (e) In Nabin Chandra v Prankrishna (f) however Stephen and Mullick JJ expressed the opinion that if the appellate Court had at all any inherent power to remand that power was taken away by s 107 read with O 41 rr 23 and 25 and that under s 107 an appellate Court can only remand a case subject to such limitations as may be prescribed that is prescribed by rules 23 and 25 of O 41 The view so expressed ignores entirely the specific provisions of s 151 of the Code In Mani Mohan v Ramtaran (g) Jenkins C J after observing that the combined effect of s 107 and O 41 r 23 was to limit the power of remand to the position described in O 41 r 23 said And this is the general rule except under special conditions which have no application in the circumstances of this case The view taken by Stephen and Mullick JJ was dissented from by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Ghuznavi v The Allahabad Bank Ltd (h) where it was held that the powers of the appellate Court as regards remand are not restricted to the case specified in O 41 r 23 but that the Court by reason of its inherent jurisdiction recognized and preserved in the Code [s 151] may order a remand in cases other than the case specified in O 41 r 23 if it be necessary for the ends of justice It has thus been held that an appellate Court may direct a plaint to be amended by adding parties and remand the whole case to the Court below (i) The High Court of Patna has followed the Full Bench ruling in Ghuznavi s case (j) So also the High Courts of Bombay (k) Madras (l) and Lahore (m) The Allahabad High Court treats the question as unsettled but puts a very wide construction on rule 23 (n) See notes to r 33 below Remand

r 23 Appeal —An appeal lies under O 43 r 1 cl (u) from an order remanding a case where an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court (p) This means that the order of remand is appealable only in cases in which an appeal would lie from the decree which would have been passed by the appellate Court had that Court decided the case without a remand (q) No appeal lies from a remand order in an appeal from an execution proceeding if the suit is of such a nature that by reason of s 102 no second appeal lies (r) If no appeal is preferred from the order of remand the party aggrieved by the order cannot afterwards dispute its correctness in an appeal from the final decree see s 105 sub s (2) and notes thereto But though an appeal lies from an order of remand it must be preferred according to the Calcutta High Court before the final disposal of the remanded suit otherwise it cannot be entertained The reason given is that the right of appeal given by s 104 and O 43 from orders specified therein ceases with the disposal of the suit (s) On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the appeal may be preferred even after the decision of the remanded suit provided it is within the period of limitation The Allahabad Court proceeds on the ground that there is no provision in the Code imposing any such restriction on the right of appeal (t) The period of limitation for an appeal from an order of remand is 90 days from the date of the order [Limitation Act art 156]

Though an appeal lies under rule 1 of Order 43 from an order of remand no appeal will lie from the order when the order is itself made in an appeal preferred under any other clause of that rule Thus if an appeal is preferred under O 43 r 1 cl (a) from an order under O 7 r 10 or under O 43 r 1 cl (j) from an order under O 21 r 92 or under O 43 r 1 cl (q) from an order under O 38 r 6 or under any other clause of Order 43 r 1 and the appellate Court allows the appeal and makes an order of remand no appeal will lie from the order of remand under O 43 r 1 cl. (u) The reason is that cl (u) of r 1 of O 43 is subject to s 104 sub s (2) which provides that no appeal shall lie from any order passed in appeal [it may be an order of remand] under that section (u)

Appeal from remand under the inherent power —When the order of remand is made under the inherent jurisdiction recognized in Ghuznavi v The Allahabad Bank (v) is it appealable ? There are several decisions against such an appeal (w) Mukerji J says an appeal lies because the order of remand is itself a decree (x) but if that were so the provisions of O 43 r 1 cl (u) would be superfluous The correct answer seems to be that rule 23 should be construed as widely as possible and that the right of appeal should not be curtailed except on very clear proof of circumstances justifying such curtailment Therefore even if the order of remand cannot be justified under the rule yet if it is in substance an order under that rule an appeal will lie (y) This is, of course subject to the same condition that an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court The Madras High Court has held that an order of remand in the inherent jurisdiction is not subject to revision (z) The Calcutta High Court says that if the order cannot be justified either under rule 23 or the inherent jurisdiction the proper remedy is to challenge its validity by revision (a)

Powers of High Court in appeal from order of remand—In an appeal from an order of remand preferred under O 43 r 1 cl. (u) the High Court is not confined to the question whether the order satisfies the requirements of the present rule but may also determine the correctness of the lower appellate Court s decision on the preliminary point on which the Court of first instance disposed of the case Thus if the Court of first instance dismisses a suit as barred by limitation and the appellate Court reverses the decree and remands the case under this rule and an appeal is preferred to the High Court from the order of remand the High Court ha the power to determine whether the point of limitation was correctly decided by the lower appellate Court (b)

Letters Patent appeal—An order of r mand made by a single Judge of the High Court in second appeal is a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such (c)

Privy Council appeal—See notes to s 109

Improper order of remand—Under the Code of 1882 an order under s 562 was appealable and a party might impeach the order of remand on appeal from the final decree When no appeal was preferred from the order of remand but the order was impeached on appeal from the final decree and the Court found that the order was improperly made the question arose as to whether the order should be treated as illegal or merely irregular The High Court of Allahabad held that if a remand was ordered in a case in which it ought not to have been ordered both the order of remand and all the proceedings subsequent thereto are void and illegal (d) On the other hand the Calcutta High Court held that the remand order and the sub equent proceedings are not illegal but merely irregular and the subsequent proceedings should not be set aside unless the remand had substantially affected the decision of the remanded suit on the merits and the party complaining of the irregularity was materially prejudiced thereby (e) [see s 99] The Madras High Court held that though an order of remand made in contravention of the provisions of s 562 is illegal yet the error may be cured by the consent of parties or by waiver (f) The whole difficulty has been got over in the present Code by enacting that a party who does not appeal from an order of remand in the first instance cannot afterwards dispute the correctness of the order on appeal from the final decree (g) see s 105 sub s (2)

Remand of case by consent for trial on issues not raised in appeal—The effect of an appeal is to re open the decree of the lower Court and it is competent to the appellate Court on the agreement of parties to remand the case to the lower Court for trial on issues not raised in the memorandum of appeal (h)

Trial Court—Jurisdiction to try the case remanded depends entirely upon the order of the appellate Court (i)

24 [S 565] Where the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the appellate Court to pronounce judgment, the appellate Court may, after re settling the issues, if necessary, finally determine the suit, notwithstanding that the judgment of the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has proceeded wholly upon some ground other than that on which the appellate Court proceeds

Where evidence on record sufficient appellate Court may determine case finally

Scope of the rule —The scope of this rule is limited to cases in which the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the appellate Court to determine the suit (j)

This rule does not enable an appellate Court to declare a right in favour of one of the parties where no issue has been framed on the point and the right has not been set up in the lower Court (k)

Second appeal —See s 103 and notes thereto

25 [S 566] Where the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has omitted to frame or try any issue, or to determine any question of fact, which appears to the appellate Court essential to the right decision of the suit upon the merits, the appellate Court may, if necessary, frame issues, and refer the same for trial to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred and in such case shall direct such Court to take the additional evidence required

Where appellate Court may frame issues and refer them for trial to Court whose decree appealed from and such Court shall proceed to try such issues, and shall return the evidence to the appellate Court, together with its findings thereon and the reasons therefor

The words and the reasons therefor in paragraph 2 are new

Scope of the rule —This rule refers to cases in which the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to enable the appellate Court to determine the suit

May if necessary frame issues —In framing issues under this rule the appellate Court should have regard to the provisions of O 14 r 3 which indicate the materials from which issues are to be framed The issues may be on points not taken in the grounds of appeal (l) See notes to O 14 rr 1 to 5

Power of Court to which issues are referred for trial under this rule —The Court to which issues are referred for trial under this rule has no power to try and decide the case but to try issues only It should then return the evidence to the appellate Court together with its findings thereon and the reasons therefor (m)

Court by which issues should be tried —Where issues are referred for trial under this rule they are triable only by the Court which was originally seized of the case and by no other Court (o)

New issue raised before High Court — Even if it be competent to the High Court [in second appeal] to remit a case for re hearing on an issue not raised in the pleadings nor even suggested in the Courts below this ought only to be done in exceptional cases for good cause shown and on payment of all cost thrown away (p)

Appeal —No appeal lies under the Code from an order referring issues for trial under this rule (q) Nor does an appeal lie under the Letters Patent (r)

26 [S 567] (1) Such evidence and findings shall form part of the record in the suit, and either party may, within a time to be fixed by the appellate Court, present a memorandum of objections to any finding

Findings and evidence to be put on record Objections to finding

(2) After the expiration of the period so fixed for presenting such memorandum the appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal

Determination of appeal

Where no memorandum of objection is filed —This rule provides that either party may file a memorandum of objection to the findings by the lower Court on the issues referred to it by the appellate Court It is not to be supposed however that if no objections are filed by either party the appellate Court is absolved from hearing the appeal (s) But the Lahore High Court has held that the Court may in its discretion decline to hear objections if none have been filed (t) Sub r (2) clearly indicates that even if no objections are filed the appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal That is to say even if no objections are filed to the findings the appellate Court is bound to examine the correctness of the findings and to state in its judgment the reasons (r 31) for which it either accepts or rejects the findings (u) It should not accept the findings blindly without examining the evidence on which they are based (v) See notes to r 31 Shall state the reasons for the decision

Where the appellate Court has heard arguments on some of the issues and has expressed its views thereon and remitted other issues under r 25 it is not bound on the return of findings to hear the case de novo but may confine counsel to argument upon the findings (w)

I, such order must be made to the same Court and such Court is not competent to transfer
27 the appeal for disposal to another Court (x)

Unnecessary reference—In the case of a unnecessary reference under r 25 can the Court disregard the findings returned? It can if the reference order is of a single Judge and the appeal is heard ultimately by a Bench of two Judges (y) But not otherwise for it is an interlocutory order made with jurisdiction and operative in law until set aside in review (z) If the findings conflict with other findings of fact in the judgment this will not embarrass a Court of first appeal where the entire evidence is examined A Court of second appeal may however be embarrassed and it is therefore preferable not to resort to the rule in second appeal (a) but to remand under the inherent jurisdiction (b)

Second appeal—The provisions of this and the preceding rule apply so far as may be by virtue of O 42 to second appeals Hence the High Court may in second appeal refer issues of fact for trial to the lower appellate Court but when the finding and evidence upon such issues are returned to the High Court the finding is conclusive and it cannot be challenged upon the evidence before the High Court as in first appeal The reason is that second appeal is not allowed on questions of fact The only grounds on which a second appeal is allowed are those mentioned in s 100 and these relate to errors of law or usage having the force of law or a substantial error or defect in procedure which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case on the merits The objections to the findings must therefore be restricted to the limits within which the original pleas in second appeal are confined (c)

Sending back case for revised finding—An appellate Court has no power to send back a case to the lower Court to submit a revised finding on the fact on evidence already recorded Such a course is not warranted by any one of the rules 23 to 26 of this Order (d) But if it does so it is mere irregularity within the meaning of s 99 and if the appellate Court on the revised finding returned to it itself considers the evidence on which it is based the decree will not be set aside in appeal (e)

the appellate Court may allow such evidence or document to be produced, or witness to be examined O

(2) Wherever additional evidence is allowed to be produced by an appellate Court, the Courts shall record the reason for its admission

When additional evidence may be admitted—Under this rule the admissibility of additional evidence is made to depend not upon the relevancy or materiality to the issue before the Court of the evidence sought to be admitted or upon the fact whether or not the applicants had an opportunity of adducing evidence at some earlier stage but upon whether or not the appellate Court requires the evidence to enable it to pronounce judgment or for any other substantial cause (f) Additional evidence under this rule should not be taken until the appellate Court has examined the evidence on the record and has after such examination come to the conclusion that the evidence as it stands is inherently defective as for instance when the lower Court has omitted to take the evidence of an attesting witness to a mortgage deed (g) Until this is done the appellate Court has no power to admit additional evidence not even if the evidence offered be the evidence of new matter discovered after the Court of first instance had pronounced its judgment As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Kessowji Issur v G I P Ry (h) the legitimate occasion [for the application of the present rule] is when on examining the evidence as it stands some inherent lacuna or defect becomes apparent not where a discovery is made outside the Court of fresh evidence and the application is made to import it This decision seemed to lend support to the view taken in the Calcutta case last quoted that the test of admissibility is the requirement of the Court itself and this construction has often been put upon this rule (i) But in truth sub rule (b) falls into two parts (1) the requirement of the Court and (2) any other substantial cau e Kessowji s case dealt with (1) only because (2) was barred by an unsuccessful application for review to the lower Court However a recent decision of the Privy Council makes it clear that the appellate Court has a discretion to admit additional evidence for substantial cause (j)

The power given under this rule should be exercised very sparingly by the Courts and great caution should be exercised in admitting new evidence (k) Additional evidence must not be admitted to enable a plaintiff to make out a fresh case in appeal If cases were remanded for the purposes of allowing parties to make out a new case or to improve their case by calling further evidence there would be no end to litigation (l) An appellant who has ample opportunity of giving evidence in the lower Court and elects not to do so but rests his case on the evidence as it stood ought not to be allowed to give evidence which he could have given below (m) Similarly the appellate Court should not take evidence which the lower Court refused to take as it was tendered after the case was closed (n) or admit a document tendered by a party if having the opportunity of tendering it in the Court below he omitted to do so (o) though as in Sreemati v Secretary of State (p) this may sometimes be permitted on terms as to costs Nor should it allow

r 27 additional evidence to prove the genuineness of a document held by the lower Court to be a fabrication (q) It must however be noted that where additional evidence is taken by the High Court with the assent of both sides it is not open to either party to complain of it (r)

Where the lower Court has refused to admit evidence—An appellate Court should not reverse the decree of the first Court without allowing the decree holder to give evidence which he offered in the first Court and which that Court declined to take (s) The improper rejection of evidence does not justify the reversal of the decree and the appellate Court should in that case act under this rule (t)

Where the appellate Court requires any document to be produced—An appellate Court has no power under this rule to require a document to be produced unless it is required to enable it to pronounce judgment Where judgment could be pronounced in the absence of the document the appellate Court should not allow the docume t to be produced (u) The word requires means nothing more than needs or finds needful (v)

Where the appellate Court requires a witness to be examined—The appellate Court should not under cl (b) of this rule take additional evidence wh.h impeaches the testimony of a witness called in the Court below unless that witness is also called and given an opportunity to contradict or explain the additional evidence so given otherwise no witness whatever his standing would be safe from adverse judicial comment (w) Where a witness was examined and cross examined in the Court of first instance and there was no gap in the evidence nor any new matter about which it was necessary to examine him and the appellate Judge merely cross examined him on his previous evidence in order to enable him to pronounce judgment it was held that the examination of the witness by the Court was not warranted by the provisions of this rule (x)

Or for any other substantial cause —The cause referred to here need not be ejusdem generis with the causes stated in the earlier part of the rule (y) The expression any other substantial cause confers a wide discretion on the appellate Court to admit additional evidence when the ends of justice require it ( ) It ha accordingly been held that the discovery after the filing of the appeal of fresh evidence not known to and available to the appellant after due diligence during the pendency of the proceedings in the first Court is a substantial cause within the meaning of this rule justifying the admission of such evidence in appeal (a) The Privy Council have made this clear in the case of Indrajit v Amar Singh (b) The sole issue in that case was whether a grant comprised certain villages The grantor had leased them prior to the grant and claimed that they were not included in the grant The first Court decided in favour of the grantor as there was no evidence to show that any arrangement had been made by the grantor with reference to the rent payable by the lessee The grantee appealed and during the appeal discovered documents contemporaneously executed by the grantor directing the lessee to pay rents to the grantee and an under lessee to pay his rents to the lessee These documents the High Court of Calcutta on its construction of Kessowji's case held they had no jurisdiction to admit as additional evidence But as to this the Privy Council said — O 41,

Both in the case of Sree Manchunder Rey v Gopalchunder Chuckerbutty (c) and Kessowji Issur v Great Indian Peninsula Railway (d) their Lordships were dealing with the power of the appellate Court to require evidence to be produced for the purpose of enabling the Court to pronounce judgment Those cases did not refer to the right of one or other of the parties to produce evidence which he considered essential to the right determination of the action Under Order 47 rule 1 which reproduces section 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure Act 14 of 1882 a party has a right to apply for a review of judgment to the Court that has decided the case before an appeal has been preferred. The grounds on which such an application may be made are specifically set forth in rule 1 In the present case an appeal has been preferred and a review was therefore out of the question and the respondents took the only and proper course to apply to the High Court which was in possession of the case to admit the additional evidence either under general principles of law or under the specific provisions of rule 27

The reference to the general principles of law somewhat weakens the judgment but it does appear that the grounds stated in O 47 r 1 do constitute other substantial cause (e) In another case Privy Council said that the power to take additional evidence is a power which should be exercised by a Court of Appeal with much caution and only in suits where it is satisfied that in the interests of justice it should be exercised and that such additional evidence when admitted will be evidence which if produced at the trial would have been admissible (f)

Inability to understand the legal issues involved is not substantial cause (g) nor the slackness of the party or his legal advisers (h) The Privy Council refused to allow a party an adjournment to produce the record of a former suit when the absence of this evidence was due to his own remissness (i) If the appellate Court does require a witness not called by inadvertence in the lower Court it is an error of law but one which does not justify interference in revision (j) Again if the party could have applied to the lower Court for an adjournment to call further evidence but does not do so and takes the chance of a judgment in his favour on the evidence at his disposal he will not be allowed to call it in the appellate Court (k)

Recording of reason for admission of additional evidence—The provision requiring an appellate Court to record its reason for admitting additional evidence is merely directory and not imperative Hence the omission to record the reason does not render the evidence inadmissible (l) But if one party is allowed to adduce additional evidence the opposite party should be allowed to call rebutting evidence (m) and when additional evidence was recorded and no reason stated for its admission the suit was remanded with a direction to allow the opposite party to adduce rebutting evidence (n) When the Court after the suit was adjourned for judgment recalled and examined the plaintiff without recording reasons and without giving notice to the other side it was held that it had acted without jurisdiction (o)

Second appeal—Except in the case provided in s 103 the High Court is precluded in second appeal, by virtue of the provisions of s 100 from entering into questions of fact Therefore if the Court of first appeal has admitted additional evidence under this rule the hearing in the Court of second appeal will not for that reason be treated as a first appeal so as to entitle the parties to go into questions of fact (p)

No appeal lies from a refusal by the lower appellate Court to admit fresh evidence under this rule (q) Hence if the lower appellate Court refuses to admit a document as additional evidence in appeal under this rule the High Court cannot interfere in second appeal and hold that such additional evidence ought to have been admitted by the lower appellate Court (r) But in Jetalal v Varajlal (s) a case was remanded under the inherent jurisdiction to the first appellate Court with a direction to admit additional evidence

Privy Council appeal—The rejection of an application under this rule does not give a right of appeal to the Privy Council (t)

Mode of taking additional evidence

28 [S 569] Wherever additional evidence is allowed to be produced, the appellate Court may either take such evidence, or direct the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, or any other subordinate Court, to take such evidence and to send it when taken to the appellate Court

It need hardly be stated that where the additional evidence taken by the Court consists of documents they should be exhibited in the case (u) The lower appellate Court resumes its functions as a Court of first appeal and can appoint under s 75 a commissioner for the examination of witnesses (v)

Points to be defined and recorded

29 [S 570] Where additional evidence is directed or allowed to be taken, the appellate Court shall specify the points to which the evidence is to be confined, and record on its proceedings the points so specified

Judgment in Appeal

Judgment when and where pronounced

30 [S 571] The appellate Court, after hearing the parties or their pleaders and referring to any part of the proceedings, whether on appeal or in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, to which reference may be considered necessary, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders

After hearing the parties or their pleaders—This rule authorizes the Court to pronounce judgment after hearing the parties or their pleaders Hence a judgment pronounced without hearing the parties or their representatives if they are dead is unauthorized by the Code Thus where an appellate Court heard and decided an appeal without being aware of the death of the appellant the decree was held to be a nullity (w)

Contents date and signature of judgment

31 [S 574] The judgment of the appellate Court shall be in writing and shall state—

(a) the points for determination

(b) the decision thereon

(c) the reasons for the decision, and,

(d) where the decree appealed from is reversed or varied, the relief to which the appellant is entitled, and shall at the time that it is pronounced be signed and dated by the Judge or by the Judges concurring therein

Shall state the reasons for the decision—The judgment of the appellate Court should state the reasons for the decision The reason of the rule has been stated to be to afford the litigant parties an opportunity of knowing and understanding the grounds upon which the decision proceeds with a view to enable them to exercise if they see fit and are so advised the right of second appeal conferred by s 100 If an appellate Court could dispose of appeals coming before it in a judgment which does not state the reasons for the decisions the right of second appeal might altogether be neutralized (x) The reason for the decision should be stated not only when the decree of the first Court is varied or set aside but also when it is confirmed (y) If this rule is not observed the proper form of the order to be made by the High Court in second appeal is to set aside the decree of the lower appellate Court and send back the case to that Court in order that the appeal may be disposed of according to law (z) This course was adopted where the judgment was appeal dismissed with costs (a) and in another case where the judgment was appeal rejected under s 551 [now O 41 r 11] of the Civil Procedure Code (b) Where the decree of the first Court is confirmed in appeal the Judge of the appellate Court should state his own reasons and should not confine himself to approving of the reasons of the Court of first instance (c) This is because the judgment should show on the face of it that the points in dispute were clearly before the mind of the Judge and that he exercised his own discrimination in deciding them (d) Thus where the judgment was— To deal with the grounds of appeal would be simply to repeat the judgment of the District Munsif I concur with the decision the District Munsif has given on each point The judgment of the lower Court is confirmed for the reasons therein set forth and this appeal is dismissed with costs the judgment was set aside (e) In the last mentioned case the Court observed Such a general and wholesale

31 adoption of the judgment of the Court of first instance cannot be considered as a sufficient compliance with the law The same was held where the judgment was there is no satisfactory evidence that plaintiff was ever in possession of the land in dispute and the evidence was not discussed in the judgment (f)

If the reasons for the decision are not stated by the appellate Court as fully as they ought to have been but the High Court is satisfied upon the judgment that the Judge of the lower Court had read the evidence and meant to find upon that evidence as a whole the decree of the lower Court will not be interfered with in second appeal. The proper course to be followed in such a case is to require the Judge if still holding office to supplement his judgment by giving in greater details the reasons on which it is based (g)

(2) A suit is brought on behalf of the public for (1) a declaration that the public are entitled to use certain locks on a certain river without payment of tolls and (2) a declaration that the defendant is under an obligation to keep the locks in repair A decree is passed for the plaintiff awarding the relief as to the use of the locks without payment of tolls but declaring that the defendant is under no obligation to repair the locks The defendant appeals The plaintiff neither files a cross appeal nor objections The appellate Court finds that the public are not entitled to use the locks without payment of tolls to the defendant At the same time it finds that the defendant is under an obligation to keep the locks in repair The appellate Court has power while declaring by its decree that the public are liable to pay tolls also to declare that the defendant is liable to keep the locks in repair notwithstanding that no appeal or objection was taken to that part of the decree by the plaintiff (u)

(3) Plaintiff sued for ejectment of tenants in possession of land that he had purchased and in the alternative for compensation against his vendor The first Court dismissed the suit against the tenants and awarded compensation against the vendor The plaintiff did not appeal but the vendor appealed and established that he had conveyed a good title to the plaintiff The Court of appeal reversed the decree for compensation and gave the plaintiff a decree for possession and mesne profits against the tenants (v)

It does constantly occur where some persons appeal and others do not that the Court is put in a position of having to make impossible or contradictory or unworkable orders Accordingly it has been given power to make a decree in favour of persons who have not even approached it This power may be exercised by the Court in favour of any of the parties who may not have filed any appeal or objection (w) The appellate Court may under this rule to vary the decree of the lower Court though the variation may benefit a defendent who has not appealed from the decree (x) Thus when plaintiff's claim was decreed partly against A and partly against B and A appealed and B did not the appellate Court under this rule made a decree exempting B and making A liable for the whole amount (y) The power is however discretionary In a recent Allahabad case (z) a mother and son sued as legal representatives of a reversionary heir to recover property and the suit was decreed in favour of the son but dismissed as regards the mother The mother did not appeal as she was satisfied with a decree in favour of the son On appeal to the High Court the son s suit was dismissed on the ground that he was a son by a former marriage The effect of the decision was that the mother was entitled but the Court refused to exercise its power under this rule The Allahabad High Court has held that when there is a common defence a Court of appeal may dismiss a suit as against a defendant who has not appealed (a) but not if there is no common ground of defence (b) In a Patna Case (c) the plaintiff obtained a decree in the first Court against A B and C for contribution A alone appealed and the High Court under this rule dismissed the suit not only against A but against B and C as well The plaintiff appealed and the Privy Council restored the decree of the first Court In execution proceedings it was contended that this had not the effect of reviving the decree against B and C which had become time barred But it was held that as O 41 r 33 enables an appellate Court to deal with the entire decree although the appeal may be as to part only the entire decree becomes the subject matter of the appeal even when the appeal is from part of the decree and by some only of the parties so that the final decree for purposes of limitation under Article 182 (2) was the decree of the Privy Council and that the application for execution was therefore within time Similarly the appellate Court has power under this rule to make an order for extension of time for making an award in a matter governed by the Indian Arbitration Act 1899 (d)

Cases to which rule does not apply—A sues B to recover rent Rs 295 A decree is passed in favour of A for Rs 95 only A appeals against the disallowance of the balance of the amount claimed B neither files a cross appeal nor objections against the decree The appellate Court finds that nothing is due to A from B The appellate Court has no power to dismiss A s claim in toto If B was aggrieved by the decree against him for Rs 95 he ought to have appealed or filed objections (e) Again the rule does not apply when the decree is really a combination of several decrees against several defendants (f) Mukerji J on a review of all the ca es aid the rule should be cautiously applied and only in cases where but for recourse to it the ends of justice would be defeated (g) The High Court of Allahabad has held that the Court has no power under this rule to pass a decree against a person who is not a party to the appeal (h)

Privy Council appeal—In an appeal to Privy Council relief will not be given under this rule to a party who has not appealed to the High Court A sued B and B s agent C for damages for breach of two contracts The first Court passed a decree against B in respect of both contracts and as against C made an order for co ts only A did not appeal against the di mis al of the suit as against C but both B and C appealed The High Court modified the decree making B liable only as to one contract and allowed C s appeal A appealed to Privy Council making both B and C respondents and contended that C was liable as regards the contract as to which the High Court had exonerated B But their Lordships said that the appeal against C was an appeal direct from the trial Judge which was not allowable (i)

O. 41, R. 33-35 Such other decree as the case may require —The power of the appellate Court is not limited to determining the question whether the original Court was right according to the law in force at the date of its judgment it may pass such decree as is in accordance with any later enactment which came into operation subsequent to such date (j)

Remand —A sues B for three sums of money X Y and Z A's claim is allowed as to items X and Y but disallowed as to item Z A appeals from the decree as to item Z B appeals from the decree as to items X and Y The appellate Court dismisses A's appeal, and allows B's appeal as to item X only with the result that item Y is decreed in A's favour A then appeals to the High Court as to items X and Z The High Court has power under this rule to remand the whole case for determination on the merits The effect of such an order is to empower the lower Court to reopen the case even as to item Y which was decided by the lower appellate Court in favour of A and from which decision B had not preferred an appeal to the High Court (k)

Proviso —The proviso was added by Act 9 of 1922 Its effect is that the appellate Court cannot allow a claim for compensatory costs which has been disallowed by the original Court

Clause (a) Order returning plaint to be presented to the proper Court.—Where an order is made by the first Court of appeal returning a plaint under O 7 r 10 by virtue of the powers conferred on it by s 107 the order is appealable under this clause (s) and an appeal will lie to the High Court under s 100 (t) But no appeal lies from an order of an appellate Court returning a memorandum of appeal to be presented to the proper Court The terms of cl (a) of this rule do not cover such a case nor can the reading of O 7 r 10 with s 107 justify the interpolation of the words memorandum of appeal after the word plaint in cl (a) of the present rule (u)

Clause (o).—This clause is amended by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1930 by substituting the word and figures 2 4 or 7 for 4 or 7

Clause (u) Order of remand.—Under s 104 and O 43 an appeal lies only if an order of remand has been passed under O 41 r 23 above (t)

ORDER XLIV

Pauper Appeals

Who may appeal as pauper

1 [S 592] Any person entitled to prefer an appeal who is unable to pay the fee required for the memorandum of appeal, may present an application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal, and may be allowed to appeal as a pauper, subject, in all matters, including the presentation of such application, to the provisions relating to suits by paupers, in so far as those provisions are applicable

Procedure on application for admission of appeal

Provided that the Court shall reject the application unless, upon a perusal thereof and of the judgment and decree appealed from, it sees reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law, or is otherwise erroneous or unjust

Alteration in the rule.—The words in all matters including the presentation of such application in the first paragraph are new See notes below under those words.

Unable to pay the fee.—In a Madras case (w) the petitioner had obtained a decree for maintenance and sought to appeal in forma pauperis for higher maintenance but the defendant paid Rs 571 arrears of maintenance into Court to her credit and the petition was dismissed on the ground that she had sufficient means to pay the Court fee on the memorandum of appeal See however note under O 33 r 1 Subject matter of the suit

In all matters including the presentation of such application —The present rule provides that the provision relating to suits by paupers shall apply so far as may be to appeals by paupers Therefore the application referred to in this rule for leave to appeal as a pauper must be presented by the applicant in person just as an application for leave to sue as a pauper [See O 33 r 3] This is now made clear by the addition of the words in all matters including the presentation of such application. In the absence of these words in the old section it was held by the Madras High Court that the rule as to the presentation of a pauper s petition (now contained in O 33 r 3) did not apply to pauper appeals (x) The Madras decision is no longer law

Subject to the provision relating to suits by paupers —A sues B to recover certain properties as the heir of her deceased husband The suit is dismissed A applies for leave to appeal as a pauper It is found on inquiry that A had before instituting the suit entered into an agreement falling within the terms of O 33 r 5 (d) which would have dis entitled A to sue to as a pauper The appellate Court should under these circumstances refuse leave to A to appeal as a pauper (y)

Application and memorandum of appeal —This rule requires two separate documents to be presented —a memorandum of appeal and an application for leave to appeal as a pauper When the Judge disposes of the pauper application he does not thereby necessarily dispose of the appeal He may still treat it as an existing appeal if the appellant desires to pay the full court fees on the appeal and to continue it as an ordinary appeal The Judge is under no legal obligation to dismiss the appeal when he refuses the appellant leave to appeal as a pauper (z) Following this reasoning it has been held by the High Court of Madras that where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is rejected owing to the memorandum of appeal which accompanied it being unstamped the rejection of the application does not carry with it the rejection of the memorandum of appeal The result is that if the pauper applies for time to pay the court fee and time is granted to him [149] and the court fee is paid within the time fixed by the Court the appeal must be held to be in time though the court fee may have been paid after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for filing the appeal (a)

Proviso to the rule —The proviso is mandatory (b) and is a necessary safeguard introduced by the legislature for the benefit of litigants who find themselves opposed by paupers To provide a safeguard against the proviso being overlooked the Judge admitting a pauper appeal should express and record briefly the reasons on which the leave proceeds (c) The proviso is of course not applicable unless the appeal is in forma pauperis (d) After issue of notice to the respondent and the Government Pleader it is no longer open to the Court to examine the question whether the decree is contrary to law or some usage having the force of law or is otherwise unjust or erroneous (e)

Appeal —No appeal lies under the Code from an order refusing leave to appeal as a pauper It was held in a Madras case that no appeal lies from such an order under

Limitation—See notes to s 109 above

3 [S 600] (1) Every petition shall state the grounds of appeal and pray for a certificate either that, as regards amount or value and nature, the case fulfils the requirements of section 110, or that it is otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council

Certificate as to value or fitness

Alteration in the rule—In sub rule (2) the word shall has been substituted for the word may

Petition—A petition for a certificate which was dropped when the judgment complained of was reversed on review was treated as revived when the review was held incompetent by the Privy Council (p)

Certificate—The certificate of leave to appeal and not the order for such certificate is the document which the Judicial Committee are bound to consider and act upon in determining whether leave to appeal has been properly granted or not and unless the certificate upon which the leave to appeal is based is in such a form as to justify that leave they ought to hold that leave has not properly been given (q) The certificate must make plain upon the face of it that the discretion conferred upon the High Court was invoked and exercised (r) The assent of the respondent to the issue of a certificate will not make it effective if the conditions on which it should be issued are not complied with (s)

Certificate as to fitness—Where a case fulfils the requirements of s 110 the petitioner is entitled to a certificate as of right in the ordinary course of procedure When it does not that is where the matter is under the appealable value or is not measurable by money the granting of the certificate is entirely in the discretion of the Court (t) In the former case the High Court should certify the sufficiency of the amount for appeal to the Privy Council and should also certify when the decision of the lower Court is affirmed that the appeal involves a question of law The Judicial Committee will not interfere with any question of valuation unless it can be shown that some item has been improperly valued or excluded or that there is some fundamental principle which renders the valuation unsound. On the mere question of the value of admitted items the Committee will not interfere, nor will they allow a party to contend that the valuation has been arrived at on an erroneous principle unless he has raised that contention by his printed case (u). In the latter case it is enough if the certificate states that the case is a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council (v). Before coming to the Judicial Committee for special leave to appeal in a matter which is under the appealable value or not measurable by money the party should first apply to the Court below for a certificate under this rule and s. 109 cl. (g) that the case is otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council; otherwise special leave to appeal will not be granted by the Committee except in special cases (w). See notes to s. 109 "Certificate as to fitness" and notes to s. 110 under sub head "Where the matter is under the appealable value or is not capable of valuation".

Procedure.—If the petitioner does not prosecute his petition it may be struck off for non prosecution (x).

Appeal.—An order granting a certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council is not a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and no appeal lies from such an order (y). Nor does an appeal lie under that clause from an order refusing an application for leave to the Privy Council where the refusal is based on the ground that the case did not fulfil the requirements of s. 110 above ( ).

Form.—For form of notice under sub r. (2) see App. G form no. 1[illegible].

4. [New.] For the purposes of pecuniary valuation, suits involving substantially the same questions for determination and decided by the same judgment may be consolidated; but suits decided by separate judgment shall not be consolidated, notwithstanding that they involve substantially the same question for determination.

Consolidation of suits.

Consolidation of suits.—This rule is new. In the absence of any such rule in the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Court of Allahabad that suits involving substantially the same questions for determination could be consolidated for the purpose of reaching the pecuniary limit necessary for an appeal if the property affected by the suits was the same notwithstanding that the suits were decided by separate judgments (a). According to the Calcutta decisions however such consolidation is not permissible unless the suits, besides involving the same question for determination, were decided by the same judgment (b). The Bombay High Court has allowed consolidation of suits decided by separate judgments when the point involved was the same and the parties had agreed that the evidence in one suit should be treated as evidence in the others and the reasons in the judgments in the main suit were adopted in the others (c). The present rule gives effect to the Calcutta rulings (d). It need hardly be observed that suits that can be consolidated for the purposes of pecuniary valuation must be suits actually instituted and not merely suits in gremio futuri (e)

Judgment—The judgment referred to in this rule is the judgment appealed against and not the judgment of the lower Court (f)

Inherent power to consolidate cases—This rule provides for consolidation of cases for the purposes of pecuniary valuation The High Court of Patna has held that the High Court has inherent powers to permit consolidation of cases on grounds other than those specified in this rule Accordingly where two appeals to His Majesty in Council were in substance one the two were ordered to be consolidated and tried together the Court observing that in the interest of justice and to save unnecessary expense the appeals ought to be consolidated (g)

Reference of dispute to Court of first instance

5 [New] In the event of any dispute arising between the parties as to the amount or value of the subject matter of the suit in the Court of first instance or as to the amount or value of the subject matter in dispute on appeal to His Majesty in Council, the Court to which a petition for a certificate is made under rule 2 may, if it thinks fit, refer such dispute for report to the Court of first instance which last mentioned Court shall proceed to determine such amount or value and shall return its report together with the evidence to the Court by which the reference was made

Dispute as to value of subject matter—This rule is new It gives legislative recognition to the practice followed under the Code of 1882 in cases where there was a dispute as to the value of the subject matter of the suit This practice is referred to in the undermentioned Calcutta case (h) where it was held that a plaintiff in a suit for damages cannot ensure an appeal to the Privy Council by merely placing his damage at a sufficiently high figure A claims Rs 10 000 as damages for an alleged defamation The suit is dismissed on the ground that the libel was privileged and the decision is affirmed in appeal A applies for leave to appeal to the Privy Council The mere fact that A claimed Rs 10 000 as damages is not sufficient proof that the amount of the matter in dispute is Rs 10 000 Therefore if the other party dispute the correctness of the amount A must show that the amount of the matter in dispute is Rs 10 000 When there is a contest as to the true value of the matter in dispute it has been the invariable practice—a practice sanctioned by the Judicial Committee—to ascertain by evidence and enquiry what the true value is But where an inquiry has already been made at the trial of the suit by the Court of first instance as to the value of the subject matter of the suit and the finding as to the value has been acquiesced in by the applicant the High Court need not direct a fresh inquiry under this rule (i) Where a reference is made under this rule to the Court of first instance the inquiry should be held by that Court the Court of first instance has no power to remit the investigation to some other officer (j)

Effect of refusal of certificate

6 [S 601] Where such certificate is refused, the petition shall be dismissed

Costs—Where the petition is made to the High Court and it is dismissed with costs the proper Court to execute the order is the lower Court (l)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order made by any Court other than a High Court refusing the grant of a certificate under this rule [O 43 r 1 cl (v)]

Security and deposit required on grant of certificate

7 [S 602] (1) Where the certificate is granted, the applicant shall, within ninety days or such further period, not exceeding sixty days, as the Court may upon cause shown allow, from the date of the decree complained of, or within six weeks from the date of the grant of the certificate, whichever is the later date,—

(a) furnish security in cash or in Government securities for the costs of the respondent, and

(b) deposit the amount required to defray the expense of translating, transcribing, indexing and transmitting to His Majesty in Council a correct copy of the whole record of the suit, except—

(1) formal documents directed to be excluded by any order of His Majesty in Council in force for the time being,

(2) papers which the parties agree to exclude,

(3) accounts, or portions of accounts, which the officer empowered by the Court for that purpose considers unnecessary, and which the parties have not specifically asked to be included, and

(4) such other documents as the High Court may direct to be excluded

Provided that the Court at the time granting the certificate may, after hearing any opposite party who appears, order on the ground of special hardship that some other form of security may be furnished

Provided further, that no adjournment shall be granted to an opposite party to contest the nature of such security

(l) Jogendra v. Bazid usa (1907) 34 Cal 860

(2) Where the applicant prefers to print in India the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, he shall also within the time mentioned in sub rule (1) deposit the amount required to defray the expense of printing such copy O 45,

Rule amended—The italicized words were added into this rule by Act 26 of 1920 In sub rule (1) the words originally were within six months The period is now reduced to 90 days See notes below Extension of time The provisoes were also added by the same Act

Date of the decree—This means the date on which the decree is pronounced not that on which it is signed (l)

Extension of time—It has been held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that the High Court may extend the time allowed for giving the security and making the deposit provided there are cogent reasons for doing so (m) According to the Madras High Court the cogent reasons must be such as would lead the Court to believe that the party was deligent in due time to be prepared to lodge the deposit within the limited period and that he was prevented from doing so not owing to the absenc and difficulty of getting funds but owing to some circumstances accidental or otherwise over which he had no control or owing to mistake which the Court would consider not unreasonable or caused by negligence (n) On the other hand it has been held by the Chief Court of the Punjab that poverty is a cogent reason for extending the time if the amount required is large and the applicant has deposited a substantial portion of the amount within the time originally allowed (o) Prior to Act 26 of 1920 it was the uniform practice to extend time on good cause shown But the object of the amending Act was to expedite Privy Council appeals and the restrictive words used limit the Court s discretion so that the Court can in no case grant an extension of more than sixty days (p) The Allahabad High Court has held that the shorter period allowed by the amending Act does not apply when the decree was passed before the Act came into force (q) The Bombay High Court has however held that under rule 9 of the Privy Council Rules 1920 an extension can be granted (r)

Security in case of consolidated appeal—Where two or more appeals are consolidated for purposes of pecuniary valuation the security required by this rule is the whole security which the appellants together have to furnish and not only a part of it. Therefore if two or more appeals are consolidated and some sets of appellants furnish the security required from them but others do not the consolidated appeal cannot be admitted under r 8 below (s)

Records—The Privy Council have strongly condemned the inclusion in the record of unnecessary papers and disallowed the costs occasioned thereby (t)

Delay—If delay in the preparation of the record is due to the inaction of the appellant it seems that the appeal may be certified as not effectually prosecuted (u)

Appeal—No appeal lies under cl 15 of the Charter from an order refusing to extend the time for furnishing security for costs and directing the appeal to be struck off (v)

8 [S 603] Admission of appeal and procedure thereon Where such security has been furnished and deposit made to the satisfaction of the Court, the Court shall—

(a) declare the appeal admitted,

(b) give notice thereof to the respondent,

(c) transmit to His Majesty in Council under the seal of the Court a correct copy of the said record, except as aforesaid, and

(d) give to either party one or more authenticated copies of any of the papers in the suit on his applying therefor and paying the reasonable expenses incurred in preparing them

Such security —See notes to r 7 above Security in case of consolidated appeal

Notice—For form of notice under cl (b) of this rule see App G form no 10 The accidental omission of notice is not a sufficient ground for rehearing provided the respondents knew that the appeal had been admitted (u)

9 [S 604] Revocation of acceptance of security At any time before the admission of the appeal the Court may, upon cause shown, revoke the acceptance of any such security and make further directions thereon

9-A Power to dispense with notices in case of deceased parties Nothing in these rules requiring any notice to be served on or given to an opposite party or respondent shall be deemed to require any notice to be served on or given to the legal representative of any deceased opposite party or deceased respondent in a case, where such opposite party or respondent did not appear either at the hearing in the Court whose decree is complained of or at any proceedings subsequent to the decree of that Court

Provided that notices under sub rule (2) of rule 3 and under rule 8 shall be given by affixing the same in some conspicuous place in the Court house of the Judge of the District in which the suit was originally brought, and by publication in such newspapers as the Court may direct

This rule was added by Act 26 of 1920

Power to order further security or payment

10 [S 605] Where at any time after the admission of an appeal but before the transmission of the copy of the record except as aforesaid to His Majesty in Council, such security appears inadequate, or further payment is required for the purpose of translating transcribing, printing, indexing or transmitting the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, the Court may order the appellant to furnish within a time to be fixed by the Court, other and sufficient security, or to make, within like time the required payment

Effect of failure to comply with order

11 [S 606] Where the appellant fails to comply with such order, the proceedings shall be stayed, and the appeal shall not proceed without an order in this behalf of His Majesty in Council, and in the meantime execution of the decree appealed from shall not be stayed

Refund of balance deposit

12 [S 607] When the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, has been transmitted to His Majesty in Council, the appellant may obtain a refund of the balance (if any) of the amount which he has deposited under rule 7

Powers of Court pending appeal

13 [S 608] (1) Notwithstanding the grant of a certificate for the admission of any appeal, the decree appealed from shall be unconditionally executed, unless the Court otherwise directs

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit on special cause shown by any party interested in the suit, or otherwise appearing to the Court,—

(a) impound any movable property in dispute or any part thereof, or

(b) allow the decree appealed from to be executed, taking such security from the respondent as the Court thinks fit for the due performance of any order which His Majesty in Council may make on the appeal, or

13 (c) stay the execution of the decree appealed from, taking such security from the appellant as the Court thinks fit for the due performance of the decree appealed from, or of any order which His Majesty in Council may make on the appeal, or

(d) place any party seeking the assistance of the Court under such conditions or give such other direction respecting the subject-matter of the appeal, as it thinks fit, by the appointment of a receiver or otherwise

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words admitting the appeal which occurred in the first paragraph of the old section after the word Court have been omitted Those words gave rise to a conflict of decisions on the question whether the Court had power under the old section to stay the execution of the decree appealed from after a petition had been presented for leave to appeal but before the appeal was admitted It was held by the High Court of Bombay that the Court had the power (x) On other hand it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the Court had no such power the decision being based on the ground that the words the Court admitting the appeal indicated that no stay could be granted until the appeal was admitted (y) The words admitting the appeal have been omitted to make it clear that the power conferred by this rule may be exercised at any time after the presenting of the petition and even before the grant of a certificate for the admission of the appeal

Another result of the omission of the words admitting the appeal after the word Court is to invest the High Court with power to stay execution notwithstanding that an appeal has been admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council ( ) Under the Code of 1882 it was held that since the powers conferred by the corresponding s 608 could only be exercised by the Court admitting the appeal the High Court had no power to stay execution where the appeal was admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council (a)

It seems unnecessary to add that a District Court cannot stay execution and that O 41 does not apply (b)

2 The words by the appointment of a receiver or otherwise at the end of cl. (d) are new

Stay of execution before grant of certificate —See notes above Alterations in the rule No 1

Clause (b)—The respondent decree holder's failure to give security will not deprive him of the benefit of s 15 of the Limitation Act (e) O rr

Clause (c)—If the Court fixes a time for furnishing security as a condition of stay of execution it is advisable that the time for tender of security should be specified with further directions for the inquiry as to its sufficiency (f) Proceedings for final decree for partition after a preliminary decree has been passed are not execution proceedings which can be stayed under this rule (g)

Security after execution—The Court has power to require security to be given under this rule even after the decree has been executed wholly or in part (h) It has also the power to stay further execution after the decree has been partially executed (i)

Stay of execution where appeal admitted by special leave—See notes above Alterations in the rule No 1 second paragraph

Appointment of receiver where appeal admitted by special leave—The High Court has power to appoint a receiver under cl (d) notwithstanding that the appeal was admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council (j)

Practice—Applications of the character mentioned in this rule ought always to be made in the first instance at any rate to the Court in India which has ample power to deal with the matter according to the circumstances of the peculiar case and has knowledge of details which the Judicial Committee cannot possess on an interlocutory application (k) If the application is refused by the High Court and the Judicial Committee is of opinion that the application ought to have been granted it may grant a stay of execution But more than this it will not do for instance it will not appoint a receiver of the property under attachment nor take the security referred to in cls (b) and (c) of sub rule (2) In such cases the Judicial Committee will grant leave to the applicant to apply to the High Court with an intimation of its opinion As the order is that of the King in Council the High Court is bound to take notice of it and to govern itself accordingly (l)

Appeal—No appeal lies under cl 15 of the Letters Patent from an order refusing to stay execution pending appeal to the Privy Council (m)

Procedure to enforce orders of King in Council

15 [S 610] (1) Whoever desires to obtain execution of any order of His Majesty in Council shall apply by petition, accompanied by a certified copy of the decree passed or order made in appeal and sought to be executed, to the Court from which the appeal to His Majesty was preferred

(2) Such Court shall transmit the order of His Majesty in Council to the Court which passed the first decree appealed from, or to such other Court as His Majesty in Council by such order may direct, and shall (upon the application of either party) give such directions as may be required for the execution of the same, and the Court to which the said order is so transmitted shall execute it accordingly, in the manner and according to the provisions applicable to the execution of its original decrees

(3) When any monies expressed to be payable in British currency are payable in India under such order, the amount so payable shall be estimated according to the rate of exchange for the time being fixed at the date of the making of the order by the Secretary of State for India in Council with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty s Treasury for the adjustment of financial transactions between the Imperial and the Indian Governments

(4) Unless His Majesty in Council is pleased otherwise to direct no order of His Majesty in Council shall be inoperative on the ground that no notice has been served on or given to the legal representative of any deceased opposite party or deceased respondent in a case where such opposite party or respondent did not appear either at the hearing in the Court whose decree was complained of or at any proceedings subsequent to the decree of that Court, but such order shall have the same force and effect as if it had been made before the death took place O 45,

Alterations in the rule —Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the old section which related to the enforcement of the liability of a surety for the costs of the respondents have been omitted in view of the general rule now laid down in s 145 Para 4 was added by Act 26 of 1920 in order to prevent delays in the disposal of Privy Council appeals

Jurisdiction of Patna High Court —The Patna High Court has no jurisdiction to execute an order of His Majesty in Council passed in an appeal from a decree of the Calcutta High Court on appeal from a subordinate Court in Behar The application for execution of such an order should be made to the Calcutta High Court (n)

Whoever desires to obtain execution —It may be that where a decree has been passed in favour of a number of persons jointly an application under this rule by one or more of them would be sufficient to entitle all of them to apply for execution in the Court below But it is not so where several persons are by a decree declared entitled to separate specific shares say of an ijmali share in which case each person obtains by the decree a right to a separate share In such a case no single plaintiff is entitled to execute the decree on behalf of all the plaintiffs from which it follows that an application under sub r (1) by some of the plaintiffs does not entitle all of them to apply under sub r (2) for execution to the Court to which the order of His Majesty in Council is sent for execution under that sub rule (o)

Functions of the High Court under this rule —The act of the High Court in receiving and filing orders of His Majesty in Council under this rule is a purely ministerial function The High Court therefore has no power under this rule to discuss the effect of the order of His Majesty in Council on an application to file the order If the order is impeached as erroneous the proper course for the party aggrieved by the order is to apply to His Majesty in Council to make the necessary alteration or modification in the order (p)

Execution. —The word execution includes restitution as described in s 144 A person therefore who desires to obtain execution though it be by way of restitution must apply in the first instance to the Court indicated by this rule (q) The provisions of this rule are mandatory so that if the petition is presented to a different Court the execution application is liable to be dismissed (r)

Enforcement of liability of surety—A obtains a decree against B in a High Court for possession of certain immovable property B appeals to the Privy Council and C stands surety for A's costs of the appeal [r 7 sub r 1 cl (a)] If the appeal is dismissed with costs A may proceed against C for costs by an application for execution [s 145]

Assuming in the case put above that A applies for execution of the decree and that possession of the property is delivered to him on D standing surety for re delivery of the property to B and for the payment of mesne profits in the event of B's appeal being successful [r 13 sub r (2) cl (b)] and that the Privy Council allows B's appeal and reverses the decree of the High Court in that event if A fails to re deliver the property or to pay the mesne profits to B B may proceed against D by an application for execution [s 145] (t)

Restitution—A obtains a decree against B for possession of certain immovable property Possession of the property is delivered to him in execution The decree is then set aside in appeal to the Privy Council Pending the appeal to the Privy Council the property is sold in execution of a decree obtained by C against A and it is purchased by P B is entitled on reversal of the decree by the Privy Council to restitution of the property as against P the latter being a representative of A within the meaning of s 47 (u) The Patna High Court considers that proceedings for restitution are not proceedings in execution and so in Patna applications for restitution consequent on a Privy Council decree are not made under this rule to the High Court but to the trial Court (v) The Allahabad High Court treats such an application as one to enforce an Order in Council and as subject as regards limitation to art 183 of the Limitation Act (w) See note under s 144 Against whom restitution may be claimed and whether a proceeding under this section is a proceeding in execution

Mesne profits—Where a party is dispossessed of land in pursuance of a decree of the High Court and the decree is reversed in appeal to the Privy Council he is entitled not only to restoration of the land, but to mesne profits during the period of dispossession though the order of His Majesty in Council may be silent as to such profits (x) See s 144

Rate of exchange—The Court have differed on the question whether the words for the time being refer to the rate of exchange at the date of the passing of the order or to that current when the amount is realised. The former view is held by the Calcutta High Court (y) the latter by the Allahabad High Court (z)

Interest on costs—Where interest on costs is not allowed in the order of His Majesty in Council such interest cannot be given by any Court in this country (a)

Letters Patent appeal—An appeal lies under cl 1ʋ of the Letters Patent from an order of a single Judge of a High Court refusing to transmit for execution the order of His Majesty in Council as provided by sub rule (2) of this rule (b)

Limitation—An application for execution under this rule is governed by Art 183 of the Limitation Act 1908 (c)

Dismissal of appeal for want of prosecution—Where an appeal is preferred to the Privy Council from the decree of a High Court but the appeal s dismissed for want of prosecution the order of His Majesty in Council does not amount to a decree at all for purposes of limitation or for any other purpose Such an order does not deal judicially with the matter of the suit but merely recognizes authoritatively that the appellant had not complied with the conditions under which the appeal was open to him and that therefore he is in the same position as if he had not appealed at all (d)

16 [S 611] The orders made by the Court which executes the order of His Majesty in Council, relating to such execution, shall be appealable in the same manner and subject to the same rules as the orders of such Court relating to the execution of its own decrees

Appeal from order relating to execution

Reference

1 [S 617] Where, before or on the hearing of a suit or an appeal in which the decree is not subject to appeal, or where, in the execution of any such decree, any question of law or usage having the force of law arises, on which the Court trying the suit or appeal, or executing the decree, entertains reasonable doubt, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer such statement with its own opinion on the point for the decision of the High Court

Reference of question to High Court

Alterations in the rule—

1 The words is not subject to appeal have been substituted for the word final as the expression final decree is now used in this Code in contradistinction to a preliminary decree

r 1 2 The words "or the construction of a document which construction may affect the merits" which occurred in the old section after the words "having the force of law" have been omitted as they are sufficiently covered by the power to refer any question of law

Hearing of a suit or appeal—A reference can be made to the High Court under this rule only in a suit or an appeal in a suit and not in every matter before the Court in which a point arises on which the Court entertains reasonable doubt (e) Thus where a pleader was fined Rs 25 by a Subordinate Judge for refusing to act on behalf of his client after receipt of retaining fee and on appeal the District Judge referred the matter to the High Court under this rule it was held that no reference could properly be made under this rule as there was no suit or appeal in a suit (f) Nor can any reference be made in a proceeding other than a suit or an appeal in a suit even by virtue of the provisions of s 141 above (g) See notes to s 141 "The procedure provided in this Code etc"

Decree not subject to appeal—This rule does not authorize a reference to the High Court except in a suit or appeal in which the decree is not subject to appeal. Therefore no reference can be made to the High Court in a matter in which an appeal lies for in appealable cases a remedy to correct possible error is provided by the appeal It is only when a decree is not subject to appeal that a reference can be made under this rule (h) In Pamphul v Durga (i) a Munsif being of opinion that he had no jurisdiction to entertain a particular suit returned the plaint to be presented to the proper Court On appeal the District Judge referred the matter to the High Court The High Court held that the order of the Munsif returning the plaint being an appealable order [O 43 r 1 cl (a)] the High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the reference On the same ground it is held that there could be no reference under this rule in a matter of probate and that an order made by a District Judge on an application for probate being appealable it cannot be referred for the opinion of the High Court under this rule though when referred the High Court may deal with the case as a Court of concurrent jurisdiction under s 264 of the Indian Succession Act (j)

Jurisdiction—A Judge who has no jurisdiction to hear a suit or an appeal has no jurisdiction to make a reference before or at the hearing of such suit or appeal (k)

Reasonable doubt—A reference under this rule can only be made when a Judge entertains a reasonable doubt on a question of law or usage having the force of law A Judge cannot ordinarily entertain a reasonable doubt on a point clearly decided by the rulings of the High Court to which he is subordinate unless the authority of the decision can be questioned by virtue of anything said or decided in the Privy Council (l) If the Court has no reasonable doubt it should not make a reference merely because it is asked to make one (m)

Such Court shall proceed to dispose of the case in conformity with the decision of the High Court —In Yule & Co v Mahomed Hossein (n) the Small Cause Court passed a decree for the plaintiffs contingent on the opinion of the High Court The High Court held that upon the case presented by the plaintiffs they could not recover The judgment of the High Court was transmitted to the Small Cause Court and the Small Cause Court Judge instead of entering judgment for the defendants allowed the suit to be withdrawn by the plaintiffs with liberty to bring a fresh suit [O 23 r 1] Upon a petition for revision it was held by the High Court that the Small Cause Court was bound on receipt of the decision of the High Court to dispose of the case in conformity with that decision and to enter judgment for the defendants and that the order allowing the plaintiffs to withdraw from the suit [illegible]

At any time before judgment —A reference under this rule can only be made before judgment (o)

7 [S 646 B] (1) Where it appears to a District Court that a Court subordinate thereto has, by reason of erroneously holding a suit to be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or not to be so cognizable, failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law, or exercised a jurisdiction not so vested, the District Court may, and if required by a party shall, submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court with respect to the nature of the suit to be erroneous

(2) On receiving the record and statement the High Court may make such order in the case as it thinks fit

(3) With respect to any proceedings subsequent to decree in any case submitted to the High Court under this rule the High Court may make such order as in the circumstance appears to it to be just and proper

(4) A Court subordinate to a District Court shall comply with any requisition which the District Court may make for any record or information for the purposes of this rule

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act 9 of 1887 sec 16 —Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act runs as follows Save as expressly provided by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes shall not be tried by any other Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by which the suit is triable

If required by a party shall —It has been held by the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta that a District Court is bound to make a reference under this rule if one of the parties requires it to do so (p) On the other hand the Allahabad High Court has held that the word shall is not mandatory but merely directory and that a District Court should not make a reference under this rule unless it is satisfied that a Court subordinate thereto has come to an erroneous finding on a point of jurisdiction in regard to the particular suit before it (q) O 46

Statement of reasons —Where a reference is made to the High Courts under this rule the District Court which makes the reference should state its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court with respect to the nature of the suit to be erroneous (r)

Powers of High Court under this rule —There is a conflict of decisions as to the powers of the High Court under this rule as will be seen from the cases considered below —

Illustration

A suit cognizable by a Small Cause Court is tried by a District Munsif on the original side without objection to his jurisdiction and a decree is passed for the plaintiff The defendant appeals to the District Court making no reference to the question of jurisdiction in his grounds of appeal. The District Court reverses the decree passed by the Munsif The plaintiff applies to the High Court under s 115 for a revision of the decision of the District Court It is clear that the suit being one of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court the District Munsif had no jurisdiction to entertain it under his ordinary jurisdiction having regard to the provisions of section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act set forth above Nor had the District Court jurisdiction to entertain the appeal from the decree in such a suit What order should the High Court make assuming of course that the suit was one of a nature cognisable by a Small Cause Court and which of the following courses should it adopt ?—

(1) Should the High Court set aside the decrees of both the Courts below and return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court ?

(2) Or has it power to consider the case on the merits and to decline to interfere in the matter even though in strict law the suit should have been tried under a different procedure ?

(3) Or should it not set aside the decree of the District Court as having been made without jurisdiction and then dispose of the case on its merits leaving the decree passed by the Munsif to stand or not as may in its discretion appear best ?

The first course was adopted by White C J in a Madras case where the learned Judge observed that there was no alternative but to adopt that course (s)

The second course was adopted by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned cases (t) where the Court declined to interfere on the ground that they had a complete discretion in the matter

The third course was adopted in a recent case by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (u) The full Bench held dissenting from the Calcutta decisions cited above and overruling an earlier Madras case (v) in which the Calcutta decision was followed that the decree of the District Judge should be set aside as having been passed without jurisdiction That decree was accordingly set aside and the decree passed by the Munsif was restored The same course was adopted in a Bombay case (w)

As regards the Allahabad High Court it declined to interfere in one case on the ground that the present rule did not apply unless there was an erroneous holding as to jurisdiction and that could not occur if no objection to jurisdiction was taken by either

ORDER XLVII

Review

1 Application for review of judgment

1 [S 623] (1) Any person considering himself aggrieved—

(a) by a decree or order from which an appeal is allowed, but from which no appeal has been preferred,

(b) by a decree or order from which no appeal is allowed, or

(c) by a decision on a reference from a Court of Small Causes and who, from the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which after the exercise of due diligence, was not within his knowledge or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, or for any other sufficient reason, desires to obtain a review of the decree passed or order made against him, may apply for a review of judgment to the Court which passed the decree or made the order

(2) A party who is not appealing from a decree or order may apply for a review of judgment notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal by some other party except where the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and the appellant or when being respondent, he can present to the appellate Court the case on which he applies for the review

Review under the Code of 1859 and the Code of 1877—Under the Code of 1859 s 376 an application for review could be entertained on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence which was not within his [applicant s] knowledge or could not be adduced by him at the time when such decree was passed or for any other good and sufficient reason Under the Code of 1877, s 623 an application for review could be entertained on the ground of discovery of new and important matter or evidence which after the exercise of due diligence was not within his [applicant s] knowledge or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record or for any other sufficient reason Sec 623 of the Code of 1882 is in this respect the same as s 623 of the Code of 1877 The present rule is a reproduction of s 623 of the Code of 1882

In what cases a party may apply for a review —A party aggrieved by a decree or a decision specified in clause (a) (b) or (c) of sub rule (1) [see s 114] may apply for a review in any of the following cases —

I on the ground of the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which after the exercise of due diligence was not within the knowledge of the party or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made or

II on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record

III for any other sufficient reason

Ex parte decree or order —A party aggrieved may apply for a review of an ex parte decree or order ( ) and if the case falls within this rule it is no objection that an application under O 9 r 13 could have been made and that it is barred by limitation (a) See notes under O 9 r 13 and O 41 r 19 The Court has jurisdiction to review an ex parte order for issue of writ for delivery of possession and to recall the writ (b)

Miscellaneous proceedings —The provisions of the Code as to review apply to proceedings under the Indian Succession Act and an order granting letters of administration is open to review (c)

Order on application —Where a party aggrieved by a decree applies for review the application may either be granted or rejected (r 4 below)

If the application is rejected the case ends there and the parties are relegated to the old decree The order rejecting the application is final and no appeal lies therefrom (r 7) but the party aggrieved may appeal from the old decree

If the application is admitted the case is re heard and it may result in a repetition of the decree or in some variation of it In either case the whole matter having been re opened there is a fresh decree (d) until that fresh decree is passed the old decree remains in suspense (e)

I Discovery of new and important matter or evidence —When a review is sought on the ground of the discovery of new evidence the evidence must be (1) relevant and (2) of such a character that if it had been given in the suit it might possibly have altered the judgment (f) As stated by Lord Loreburn L C in Brown v Dean (g) It [new evidence] must at least be such as is presumably to be believed and if believed would be conclusive Applications on this ground must be treated with great caution and as required by r 4 (2) (b) the Court must be satisfied that the materials placed before it in accordance with the formalities of the law do prove the existence of the facts alleged (h) It is not only the discovery of new and important evidence that entitles a party to apply for a review but the discovery of any new and important matter which was not within the knowledge of the party when the decree was made A sued B to recover a sum of money alleged to be due under a certain agreement and obtained a decree B appealed to the Privy Council Pending the appeal A brought another suit against B to recover another sum of money alleged to have become due under the same agreement and obtained a decree on the strength of the former decree Their Lordships of the Privy Council reversed the first decree B then applies for a review of the second decree and the application was allowed on the ground that in the circumstances of the

1 case the Privy Council decision was new and important matter on which to apply for a review of the second decree (i) This decision stands on the special facts of the case In Amrit Lal v Madho Das (j) it was held that where a decree is based upon a decision of a Divisional Bench of the High Court and that decision is subsequently overruled by the Full Bench the reversal is no ground for a review of the decree Nor is the production of a new ruling or authority which if brought to the notice of the Jud e at the first hearing might have altered the judgment new and important matter within the meaning of this rule (k) An alteration of the law by subsequent legislation is not discovery of new matter justifying a review (l)

It is not to be supposed that the discovery of new evidence is by itself sufficient to entitle a party to a review of judgment The provision relating to review contemplates grounds which would alter or cancel the decree Thus if a suit is dismissed on two grounds namely (1) that no notice of suit was given and (2) that the plaintiff was illegitimate and the plaintiff applies for a review on the ground of discovery of new evidence on the question of legitimacy it is a good ground for rejecting the application that even if the Court held on the reception of new evidence that the plaintiff was legitimate it would not lead to the modification or setting aside of the original decree as the want of notice was fatal to the suit (m)

II Mistake or error apparent on the face of the record—A review may be granted whether on any ground urged at the original hearing of the suit or not whenever the Court considers that it is necessary to correct an evident error or omission (n) Thus a review was granted where an error on a point of law was apparent on the face of the judgment (o) e g failure to apply the law of limitation to the facts found by the Court (p) Similarly a review was granted when the provisions of the second paragraph of s 57 of the Code of 1882 [now s 98 sub s (?)] were wrongly applied (q) A review may also be granted where there is an error of procedure apparent on the face of the record e.g where judgment is delivered without previous notice to the pa ties (r) But it is no ground for review that the judgment proceeds on an incorrect exposition of the law (s) or on a ruling which has subsequently been modified (t) or reversed (u) See s 152

III For any other sufficient reason —These words mean that the reason must be one sufficient to the Court to which the application for review is made and they cannot be held to be limited to the discovery of new and important matter or evidence or the occurring of a mistake or error apparent on the record (v) Thus in Ghansham v Lal Singh (w) a reference to a Full Bench was disposed of in the absence of the respondent The respondent proved that his absence at the hearing was due to the fact that notice of the reference was not served upon him It was held that this constituted a sufficient reason for granting a review In Suleman v The New Oriental Bank Corporation Ltd (x) a review was granted on the ground that the question that had arisen at the hearing was one of great general commercial importance In Gopal v Solomon (y) all the parties counsel on both sides and the Judge were at the trial of the suit under a misapprehension as to the contents of a document It was held that this was a sufficient reason for granting a review In a Patna case where an auction purchaser applied for an order for delivery of possession and the order was made it was held that it was sufficient ground for reviewing the order that the application was on the face of it barred by limitation (z) But a party who not only had an opportunity of raising a question but who did raise it and on argument abandoned it cannot under ordinary circumstances be allowed to agitate the question in review (a) Nor is it a sufficient reason for granting a review that if another opportunity was given to the applicant he would satisfy the Court that its previous order was wrong (b) Omission to raise a point of law is not sufficient (c)

The ground of review must be something which existed at the date of the decree and the rule does not authorize the review of a decree which was right when it was made on the ground of the happening of some subsequent event (d) But when a decree fixed a period for the performance of a condition and a railway strike made timely performance impossible the High Court of Allahabad held that it had jurisdiction to extend the time in review (e)

In 1922 the Privy Council reviewed the case law in the case of Chhajju Ram v Neki (f) in which their Lordships said there was no little inconsistency (due partly to the fact that prior to the Code of 1877 the ground for review was not so restrictive) and laid down the rule that any other sufficient reason means a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously The case was one in which the Punjab Chief Court had granted a review on the ground that the judgment had proceeded on an incorrect exposition of the law This was held by the Privy Council not to be analogous and therefore not a sufficient reason The actual decision of the Privy Council is not open to criticism but the general rule laid down by their Lordships has not escaped criticism Mukerjee J in Gopika Ram v Mahar Ali (g) referring to Chhajju s case said Whether any analogy can be discovered between the two grounds specified, namely the discovery of new and important matter or evidence and some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record need not be discussed But whether a particular reason is analogous to either one or other of these two grounds may obviously lead to very refined if not subtle arguments Again in Narain Das v Chiranji Lal (h) the Allahabad High Court described the rule in Chhajju s case as technical and said in our opinion the words in O 47 r 1 for any other sufficient reason are not only very wide in themselves but are intentionally so made by the Legislature because of the possibility of exceptional cases arising in which obvious injustice would be worked by a strict adherence to the terms of the decree There is much force in these criticisms for as Mukerjee J pointed out in Probhas Kumar v Nithar Lal (i) the powers exercisable under s 151 and under O 47 r 1 are not mutually exclusive and there are several cases where it was held to be immaterial whether the review was granted under O 47 or under the inherent jurisdiction e g where a suit was by mistake dismissed for default though a plaintiff was present in person (j)

1 or where a suit was dismissed for failure to make up the deficit of Court fee and it was found that the Court fee had been embezzled by a pleader s clerk (k) or where important evidence was produced just after judgment was signed (l) Mukerjee J s anticipation of refined and subtle arguments was realized in a Rangoon case (m) where a Judge held that a reason that was not ejusdem generis might still be a reason that was at least analogous

Chhajju s case however is the law and has been followed (n) But there are some inconsistencies in the cases which follow it and these serve to illustrate the difficulty of applying the rule Thus though Chhajju s case decided that an incorrect exposition of the law was not a sufficient reason yet in Murari Rao v Balwant Dikshit (o) an error as to the Hindu law of succession was held to be an error patent on the face of the record and again in Brindaban v Damodar (p) the Calcutta High Court reviewed its judgment because it construed a leading case in Hindu law in a sense different to that adopted in a subsequent Privy Council decision Anoth r similar case is Garibani v Suraja (q) In that case a landlord had obtained a decree for rent against tenants of a 12 anna share of a holding and advertised the whole holding for sale The tenants of the 4 anna share sued to restrain the sale alleging fraud and collusion The Judge dismis ed the suit and then granted a review as a case on which he had relied had been sub equently overruled In appeal Dawson Miller C J admitted that if review was on the ground of error patent on the face of the record no appeal lay under rule 7 but said that in view of Chhajju s case it could not be contended that review had proceeded on this ground He held that the review was on the ground of discovery of new matter and that in this view the condition of rule 4 (2) (b) was not fulfilled as the subsequent overrulin deci ion had been published before the trial and accordingly reversed the order for review Of other cases decided on the rule in Chhajju s case to deserve special notice Bindubashini v Secretary of State (r) arose out of a motion by the Collector to hold an inquiry under s 19 H of the Court Fees Act into the value of an estate The Government pleader applied for an adjournment to call his evidence but the Judge refu ed and gave judgment The Judge then granted a review as the Government pleader was under the impression that the case would not be taken up This was reversed in revision by Rankin J as the case was not analogous to excusable failure to bring before the Court new and important matter or evidence and as there was an element of ne li gence in the case for the Judge had not found that there was any justification for the Government pleader s erroneous impression The other case Mahadeo v Lakshmi Narayan (s) decides that since Chhajju s case a plaintiff whose suit has been dismis ed under O 9 r 8 has no remedy by way of review

An execution application that has been dismissed cannot be restored by way of review (t)

When a compromise has been entered into a decree the Court cannot review its order on the sole ground that the compromise has been entered into under undue influence or coercion (u) Nor is review a minor s remedy for setting aside a decree passed through the negligence of his guardian (v) Where a suit is contested by the defendant but on the date fixed for the last hearing his agent admits the plaintiff s claim in collusion with the plaintiff the ca e is not one of a review of judgment the remedy of the aggrieved party lies in filing a suit to set aside the decree (w) Where the Court dismi ed a suit for default of appearance of the plaintiff on a date which the Court under a mistake supposed to have been fixed for the hearing of the suit and also under a mistake that notice of the hearing on that date was given to the plaintiff it was held by the Pangoon High Court that an application for review would lie (x)

Where an appeal dismissed summarily under O 38 r 11 is admitted on an applica tion for review the appeal is not restricted to the single ground which was made the basis of the application for review (a)

Order—An order under O 33 r 7 refusing leave to sue as a pauper is open to review under this rule (b) And so is an order as to costs (c) and an order rejecting an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council (d) But an order under s 39 (h) of the Guardians and Wards Act 1890 is not open to review (e)

Where an appeal has been preferred before application for review—After an appeal has been preferred from a decree no application can be made for a review of that decree This clearly appears from cl (a) of sub r (1) An appeal is not the less preferred within the meaning of this rule though it may be dismissed sum marily under O 41 r 11 Hence a party against whom a decree has been passed is precluded after dismissal of his appeal under O 41 r 11 from applying for a review (f) If an appeal is dismissed for default and an application under O 41 r 19 has become time barred review is incompetent (g) So also if an appeal to Privy Council has been dismissed by the High Court for want of prosecution (h) But if the appeal is withdrawn it is as though no appeal had been preferred and hence it is open to the party to apply for a review (i) See notes to O 41 r 27 under the head Or for any other substantial cause

Filing of appeal pending application for review—Where an application or review has been presented by a party to the suit and an appeal is afterwards pre ferred from the same decree whether by the same party or by the other party to the suit the Court to which the application for review is made is not thereby deprived of jurisdiction to entertain the application (j) But that power exists so long as the appeal

No review allowed on a question of fact after decision of second appeal —The High Court cannot in second appeal allow an application for a review of judgment on the ground of discovery of new evidence after the appeal is disposed of by that Court The reason is that the High Court is bound in second appeal by the findings of fact of the lower appellate Court But if the application is made before the disposal of the appeal it may be a ground for allowing the appellant to withdraw the appeal to enable him to apply to the lower appellate Court for a review of its judgment on the ground of discovery of new evidence (n)

Application to set aside order made by another Judge —One Judge of a High Court cannot set aside an order made by another Judge of that Court even though the order be wrong The remedy lies in review on the grounds mentioned in this rule (o)

2 [S 624] An application for review of a decree or order of a Court, not being a High Court, upon some ground other than the discovery of such new and important matter or evidence as is referred to in rule 1 or the existence of a clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree, shall be made only to the Judge who passed the decree or made the order sought to be reviewed, but any such application may, if the Judge who passed the decree or made the order has ordered notice to issue under rule 4, sub rule (2), proviso (a) be disposed of by his successor

To whom application for review may be made—This is s 624 recast with proviso (c) to s 626 superadded to it The alteration of language does not involve any alteration of law

Rule 1 sub r (1) provide that the application for review of a decree or order should be made to the Court which passed the decree or order sought to be reviewed That rule read with the present rule leads to the following propositions —

I Where a decree is passed by a High Court Judge the application for review of the decree may be made to that Judge or to his successor in office whatever be the ground on which the review is sought

II (1) Where a decree is passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge the application for review of the decree may be made to the Judge who delivered the judgment or to his successor in office provided the review is sought on the ground of—

(a) the discovery of new and important matter or evidence or

(b) some clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree

(2) Where a decree is passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge and the review is sought not upon the grounds mentioned above but upon other grounds the application shall be made to the very Judge who passed the decree it cannot be made to his successor in office (r) Thus if a review is sought of a decree passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge on the ground of a supposed error of judgment (s) or if a review is sought of an order made by such a Judge on the ground that the order was made in the absence of the applicant and without giving him notice of the hearing (t) the application for review shall be made only to the Judge who passed the decree or made the order Such an application however may be disposed of by the successor of the Judge who passed the decree provided that the Judge who passed the decree has ordered notice to issue under rule 4 sub rule (2) proviso (a) It is not necessary that the application should also be disposed of by the Judge who passed the decree (u)

Rule 5 provides for the hearing of applications for review

3 [S 625] The provisions as to the form of preferring appeals shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to applications for review

Form of applications for review

This rule relates to form and does not enlarge the right It does not make O 43 r 1 (t) applicable to a refusal to restore an application for review (v)

4 [S 626] (1) Where it appears to the Court that there is not sufficient ground for a review, it shall reject the application

Application where rejected

(2) Where the Court is of opinion that the application for review should be granted, it shall grant the same

Application where granted

(a) no such application shall be granted without previous notice to the opposite party, to enable him

r 4 to appear and be heard in support of the decree or order, a review of which is applied for and

(b) no such application shall be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence which the applicant alleges was not within his knowledge, or could not be adduced by him when the decree or order was passed or made, without strict proof of such allegation

Alterations in the rule—The words and the Judge shall record with his order his reason for such opinion which occurred in the old section after the words it shall grant the same in sub r (2) have been omitted. Those words were construed by the Privy Council as being no more than a direction to the Judge how to act when he had decided to grant the application (w)

No such application shall be granted without previous notice to the opposite party—The expression opposite party means the party interested to support the order sought to be vacated or modified upon the application for review When an appeal is summarily dismissed under O 41 r 11 the order of dismissal may be set aside on an ex parte application for review without notice to the respondent. The respondent in such a case cannot be said to be the opposite party within the meaning of cl. (a) of this rule (x)

New matter or evidence—The effect of this expression is the same as if the words were new and important matter or evidence as in rule 1 above (y)

Strict proof—As to the meaning of the words strict proof in sub r (2) cl. (b) see notes to r 7 below Sub rule (1) cl. (b) application in contravention of provisions of rule (4)

Form.—As to form of notice required by sub r 2 (a) see App G form no 14.

Second application for review—See notes under the same head to r 7 below

Death of party pending review—The order granting a review only holds the judgment in suspense The death of a party does not therefore cause the suit or appeal to abate (z)

Appeal—It is provided in general terms by O 43 r 1 cl (w) that an appeal lies from an order under this rule granting an application for review The High Courts of Calcutta Patna Rangoon and Lahore have held that cl (w) is to be read with and subject to rule 7 (1) below so that an appeal lies only on the grounds mentioned in that rule (a) The Bombay High Court held in one case (b) that the appeal is against the order granting the review quite irrespective of the limitation contained in rule 7 Subsequent to this decision the Bombay High Court deleted cl (w) from the rule so that there is no appeal now except on the grounds mentioned in rule 7 below (c) See notes to r 7 under the head Appeal

6 [S 628] (1) Where the application for a review is heard by more than one Judge and the Court is equally divided, the application shall be rejected

Application where rejected

(2) Where there is a majority, the decision shall be according to the opinion of the majority

7 [S 629] (1) An order of the Court rejecting the application shall not be appealable, but an order granting an application may be objected to on the ground that the application was—

Order of rejection not appealable Objections to order granting application

(a) in contravention of the provisions of rule 2,

(b) in contravention of the provisions of rule 4, or

(c) after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed therefor and without sufficient cause

Such objection may be taken at once by an appeal from the order granting the application or in any appeal from the final decree or order passed or made in the suit

(2) Where the application has been rejected in consequence of the failure of the applicant to appear he may apply for an order to have the rejected application restored to the file, and, where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when such application was called on for hearing, the Court shall order it to be restored to the file upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit and shall appoint a day for hearing the same

O 47 r 7 (3) No order shall be made under sub rule (2) unless notice of the application has been served on the opposite party

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words "shall not be appealable" have been substituted for the word "final" This is merely a verbal alteration

2 The words "the Court shall order it to be restored" in sub r (2) have been substituted for the words "the Court may order it to be restored."

3 The last paragraph of the old section has been transferred to r 9

Appeal—

(i) Order rejecting application for review—No appeal lies under the Code from an order rejecting an application for review Nor does an appeal lie from such an order under cl 15 of the Letters Patent for that clause is controlled by the express provisions of this rule which says that such an order "shall not be appealable" and even if it is not so controlled an order rejecting an application for review is not a "judgment" within the meaning of that clause (d) Nor is the order open to revision under s 115 of the Code for even if it is wrong it is no more than an erroneous exercise of discretion (e) But where there is no exercise of discretion at all as where the Court rejects the application not after considering whether there are sufficient grounds for review [r 4 sub r 1] but on the erroneous view that it has no jurisdiction to entertain the application, the order is open to revision, for it is then a case of failure to exercise a jurisdiction vested in the Court by law (f)

(ii) Order granting application for review—An appeal lies from an order granting an application for review O 43 r 1 cl. (w) But as provided by sub-r 1 it lies only in the three cases mentioned therein, for otherwise the provisions of sub-r (1) so far as they relate to appeal would be quite superfluous [see notes to r 4 above "Appeal."] In cases other than those specified in the rule no appeal lies from an order granting a review either under this rule or under cl 15 of the Letters Patent (g) Thus if an appeal is preferred from an order admitting an application for review on the ground that the alleged "sufficient reason" for which the application was admitted did not constitute "sufficient reason" within the meaning of r 1 of this Order the appeal should not be entertained (h) Nor is the order appealable solely on the ground that the application for review was time barred (i) There must be an error both as to limitation and in the application of the rule as to "sufficient reason" If the appeal is entertained the order of the appellate Court will be set aside in revision under s 115 on the ground of "material irregularity" (j)

(iii) Second appeal from order passed in appeal under this rule —No second appeal lies from an order passed in appeal from an order granting an application for review This is now sufficiently clear from the provisions of O 43 r 1 cl. (w) read with s 104 sub s (2) A applies for a review and the application is granted B appeals from the order granting the application. Whether the appellate Court confirms or sets aside the order of the lower Court no second appeal lies to the High Court from the order of the appellate Court (k) O 4

(iv) Appeal from order refusing to readmit application for review dismissed for default under sub rule (2) —No appeal lies from an order refusing to readmit an application for review of judgment which has been dismissed for default under sub-rule (2) (l)

Sub rule (1) (b) In contravention of the provision of rule 4 —It is provided by r 4 above that no application for review should be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter without strict proof of the allegation as to such discovery The words strict proof mean proof according to the formalities of law Where an order therefore is made granting a review on proof of discovery of new matter according to the formalities of law no appeal lies from the order on the ground that the evidence adduced in proof of the allegation as to discovery of new matter was not sufficient to prove the allegation The words strict proof do not refer to sufficiency of proof in securing the conviction of the judicial mind on the fact in dispute (m)

Grounds of objection in appeal —An order granting an application for review can only be objected to upon the three grounds specified in the rule and no other whether the objection is taken by an appeal from the order (n) or in an appeal from the final decree passed in the suit (o) The appellate Court can interfere if a review has been granted on insufficient grounds (p)

Second application for review —Though no appeal lies from an order rejecting an application for review it does not preclude a second application for review on ground different from those taken in the first application (q)

Where application for review is time barred.—The period for an application for review of judgment by a Provincial Court of Small Causes is 15 days from the date of the decree by the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction 20 days and by other Courts 90 days [Limitation Act 1908 arts 171 162 173] and the applicant is entitled under s 12 of the Limitation Act to deduct time spent in obtaining copy of the decree (r) But the Court may admit the application after the period of limitation if the applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within the prescribed period [Limitation Act 1908 s 5] Where a second application for review is made after the period of limitation the mere fact that the second application was not made because the first was pending does not constitute sufficient cause for admitting the second (s) If an application for review is admitted after the period of limitation on the ground that the applicant has shown sufficient cause the order granting the application may be appealed from as provided by cl (c) of sub r (1) and the order

may be set aside in appeal if the appellate Court holds that there was not sufficient cause for admitting the application after the period of limitation (t)

Review granted without jurisdiction—If a review is granted in a case where the Court has no jurisdiction to grant it it is not clear whether an appeal lies from the order granting the review But the order being one made without jurisdiction, it comes within the purview of s 115 and is therefore open to revision (u) The High Court will not interfere in revision solely on the ground that the Judge grantin the review had omitted to record that the additional evidence was important (v). It has been held that no appeal lies if the review is granted in the inherent jurisdiction (w)

THE SECOND SCHEDULE

Arbitration

Arbitration in Suits

1 [S 506] (1) Where in any suit all the parties interested agree that any matter in difference between them shall be referred to arbitration, they may, at any time before judgment is pronounced, apply to the Court for an order of reference

Parties to suit may apply for order of reference

(2) Every such application shall be in writing and shall state the matter sought to be referred

Alterations in the rule —

1 The word interested in clause (1) has been added after the word parties See notes below under the head All the parties interested must join in the application

2 The words in person or by their respective pleaders specially authorised in writing in this behalf which occurred in the old section after the word apply and before the words to the Court have been omitted.

Scope of the Schedule—The present Schedule deals with arbitration under three heads (a) —

I Where a suit has been instituted and all the parties interested agree to refer to arbitration any matter in difference between them in the suit In that case all proceedings from first to last are under the supervision of the Court and they are governed by the provisions of paras. 1 to 16 of this Schedule The first step is to apply to the Court for an order of reference under para 1 If all the parties interested have joined in the application an order of reference will be made under para. 3

II Where parties without having recourse to litigation agree to refer their differences to arbitration and it is desired that the agreement of reference should have the sanction of the Court In that case the parties to the agreement or any of them may apply to the Court under para 17 to have the agreement filed in Court and to make an order of reference thereon If an order of reference is made all further proceedings will be under the supervision of the Court and they will be governed by the provisions of paras. 3 to 16 so far as they are consistent with the agreement (para 19). See paras. 17 to 19

III Where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration itself takes place without the intervention of the Court and the assistance of the Court is only sought in order to give effect to the award In that case any person interested in the award may apply to the Court under para. 20 to have the award filed in Court See paras. 20 21.

All the parties interested must join in the application.—In order to give jurisdiction to the Court to make an order of reference under this and para. 3 it is necessary that all the parties interested must apply to the Court (b). If one of the parties is a firm all partners must join in the reference (c) but a reference by a father who is the manager of a joint Hindu family consisting of himself and his sons will bind the sons (d). If all the parties interested do not apply and an order of reference is made

(a) Ghulam Khan v Muhammad Hassa (190) 29 Cal 16 29 I A 51

(b) Gulam Khan v Muhammad Hassan (190) 29 Cal. 16 29 I A 51

(c) Gopaldas v Baij Nath (19 6) 64 All ... 91 I C 930 (...6) A A ...

the order is illegal and if an award is made on such reference the award also is illegal (e) and is liable to be set aside in revision (e1) Thus where in a suit for partnership accounts brought by A against B and C A and B alone applied to the Court to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration and an order of reference was made it was held on an objection raised by B to the validity of the award that C not having joined in the application the order of reference as well as the award made in pursuance thereof were illegal (f) But when the part not referred can be separated from the part referred para 12 (a) would apply So in a suit where some of the defendants were adults and some were minors for whom no guardian ad litem was appointed and the minors were not interested in the dispute of the plaintiff with the adult defendants it was held that the Court was not justified in refusing to file the award made on a reference by all parties for the part which related to the minors and which was invalid could be separated from the other part The proper procedure was to modify or correct the award under para 12 (a) of this Schedule (g)

The word interested is new It has been added to give effect to a recent Allahabad decision (h) It refers to the succeeding words any matter in difference between them A party to a suit who is not interested in a matter in difference between the other parties to the suit need not join in an application under this paragraph for an order of reference A sues B and C praying as against B for a declaration of his title to certain property and as against C for possession of the property A and B alone apply to the Court to refer to arbitration the question as to the ownership of the property The Court has jurisdiction to make an order of reference though C has not joined in the application for the question of ownership is not in issue between A and C But C not being a party to the reference the award is not binding upon him though it is binding as between A and B (i)

The High Court of Allahabad has held that a defendant who does not put in an appearance and does not contest the suit is not a party within the meaning of this paragraph The mere fact therefore that such a defendant has not joined in the application for an order of reference will not invalidate an award (j) On the other hand the High Courts of Calcutta (k) and Madras (l) have held that the mere fact that the defendant has not put in an appearance and does not contest the suit is no ground for holding that he is not a party interested within the meaning of this paragraph also a party may be interested though no relief is claimed against him (m) A person however who is not a necessary party to a suit is not a party interested within the meaning of this para (n) See O 1 r 10 (2) The question whether a party is interested within the meaning of this paragraph must be decided on the facts of each particular case (o)

"Apply —This Section requires that all the parties interested should not only agree to a reference but that they should all apply to the Court for an order of reference (p) Therefore if one of the parties interested agree to a reference but he changes his mind subsequently and does not join in the application the application for an order of reference should be refused (q)

Matter in difference —This must be a matter in difference in the suit itself (r) Where an award comprises matters which are not in dispute in the suit and adjudicates upon the rights of a person who was not a party to the suit and who was interested in some of them and the findings with reference to the matters in question in the suit could not be separated from those not so in question the award is otherwise invalid within the meaning of para 15 (1) (c) and it should be set under that para so far as it deals with matters in difference in the suit (s)

Application shall be in writing —The provision requiring the application to be in writing is directory only and not imperative hence an award is not invalid merely because the application for the order of reference was not made in writing (t) In a recent case before the Judicial Committee where the agreement was in writing but it was not signed by one of the parties it was held that para 1 of this Schedule did not require that the writing should of necessity be signed (u) and it has also been held that the record made by the Court of an oral application is sufficient (v) But where a pardanishin lady was a party and the application was signed by her pleader who was not authorized by his vakalatnama to do so the award was held to be invalid (w) For form of application for an order of reference see the Appendix to this Schedule Form No 1

Before judgment —A suit may be referred to arbitration after a reference is made to the High Court (x)

Court —Section 107 of the Code provides that an appellate Court shall have the same powers as a Court of original jurisdiction If follows therefore that an appellate Court can act under this paragraph and refer matters in dispute in the appeal to arbitration if all the parties interested agree to a reference (y) But a Court to which certain issues have been referred for trial under O 41 r 25 cannot act under this paragraph as the duty of such Court is to try the issues as directed by the appellate Court and to return to the appellate Court its findings thereon together with the evidence (z) Similarly a Court dealing with petitions under the Provincial Insolvency Act 1907 has no power to refer the proceedings to arbitrators to decide whether the petitioner should or should not be declared an insolvent (a)

Revocation of arbitrator s authority —When a matter is referred to arbitration by an agreement between the parties without the intervention of a Court of Justice the agreement to refer to arbitration cannot be revoked by any party without good cause and a mere arbitrary revocation will not be permitted by the Court (b) Where a claimant did not proceed with the reference for a period of nine months without any just cause it was held that it amounted to a good cause sufficient to entitle the other party to revoke the submission (c) Similarly if the arbitrator is indebted to one of the parties at the time of the reference or becomes so indebted after the reference and this fact is not disclosed to the other party the non disclosure is a sufficient cause for revoking the submission upon discovery of the fact (d)

But when a matter is referred to arbitration by an order of the Court the Court alone can revoke the authority of the arbitrator and only in the cases specified in paras 5 8 and 15 The Court has no power to revoke the authority of an arbitrator in any other case Thus where after an order of reference was made under para 3 the defendant applied to the Court for an order to revoke the authority of the arbitrator and to appoint a new arbitrator in his place on the ground that he had come to know of certain facts which showed that the arbitrator was not worthy of the confidence reposed in him it was held that the Court had no power to make the order as the case did not come either under para 5 8 or 15 It was further held that the objection raised by the defendant could only be considered after the award was made and filed in Court and only to the extent permitted by para 15 (e) Note the words or being otherwise invalid in para 15 cl (c)

Where a party dies after application but before order of reference—The death of a party to an application made under this rule for a reference to arbitration before the order of reference is made does not operate as a revocation of the authority of the proposed arbitrator therefore if the right to sue survives it is competent to the Court to make an order of reference after substitution of the representative of the deceased party (f) All that is necessary is substantial representation without strict adherence to the rules of the Civil Procedure Code as to legal representatives and guardians ad litem (g)

Withdrawing from suit pending arbitration—See note to O 23 r 1 under the same head

Execution proceedings—This Schedule does not apply to execution proceedings and a reference to arbitration by an execution Court is without jurisdiction (h)

Form—For form or application for an order of reference see the Appendix to this Schedule form No 1

Arbitration

Sch II, para 3 shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the making of the award, and shall specify such time in the order

(2) Where a matter is referred to arbitration the Court shall not save in the manner and to the extent provided in this Schedule, deal with such matter in the same suit

The word making has been substituted for the word delivery In fact the word delivery was construed as meaning making See notes below under the head making of award

Fixing of time or the making of award —The present paragraph provides that the Court shall fix a reasonable time for the making of the award and specify such time in the order of reference Paragraph 8 enables the Court from time to time to enlarge the period for the making of the award Paragraph 15 provides that an award made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court may be set aside by the Court The provision contained in this paragraph requiring the Court to fix a reasonable time for the making of the award is not merely directory but imperative Hence this provision should be strictly followed At the same time it has been held that if no time is fixed for delivery of the award in the order of reference but the Court subsequently makes an order for enlarging the time (para 8) and fixes in that order the time within which the award should be made the omission to fix the time in the order of reference is not fatal to the award (i) Rankin J has described the provisions as to reasonable time as the main pillar of the scheme of the Schedule By the reference the Court parts with control of the suit temporarily for the time limit will bring the matter back to the Court and enable it to resume control and either to grant further time or to supersede the arbitration under para 8 If the Court fixes no time limit it surrenders control and jurisdiction is involved because such an order professes to abrogate jurisdiction — Accordingly a reference which gave the arbitrators leave to extend for such further time as they may allow themselves was held to be invalid and the arbitration was superseded (j) See para 15 cl (1) (c) and notes thereto

Making of award —An award is said to be made when it is completed and signed by the arbitrators Hence it is sufficient if the award is made that is completed and signed by the arbitrators within the period limited under this paragraph It is not necessary to the making of the award that it should actually reach the hands of the Court within such period The validity of the award depends upon the making of it within the period allowed and it is immaterial on what date it is actually delivered to the Court Thus where the time fixed by the Court for the delivery of an award in a suit pending before it was 16th April 1900 and the award was completed and signed on the 16th April but did not reach the hands of the Court until the 17th of April it was held that the award was within time (l)

Clause (2) —Where a matter is referred to arbitration the Court should not deal with it in the same suit except in the manner provided in this Schedule Hence the Court has no power to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit for there is no paragraph in this Schedule corresponding Form —For form of order of reference see form No 2 to the Appendix to this Schedule

4 [S 509] (1) Where the reference is to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators—

Where reference is to two or more order to provide for difference of opinion

(a) by the appointment of an umpire , or

(b) by declaring that, if the majority of the arbitrators agree, the decision of the majority shall prevail , or

(c) by empowering the arbitrators to appoint an umpire , or

(d) otherwise as may be agreed between the parties or, if they cannot agree, as the Court may determine

(2) Where an umpire is appointed, the Court shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the making of his award in case he is required to act

Decision of majority —Where the order of reference did not provide that the decision of the majority of arbitrators should prevail and two of the five arbitrators refused to act it was held that an award by the remaining three who constituted the majority was not valid (q)

Empowering arbitrators to appoint an umpire.—The arbitrators have no power to appoint an umpire unless they are authorized in that behalf (r)

Arbitration

Sch II, paras 4 5 measurements instead of taking them himself it was held that the award was on that reason invalid (t)

Power of Court to appoint arbitrator in certain cases

5 [S 507, (2), 510 511] (1) In any of the following cases, namely —

(a) where the parties cannot agree within a reasonable time with respect to the appointment of an arbitrator, or the person appointed refuse to accept the office of arbitrator, or

(b) where an arbitrator or umpire—

(i) dies, or

(ii) refuses or neglects to act or becomes incapable of acting, or

(iii) leaves British India in circumstances showing that he will probably not return at an early date, or

(c) where the arbitrators are empowered by the order of reference to appoint an umpire and fail to do so, any party may serve the other party or the arbitrators as the case may be, with a written notice to appoint an arbitrator or umpire

(2) If, within seven clear days after such notice has been served or such further time as the Court may in each case allow, no arbitrator or no umpire is appointed as the case may be, the Court may, on application by the party who gave the notice, and after giving the other party an opportunity of being heard, appoint an arbitrator or umpire or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit

Notice to appoint arbitrator—Where an order of reference is made on the joint application of A and B and the arbitrator refuses to act and A serves B with notice to appoint a new arbitrator the appointment of the new arbitrator must be made both by A and B and not by B alone (u)

Duty of Court under this paragraph—In the event of the happening of any of the events mentioned in this paragraph the Court must adopt one of the two courses pointed out in the paragraph namely appoint a new arbitrator or make an order superseding the arbitration Thus where one of three arbitrators refused to act and the

(t) F ta v Municipal Committee of Lahore (190) ... (u) Charta I ... Mal (191) ...

Court neither appointed a new arbitrator nor made an order superseding the arbitration it was held that the award made by the other two was invalid (t)

Appointment of new arbitrator or umpire—Under the Code of 1882 the Court had no power on the happening of either of the events referred to in cl (a) of this paragraph to appoint a new arbitrator without the consent of all the parties to the reference the reason being that the corresponding section 507 of that Code contained the words and [if] the parties desire that the nomination shall be made by the Court (w) But these words have been omitted in cl (a) and the Court has power under this paragraph to appoint a new arbitrator without the consent of all the parties even in the cases mentioned in cl (a) In cases covered by cl (b) it is open to the Court to appoint only one new arbitrator in place of several old arbitrators (x) But the Court has no power to appoint an arbitrator or umpire under sub para (2) unless notice is given as required by sub para (1) and the party served with the notice has been given an opportunity of being heard (y)

The power of the Court to appoint a new arbitrator or umpire may be limited by agreement A and B submitted to arbitration on the terms that the umpire should be selected from seven persons named The umpire first selected refused to act and the Court appointed a new umpire who was not one of the seven persons named It was held that the umpire not being one of the seven named in the agreement the award of the umpire was invalid (z)

An irregularity of procedure in the appointment of a new arbitrator is cured by consent of parties So when one of three arbitrators refused to act and the two remaining arbitrators co opted a third and the parties consented the award was held to be valid (a)

Where the arbitrator named by the parties refuses to act the Court though it has the power to appoint another arbitrator has no power to direct the parties to pay any remuneration to him (b)

Where arbitrator refuses to act.—If an arbitrator refuses to act the Court cannot compel him to act Thus where an arbitrator refused to act and the Court instead of accepting his refusal directed him to proceed and make an award it was held that the award was invalid The finality of an award is based entirely upon the principle that the arbitrators are judges chosen by the parties themselves and that such judges are willing to settle the disputes between them (c) But an arbitrator has full power to retract his resignation before it is accepted The mere circumstance of an arbitrator having first tendered and then withdrawn his resignation does not divest him of the character of arbitrator (d) When arbitrators refuse to act and the Court proceeds to try the suit an order superseding arbitration may be implied (e)

Order superseding arbitration—When once a matter is referred to arbitration by an order of the Court the Court has no power to hear the suit on the merits unless the arbitration has been superseded by an order under this paragraph (f) or under paragraph 8 or 15

Revision —An order of the Court deciding the question whether the arbitrator should be superseded or a new arbitrator should be appointed is a "case decided" within the meaning of s 115 and is subject to revision (g)

Form —For form of order for appointment of new arbitrator see the Appendix to this Schedule form No 3

6 [S 512] Powers of arbitrator or umpire appointed under paragraph 4 or 5 Every arbitrator or umpire appointed under paragraph 4 or paragraph 5 shall have the like powers as if his name had been inserted in the order of reference

7 [S 513] Summoning witnesses and default (1) The Court shall issue the same processes to the parties and witnesses whom the arbitrator or umpire desire to examine, as the Court may issue in suits tried before it

(2) Persons not attending in accordance with such process, or making any other default, or refusing to give their evidence, or guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or umpire during the investigation of the matters referred, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties and punishments by order of the Court on the representation of the arbitrator or umpire, as they would incur for the like offences in suits tried before the Court

8 [S 514] Extension of time for making award Where the arbitrators or the umpire cannot complete the award within the period specified in the order, the Court may, if it thinks fit, either allow further time, and from time to time, either before or after the expiration of the period fixed for the making of the award, enlarge such period, or may make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit

Alteration in the rule —The words "either before or after expiration of the period fixed for the making of the award" are new They give effect to decisions under the old section (h) But they do not abrogate the ruling of the Privy Council in Raja Har Narain v Chaudhrain (i) that r 3 is not merely directory but is mandatory (j)

Extension of time for making award —If the time originally fixed for making an award has expired and no award is made the Court may extend the time for making the award It is not necessary that the application to extend the time should be made before the expiry of the period originally fixed for making the award The application may be made even after the expiry of the time originally fixed (k) Put

Where by an order of reference power is given to the arbitrator to extend the time for making the award he can only extend the time before the time originally fixed for making the award has expired (o)

Estoppel—The parties to a reference may be estopped by their conduct from impeaching the validity of an award on the ground that it was made after time (p)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order superseding an arbitration where the award has not been completed within the period allowed by the Court [s 104 sub s (1) cl (a)]

Where umpire may arbitrate in lieu of arbitrators

9 [S 515] Where an umpire has been appointed he may enter on the reference in the place of the arbitrators,—

(a) if they have allowed the appointed time to expire without making an award, or

(b) if they have delivered to the Court or to the umpire a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree

Award to be signed and filed

10 [S 516] Where an award in a suit has been made, the persons who made it shall sign it and cause it to be filed in Court, together with any depositions and documents which have been taken and proved before them, and notice of the filing shall be given to the parties

Award need not be signed by arbitrators in each other s presence—It is sufficient if all the arbitrators agree to the terms of the award and sign it There is no provision of law requiring them to sign in the presence of each other (q) But the award must be signed by all the arbitrators before it is filed (r) but not necessarily at the same time and place (s) An award signed by one of the arbitrators while it is on the file of the Court is invalid (t) at the last meeting when the final act of arbitration is done is essential to the validity of the award (u)

Together with any depositions and documents — The Court has jurisdiction to compel arbitrators to give up documents that may have been filed before them as exhibits during the course of the arbitration. Also if the original records of the suit are handed to the arbitrators to enable them to proceed with the arbitration, and they fail to return them the Court can compel them to return the records (v). The arbitrators omission to file with his award the depositions and documents may lead to the inference that he has been guilty of legal misconduct (w)

Notice of the filing shall be given — It is a material irregularity within the meaning of s 115 if the Court gives judgment without issuing notice and judgment so given will be set aside in revision (x)

Delivery of award — The act of an arbitrator in delivering an award to the proper officer of the Court for the purpose of being filed in Court is not an application within the meaning of the Limitation Act. Hence there is no period of limitation within which an award should be delivered by an arbitrator to the Court (y)

Form — For form of award see the Appendix to this Schedule form no 5.

Statement of special case by arbitrators or umpire

11 [S 517] Upon any reference by an order of the Court, the arbitrator or umpire may, with the leave of the Court, state the award as to the whole or any part thereof in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court and the Court shall deliver its opinion thereon, and shall order such opinion to be added to and to form part of the award

Special case — The special case must be on a point of law only (z)

Appeal — An appeal lies from an order on an award stated in the form of a special case [s 104 sub s (1) cl. (b)]. Where the arbitrators differ on certain matters referred to them but instead of referring their differences to an umpire as provided by the order of reference they submit their own opinions in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court such submission is not an award stated in the form of a special case and no appeal therefore lies from any order made upon such submission (a)

Form — For form of special case see the Appendix to this Schedule form no 4

Power to modify or correct award

12 [S 518] The Court may, by order modify or correct an award,—

(b) Where the award is imperfect in form, or contains any obvious error which can be amended without affecting such decision, or

(c) where the award contains a clerical mistake or an error arising from an accidental slip or omission

Power to modify or correct.—The Court has no power to modify or correct an award except in the three cases mentioned in the paragraph and it cannot alter the directions given in the award as to payment of costs (b). A Court acts without jurisdiction if it modifies an award because it takes a view different from that held by the arbitrator (c).

Where a part of the award is upon a matter not referred to arbitration.—Where the matters in dispute in a suit are referred to arbitration but not the question of costs, any direction in the award as to costs may be struck out by the Court, for such direction is a matter that is separable (d). An award that goes beyond the terms of the reference is to that extent ultra vires (e). But where no separation is possible the Court should remit the award to the reconsideration of the same arbitrator under paragraph 14, cl (a).

Arbitrator's power to set aside gift on payment of a certain sum as compensation.—The power to decide all disputes between the parties includes the power, where the validity of a gift is challenged, to set aside the gift upon payment of compensation to the donee (f).

Clause (c).—This clause is new. An arithmetical error is no ground for setting aside an award (g).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order modifying or correcting an award: see sec 104, sub-sec (1), cl (c).

13. [S. 519.] The Court may also make such order as it thinks fit respecting the costs of the arbitration where any question arises respecting such costs and the award contains no sufficient provision concerning them.

unless such matter can be separated without affecting the determination of the matters referred ,

(b) where the award is so indefinite as to be incapable of execution ,

(c) where an objection to the legality of the award is apparent upon the face of it

Remission of award when the award has left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration—The reason why an award which does not dispose of all matters referred is invalid seems to be that there is an implied condition in the submission of the parties to the arbitration that the award shall dispose of all. This implied condition may be waived by the consent of all the parties before the arbitrators (h)

Where the issues in a suit were referred to arbitration and there was no distinct and separate finding by the arbitrators on each of the issues but there was a decision on the whole matter in controversy between the parties it was held that the award could not be said to have left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration and it should not therefore be remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator (i) A separate finding on each issue is not necessary when the whole matter in issue between the parties is decided by the arbitrators (j) But where several issues in a suit are referred to arbitration and the arbitrator decides by the award only one issue the award must be remitted to his reconsideration (k) If the arbitrator fails to reconsider the award the award becomes void see paragraph 15 Even if parties come to an agreement as regards some of the matters referred to arbitration the award should contain a determination of those matters though it be in terms of the agreement otherwise the award would be open to the objection that it has left those matters undetermined (l)

Award patently illegal—This is the rule in Hodgkinson v Fernie (m) which limits the right of interference by the Court to the case where a question of law necessarily arises on the face of the award or upon some paper accompanying and forming part of the award This rule was extended in Sandaner v Asser (n) to a case where an award referred to a contract and construed it The Court of Appeal held that they were entitled to look at the contract and come to the conclusion that it was wrongly construed. Sandaner v Asser has been doubted and in Champsey Bhara & Co v Jivraj Balloo (o) the Privy Council said An error of law on the face of the award means in their Lordships view that you can find in the award or a document actually incorporated thereto, as for instance a note appended by the arbitrator stating the reasons for his judgment some legal proposition which is the basis of the award and which you can say is erroneous. In this case cotton had been rejected by a buyer on a final award that it was of inferior quality under Rule 52 of the Rules of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association. This rule gave the buyer the option of invoicing rejected cotton back at the market rate—an option which he would of course only exercise if the market rate had risen. But here the market rate was below the contract rate and the defaulting seller claimed to recover the difference The award allowed the claim and in the preamble of the award narrating the events which led up to the dispute and the reference to arbitration mention was made of the contract and the letter of rejection for inferiority The Bombay High Court seized upon this recital and said that as the contract referred to the Rules and as the rejection was under Rule 52 the arbitrators must have wrongly construed the option in the rule as an obligation and that this was an error patent on the face of the award The Privy Council however said that the rule in Hodgkinson v Fernie (p) does not mean that if in the narrative a reference is made to the contention of one party that opens the door to seeing first what that contention is and then going to the contract on which the parties depend to see if that contention is sound They also observed that the arbitrators were entitled to put their own construction on Rule 52 In another similar case the error was said to be in the construction of a contract which was referred to in the award but their Lordships pointed out that the contract was not incorporated in the award which only made a guarded allusion to it for the purpose of earmarking the origin of the dispute (q) Where the only question in a suit was whether a Hindu was born blind and therefore not entitled to inherit and the suit was referred to arbitration and the arbitrator made an award whereby the blind man was declared to be entitled to a life interest in a certain portion of the property it was held on an objection to the award under cl (c) of this paragraph that the award was not so patently illegal that it could not be remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator (r)

Appeal —No appeal lies from an order under this paragraph remitting an award to the reconsideration of arbitrators Where an award is remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator and the arbitrator submits a fresh award and a decree is passed in accordance with the revised award no appeal lies from the decree on the ground that the order of remittal was wrong (r 16) and that the original award ought to have been accepted and acted upon (s) But where an award is remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator and the arbitrator refuses to reconsider the award (which consequently becomes void under paragraph 15) and the Court proceeds to try the case and passes a decree in the ordinary way [para 15 sub para (2)] the legality of the order remitting the award may be challenged on appeal from such decree (t) see sec 105

Misconduct—The term "misconduct" does not necessarily imply moral turpitude it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrator and what Courts of Justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards (t). Nor does it necessarily imply corruption (u)

Acts amounting to misconduct—The following acts have been held to amount to "misconduct" on the part of an arbitrator affording a ground for setting aside an award —

1 Irregularities in procedure which amount to no proper hearing of the matters in dispute (v) e g hearing and receiving evidence from one side in the absence of the other side without giving the other side affected by such evidence the opportunity of meeting and answering it (x)

2 Proceeding with arbitration in the absence of one of the arbitrators (y)

3 Refusing to hear witnesses produced by the parties (z)

4 Arbitrators improperly adding another to their number (a)

5 Where three out of five arbitrators were not present at the time the award was made and did not sign the award although it purported to be signed by all of them it was held that this amounted to misconduct and the award was set aside (b)

6 Making inquiries about the matters in reference from outside sources in the absence of the parties (c)

7 An unexplained delay of 5 years in making the award has been held to imply misconduct (d)

Acquiescence in acts amounting to misconduct—It is misconduct if some of the arbitrators are not present at some of the meetings. But if this procedure is adopted with the concurrence of all the parties or acquiesced in by them it is not open to any of the parties to impeach the award on that ground (e)

Acts not amounting to misconduct—An arbitrator is not bound by technical rules of procedure. Therefore it is not a valid objection to an award that the arbitrator did not act in strict conformity with the rules of evidence (f). But he should not make private inquiries behind the backs of the parties (g) unless authorized by the wide terms of the reference (h). Again the rule of evidence which declares that letters written "without prejudice" should not be admitted in evidence being a rule founded upon natural justice is as binding upon arbitrators as upon Courts of Justice and an arbitrator is wrong in receiving and acting upon such a letter. But if no objection is taken by the other side to the admissibility of such letter and an award is made the award will not be set aside on the ground of misconduct (i). If it is provided in an agreement for reference that an adjustment relied upon by the plaintiff should not be taken into consideration by the arbitrator a bona fide mistake on the part of the arbitrator in admitting the adjustment in evidence does not amount to misconduct. Such a stipulation is nothing but a rule of evidence introduced pro hac vice (j). If the arbitrator is selected on account of his special knowledge of the matter in dispute it is not misconduct for him to use his special knowledge (k). But otherwise it is misconduct for an arbitrator to ignore the evidence and decide on his special knowledge (l)

It is not misconduct on the part of the arbitrator to delegate to a third party the performance of acts of a ministerial character so long as he exercises his own judgment on the matters referred (m). Misconduct cannot be presumed from the mere fact that the arbitrator is the relative of one of the parties (n). The mere fact that the arbitrator has failed to account for the delay in making the award is no ground for presuming fraud (o)

In Buta v. Municipal Committee of Lahore (p) certain matters in dispute between A and B were referred to arbitration. The agreement of reference was drawn up by A's counsel. The arbitrator feeling doubtful as to the meaning of a certain clause in the agreement wrote to A to obtain his counsel's opinion on the meaning of that clause. A obtained the opinion and sent it on to the arbitrator. B was not informed of this until after the award was made. It was held that though it would have been prudent and discreet for the arbitrator to have written to A with B's knowledge and informed B of the opinion the omission to do this did not amount to misconduct as there was no ground for impeaching the good faith of any of the parties concerned

Evidence of arbitrator—Where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made against an arbitrator any relevant evidence he can give is properly admissible. It is however necessary to take care that evidence admitted as relevant on such charges is not used for a different purpose namely to scrutinize the decision of the arbitrator on matters within his jurisdiction and in which his decision is final (q)

Sch II, para 15

Appeal from decree based on an award on ground of misconduct—No appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrator (r). The only remedy available to the party aggrieved by the award is to apply to have it set aside under this paragraph. See notes to paragraph 16 below under the head Invalid award.

Fraudulent concealment of any matter which ought to have been disclosed—Where the arbitrator was the retained pleader of the plaintiff and this fact was not disclosed by the plaintiff to the defendant before the arbitrator was appointed, the award was set aside on the ground that that fact was one which ought to have been disclosed. Every disclosure which might in the least affect the minds of those who are proposing to submit their dispute to the arbitrament of any particular individual as regards his selection and fitness for the post ought to be made so that each party may have every opportunity of considering whether the reference to arbitration to that particular individual should or should not be made (s).

Award made subsequent to order superseding arbitration—If an order is made superseding the arbitration under paragraph 5 or 8 or under cl. ( ) of this paragraph or if the period fixed for making the award has expired, the arbitrators have no longer seisin of the reference and they are functi officio and cease to have any more power to make an award than the man in the street (t). Similarly an arbitrator is functus officio after the award is made and he cannot thereafter add to or alter the award (u).

Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court—Clause (c) of s 521 stopped at the words the suit which occur in cl (1) sub cl (c) of this para. It was followed by another clause which ran thus: And no award shall be valid unless made within the period allowed by the Court. The latter clause has now been omitted and instead thereof we have the words or after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court added into sub cl (c). The effect of this alteration is that the only remedy now open to the party impeaching an award on the ground that was made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court is to apply under this paragraph to set aside the award. If no application is made to set aside the award under this paragraph or if the application is made but refused the award becomes final and no appeal will lie from a decree based upon the award (v). [Under the Code of 1882 it was held that an appeal lay from a decree based upon such an award (w).] If the application to set aside the award is granted and an order is made under sub para. (?) superseding the arbitration the order is appealable under s 104 sub (1) cl (a). See notes to r 16 below. No appeal lies from a decree based on an award etc and notes to paragraph 3 above Making of award.

Another consequence of the alteration is that whereas under s 521 of the old Code an award out of time was a nullity (x) it is not so under the present rule. Under the present rule it is merely voidable and if not sought to be set aside within the period of limitation [Limitation Act 1908 art 158] it is binding upon the parties.

When the award is otherwise invalid—The words or being otherwise invalid at the end of sub-cl. (c) are new. Under the Code of 1882 it was held that when an award was not a valid and legal award an appeal would lie from the decree based upon such award even though the decree might be in accordance with the award. The leading case on the subject was Kali Prosanno Ghose v Rajani Kant (y) decided by the High Court of Calcutta in the year 1898. The object of adding the words "or being otherwise invalid" into sub cl (c) is to supersede the Calcutta and other decisions which allowed an appeal from a decree based upon an invalid award and to give effect to the principle of finality in cases of arbitration enunciated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ghulamkhan v Muhammad Hassan ( ) and followed in recent cases (a). The result is that the only remedy now open to a party seeking to impeach an award as being invalid is to apply under this paragraph to have it set aside. If he fails to do so or if an application is made but refused the award becomes final and no appeal will lie from a decree based upon the award. See notes to paragraph 16 under the head "Invalid award". It is worth while noting that the Special Committee which introduced these alterations intended to allow an appeal from an order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award (b) but no such provision is contained in s 104. The words "or being otherwise invalid" do not include the question whether there was or was not a valid reference to arbitration. An application in revision will therefore lie on the ground of the initial invalidity of the reference (c)

An award is not illegal merely because it is based on evidence given by one of the parties on a special oath administered under the Indian Oaths Act with the consent of the other party (d)

An award is invalid if the arbitrators go beyond the scope of the suit and decide matters which are not in suit and which concern persons who are not parties to the suit. Pand in J said such an award cannot be treated partly as an award on a reference by the Court and partly as an award by private agreement for there is no provision for such simultaneous arbitration and the jurisdiction for the different types of arbitration must not be confused (e). The Privy Council reserved their opinion as to whether there may not be an exception to this comprehensive statement as to simultaneous arbitration but held that such an award was not in accordance with the order of reference and therefore otherwise invalid under para 15 (f). In a subsequent case parties to a suit applied for a reference as to matters in difference in the suit and other matters as well. The Court referred to arbitration the matters in difference in the suit only. The parties then made a reference without the intervention of the Court of these other matters to the same arbitrators who made two awards. It was held that as the arbitrators had kept the two matters distinct the award on the reference was valid (g)

Appeal from order under this paragraph—Except in the case provided by s 104 cl (a) no appeal lies from an order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award (h). If the objecting party does not appear in support of his objection the Court has no option but to pronounce judgment in accordance with the award (i) and the decree made thereon cannot be set aside under O 9 r 13 because it is not an ex parte decree (j). But if the order under this paragraph is made by a

Chartered High Court it amounts to a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letter Patent and is appealable under that clause See notes to s 104 under the head Letters Patent appeal See also notes to paragraph 21 below under the head Appeal

It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta Madras and Bombay and by the Chief Court of the Punjab that though no appeal lies from an order setting aside an award the legality of the order may be challenged on appeal from the decree that may be ultimately passed in the suit (k) [s e s 105] A different view has been taken by the High Court of Allahabad (l)

Revision —An order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award is not subject to revision (m) But an order superseding arbitration may be attacked under s 105 in appeal from the decree in the suit (n)

16 [s 522] (1) Where the Court sees no cause to remit the award or any of the matters referred to arbitration for re-consideration in manner aforesaid, and no application has been made to set aside the award, or the Court has refused such application, the Court shall, after the time for making such application has expired, proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award

Judgment to be according to award

(2) Upon the judgment so pronounced a decree shall follow, and no appeal shall lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with the award

After the time for making such application has expired —That is after 10 days from the date on which the award is filed in Court and notice of the filing has been given to the parties see Limitation Act 1908 sch 1 art 158 as amended by Act 18 of 1919 Before the amendment the period of 10 days commenced from the date on which the award was submitted to the Court See the preamble to Act 18 of 1919 The amendment seems to have been suggested by the judgments of the learned judges in the undermentioned Calcutta case (o)

No appeal lies from a decree based on an award except in so far as such decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award —In references to arbitration the general rule is that as the parties choose their own arbitrator to be the judge in the dispute between them they cannot object to his decision either upon the law or upon the facts It is now well established that where a matter is referred to an arbitrator he is the sole and final judge of all questions not only of fact but of law (p)

Thus where an award was impeached on the ground that it was against law their Lordship of the Privy Council said "They [arbitrators] may have erred in law but arbitrators may be judges of law as well as judges of fact and an error in law certainly does not vitiate an award" (q) And this principle has been carried so far that if parties submit to an arbitrator the decision of a bare point of law and he gives an erroneous decision his award is binding notwithstanding (r) In all these cases the Court would say to the party seeking to set aside the award "You have constituted your own tribunal you are bound by its decision" (s) The present paragraph gives effect to the principle of finality of awards by declaring that no appeal shall lie from a decree based on an award except is so far as the decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award (t) The only cases in which the Code allows an appeal from a decree based on an award are—

(1) where the decree is in excess of the award as where the decree gives interest which the arbitrators have not awarded (u) or

(2) where the decree is not in accordance with the award

In this respect there is no difference between a decree based upon a private award (para 21) and a decree based upon an award made through the intervention of the Court (v)

Is a decree based on an award which has been modified by the Court under paragraph 12 a decree in accordance with the award? It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that it is not and hence an appeal lies from the decree Thus where an award directed the defendant to make certain payments to the plaintiff by instalments and the award was modified by the Court under paragraph 12 by omitting the direction as to payment by instalments and a decree was passed on the award as so modified it was held that an appeal would lie from the decree (w) The soundness of this decision is open to question It is submitted that a decree is in accordance with an award within the meaning of this paragraph if it is in accordance with the award as modified under paragraph 12 though it may not be in accordance with the original award Paragraph 16 says "The Court shall proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award" It is clear that when an award is modified under paragraph 12 the only award in accordance with which judgment can be pronounced is the modified award Moreover the decision runs counter to the principle of finality which finds expression in the Code

Where an application made under para 15 cl (c) to set aside an award on the ground that it was made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court has been refused and a decree is subsequently passed in accordance with the award no appeal lies from the decree if it is in accordance with the award Nor does any appeal lie from the decree under the Letters Patent (x) See notes to paragraph 15 above "Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court" and notes "Appeal from order under this paragraph" above See also notes to s 104 "Letters Patent appeal" above given was that that section presuppo ed a valid and legal award and not an award upon which no decree could be passed (y) A different view however was taken by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ghulam Khan v Muhammad Hussain ( ) decided in the year 1902 After that expression of opinion two of our High Courts held that no appeal lay under s 522 from a decree passed on an award on the ground that the award was invalid (a) Under the present Code it is quite clear that no appeal lies from a decree where such decree is passed in accordance with the award though the award may be invalid. But the party aggrieved by the award may apply under para. 15 cl (1), sub cl (c) to have the award set aside If he does not avail himself of that remedy the award becomes final and no appeal lies from the decree ba ed upon the award. This change has been introduced by the in ertion of the words or the award be , otherwise invalid in para 1 cl (1) sub cl (c) The object is to give finality to awards as stated in the notes to paragraph 15 under the head Where the award is otherwise invalid. The effect of this alteration is that no appeal lies under this Code when a decree has been passed under the pre ent paragraph upon an award except in so far as the decree i in excess of or not in accordance with the award (b) The result is that all those cases in which it was held under the Code of 1882 that a decree thou h it be in accordance with the award may be challenged by way of appeal on the ground that there was no valid and legal award are no longer law In a Lahore case sons of one of the parties interested in the property were joined as parties after the award was filed, and made detailed objections to the award When their objections were disallowed and a decree passed in terms of the award, the Court held that they had by their conduct submitted to the arbitration proceedings and had no right of appeal although they had not actually been parties to the reference (c)

Such an application should be made within 10 days from the date on which the award is submitted to the Court See paragraph I under the present paragraph but the party aggrieved by the award may apply to have it set aside under paragraph 15. See notes to para 15. Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court.

(c) An award must be signed before it is filed and it must be signed by all the arbitrators. An award signed by some only of the arbitrators is illegal. Similarly an award signed by an arbitrator after the same has been filed in Court is illegal. According to the old section an appeal would lie from a decree based on such award (f). No appeal lies under this paragraph but the party aggrieved by the award may apply under paragraph 15 to have it set aside (g).

(d) The matters in difference in a suit between A and B are referred to the arbitration of C. C is the retained pleader of A but this fact is not disclosed to B [see para 15]. C makes an award. The award is illegal. According to the old section an appeal would lie from the decree (h). No appeal lies under the present paragraph but B can apply to have the award set aside under paragraph 15.

An appeal lies from a decree based upon a judgment pronounced in contravention of the provisions of this paragraph though the decree may be in accordance with the award.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that if a decree is passed on an award before the time for making the application to set aside the award has expired an appeal will lie from the decree though the decree may be in accordance with the award (i). But in such cases the Bombay and Lahore High Courts interfere by way of revision (j). The Allahabad High Court has held that where an application to set aside an award has been refused by the Court without considering it and a decree is passed on the award an appeal will lie from the decree though the decree may be in accordance with the award. The reason given is that the word "refused" in this paragraph means refused after judicial consideration (k).

Second appeal.—A second appeal will lie to the High Court where the decree of the Court of first instance is in accordance with the award and such decree is set aside by the first appellate Court. The reason is that no appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award and the first appellate Court acts without jurisdiction in entertaining the appeal and setting aside the decree passed in accordance with the award (l). In a similar case the High Court of Calcutta held that no second appeal lies but that the High Court may revise the order under s. 115 (m).

A second appeal will also lie where the Court of first instance sets aside the award and passes a decree on the merits and the first appellate Court sets aside the decree and passes a decree in accordance with the award. The mere fact that the decree of the first appellate Court is in accordance with the award is no ground for refusing the appeal (n).

Revision.—We have seen that no appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award. Section 115 provides that where no appeal lies from a decision an application may be made to the High Court for a revision of the decision. No such

Sch II, para 16 application, however should be admitted in the case of an award. In the case of an award revision would be more objectionable than an app al If an application for revision were admis ible in a case where the decree is in accordance with the award, the finality of any award would be open to question (o) Thus where an application was made for revision on the ground that there was no valid order of reference and that the award was therefore a nullity and that no decree ought to have been pas ed on such an award the High Court of Allahabad refused to entertain the application (p). But in a later case where the lower Court dealing with the objections set a ide the award because of a suppo ed defect in the reference the Allahabad High Court interfered in revision on the ground that the Court had acted without jurisdiction (q) The better opinion seems to be that revision is admi sible for the purpo e not of interfering with the arbitrator but with the exercise of juri diction by the Courts below in the procedure and order of the judge d aling with the objections (r) See notes above An appeal lies from a decree based upon a judgment etc

Enforcement —When a decree is passed in terms of the award the only mode of enforcing the award is by execution of the decree no separate suit will lie to enforce the award (s)

Where the Court acts as arbitrator —Where a reference i made to the presiding Judge the parties must be deemed to have agreed to accept his decision as final Hence no appeal lies from the decision of the judge in a such ca e (t) Nor is the decision subject to the provi ions of the present Schedule so as to entitle either party to object to the decision as if it was an award under this schedule A decree passed in accordance with such a decision must be regarded as a con ent decree and it comes within the purview of O 23 r 3 The same principle applies even if the reference is made to th presiding Judge and another person jointly (u) A Judge to whom a reference is made has no power to alter his deci ion once it i given. In this respect his position is that of an arbitrator who has no power to alter an award once it is made by him (v) See notes to s 21 above

Distinction between valuer and arbitrator —A sue B for a declaration that he is entitled to one half share of certain property An order is made by consent that A should pay B a quarter of the value of the property to be settled by a certain referee nominated by the parties The order is not one passed under para 2 and 3 and the decision of the referee is not an award on which a judgment could be pronounced under the present paragraph (w) But the terms of the agreement between the parties may be such that the valuer may be invested with the power of an arbitrator in which case the valuation made by him may operate as an award In Jackson v Barry Railway Co (x) the building contract contained the following clau e In the event of any question or dispute arising between the company and the contractor as to [the Order of reference on agreements to refer

17 [S 523] (1) Where any persons agree in writing that any difference between them shall be referred to arbitration, the parties to the agreement or any of them, may apply to any Court having jurisdiction in the matter to which the agreement relates that the agreement be filed in Court

Application to file in Court agreement to refer to arbitration

(2) The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiff or plaintiffs and the others or other of them as defendants or defendant, if the application has been presented by all the parties or, if otherwise, between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants

(3) On such application being made the Court shall direct notice thereof to be given to all the parties to the agreement other than the applicants requiring such parties to show cause, within the time specified in the notice why the agreement should not be filed

(4) Where no sufficient cause is shown, the Court shall order the agreement to be filed, and shall make an order of reference to the arbitrator appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement or, if there is no such provision and the parties cannot agree, the Court may appoint an arbitrator

Alteration in the paragraph —In cl 4 the words and shall make an order of reference to the arbitrator appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement or if there is no such provision and the parties cannot agree the Court may appoint an arbitrator are substituted for the words and shall make an order of reference thereon and may also nominate the arbitrator when he is not named therein and the parties cannot agree as to the nomination

Sch II, para 17

Does not apply.—The procedure prescribed by this paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies See notes to s 89

Scope of the paragraph.—Paras 1 to 16 deal with cases in which the parties to a suit agree to refer the matters in difference between them in the suit to arbitration and apply to the Court for an order of reference The application in such a case must be made by all the parties to the suit interested in the matters in difference proposed to be referred to arbitration. This and the subsequent paragraph refer to cases in which persons themselves agree independently of the Court to refer the matters in difference between them to arbitration (y) In such a case any party to the agreement may apply to the Court to have the agreement filed and to have an order of reference made thereon. Where such an order is made the provisions of paras 2 to 16 apply to the proceedings in so far as they are consistent with the agreement so filed ( ) [para 19] When a submission is filed in Court under this paragraph the submission is said to be made a rule of the Court

Agreement to refer to arbitration matters in difference in a pending suit.—An agreement to refer to arbitration matters in difference between the parties to a pending suit without the order of the Court under paras 1 to 3 above is illegal and cannot be filed under this paragraph (a) Whether an award made on such a reference is an adjustment within the meaning of O 23 r 3 has been discussed in the notes on that rule under the heading submission and award

Though an agreement to refer matters in dispute in a pending suit without an order of the Court is invalid there is nothing to prevent parties compromising their suit on the terms of an award made on such an agreement Thus in a Patna case (b) parties came to an agreement to arbitrate in a pending suit and applied the same day to the Court to withdraw the suit The suit was allowed to be withdrawn and the award made and filed under paras 20 and 21 This was quite correct for the agreement was virtually conditional on the Court surrendering its jurisdiction by allowing the suit to be withdrawn. An agreement to refer to arbitration the partition of a testator s estate does not encroach upon the jurisdiction of the Court in which proceedings for the probate of the will are pending and is therefore valid (c)

The agreement must be in writing.—This paragraph does not apply unless the agreement to refer is in writing (d)

Agreement to refer future differences to arbitration.—Where a charter party contains a clause that any disagreement that may arise [i e arise in future] between the contracting parties as to the proper interpretation of the charter should be referred to arbitration the agreement though it refers to future differences can be filed under this paragraph (e) Agreements to refer future differences are not outside the scope of this section

Numbered and registered as a suit.—It has been held that in spite of these words a proceeding under this para is not a suit for a suit is commenced by the plaint (f) The High Court of Calcutta has held that a proceeding under para 17 is a suit (g) It is submitted however that these words make it a statutory suit otherwise the words would have been Numbered and registered as if it were a su

Sufficient cause —Where an agreement is to refer to several specified arbitrators and one of the arbitrators dies before the application s made under this paragraph the Court should not make an order of reference under this paragraph (h) But it is otherwise if the agreement contains an express provision that in case of death of any arbitrator another arbitrator may be appointed in his place (i) During the pendency of a private arbitration one of the parties died and the arbitrator thinking he had no power to join the legal representative refused to go on On an application to file the agreement it was held that the Court had no power to order the arbitrator to proceed (j) In another similar case (k) the Court appointed a new arbitrator under para 5 which is made applicable by para 19 if its exercise is not inconsistent with the agreement of reference

Arbitrator appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement —Thus where an agreement provides for a reference to a European merchant the Court has no power to appoint an Indian merchant (l) If the agreement is for reference to three arbitrators the Court cannot add a clause that in case of disagreement the opinion of the majority shall prevail (m)

Where the agreement to refer has been duly revoked —Where an agreement to refer has been revoked for good cause by one of the parties thereto the Court is not competent to order it to be filed under this paragraph (n) See notes to para 1 under the head Revocation of arbitrator s authority

Umpire —If an agreement filed under this paragraph does not contain any provision for the appointment of an umpire in the event of the arbitrators being unable to agree the Court has no power under this paragraph to appoint an umpire (o)

Appeal —An order under this paragraph filing or refusing to file an agreement to refer to arbitration is now appealable as an order [s 104 sub s (1) cl (d)] Under the Code of 1882 it was appealable as a decree (p)

Revision —The mere fact that the application is not numbered and registered as a suit as required by cl (2) of this paragraph is no ground for interfering in revision such an irregularity is not a material irregularity within the meaning of s 115 (q)

Sch II, para 18 matter should not be referred in accordance with the agreement to refer to arbitration, and that the applicant was at the time when the suit was instituted and still remains ready and willing to do all things necessary to the proper conduct of the arbitration, may make an order staying the suit

History of the section —This paragraph is a reproduction with slight alterat[illegible] of section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act The latter section is based on s 4 of the English Arbitration Act 1889 which again is based on the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 s 11 As to the history of the last mentioned section see Doleman & Sons v Ossett Corporation (r)

By s 28 of the Indian Contract Act agreements in restraint of legal proceedings are declared void To that section there was an exception to the effect that if the parties have agreed to refer their dispute to arbitration the existence of the agreement shall be a bar to seeking redress in the ordinary Courts The exception also recognised the r[illegible] to sue for specific performance of the agreement Then came the Specific Relief Act of 1877 which by s 21 took away the right to sue for the specific performance of the agreement but preserved the right to the party who was willing to abide by the agreement to object to a trial of the suit filed by the other party Lastly paragraph [illegible] of this Schedule repealed that portion of s 21 of the Specific Relief Act which enabled the defendant to plead the agreement to refer as a bar to the suit In lieu of this provision we have the present paragraph which enables a party who is willing to abide by the agreement to apply for a stay of the suit filed by the other party But the application must be made at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement If the application is not so made the suit will proceed, and any award made by the arbitrator after the institution of the suit is a nullity The reason is that as soon as a suit is brought in respect of the subject matter of the reference the arbitrators become functus officio (s) The Calcutta High Court has held that though the award made while the suit is pending and not stayed is a nullity the party benefiting by the award may still obtain a stay order apply for the award to be filed under para 20 and then when the Court refuses to file it on the ground that it is invalid the arbitrator whose jurisdiction has been restored by the stay order may complete their proceedings and make a fresh award (t) The rule does not apply when the award deals with a question that is not in issue in the suit (u)

At the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement —The corresponding words in s 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act 1899 are at any time after appearance and bef re filing a written statement or taking any other steps in the proceedings It has been held under the English Arbitration Act 1889 that were the defendant did not know what was the subject matter of the action and asked for a statement of claim the mere request for the statement of claim was not a step in the proceedings (v) But where the defendant was unaware that the contract contained an arbitration clause and asked

Institutes any suit —These words show that the present rule refers only to suits instituted after the agreement to refer to arbitration has been made A sues B in respect of certain matters The parties then agree to refer the matters to arbitration Subsequently A declines to proceed with the arbitration and writes to B that he will proceed with the suit B applies for an order staying the suit The Court has no power under this paragraph to stay the suit for the suit was instituted prior to the agreement (x)

No sufficient cause —The burden lies on the plaintiff to show that some sufficient reason exists why the matter should not be referred to arbitration and not on the defendant to show that no such reason exists (y)

May make an order staying the suit —The Court has a discretion under this paragraph as to staying a suit instituted by one party to a submission against the other party At the same time it must be remembered that it is the prima facie duty of the Court to act upon the agreement between the parties (z) If parties choose to determine for themselves that they will have a domestic forum instead of resorting to the ordinary Court then since that Act of Parliament [that is the Common Law Procedure Act 1854 s 11 which corresponds to the present paragraph] was passed a prima facie duty is cast upon the Courts to act upon such an agreement (a) If however the arbitration proves abortive the Court may remove the stay and proceed with the trial of the suit (b)

Denial of agreement —Where one of the parties denies the agreement to refer set up by the other party it is within the province of the Court to decide whether there is such an agreement (c)

Validity of agreement to refer —To bring a case within this paragraph there must be a subsisting agreement to refer capable of being carried into effect A suit therefore cannot be stayed under this paragraph if the submission has been revoked for good cause (d) Nor can it be stayed if the original contract containing the arbitration clause is followed by another agreement materially altering the original contract for in that case the arbitration clause ceases by virtue of the alteration to have any effect But a mere extension of time for the performance of that which a party under the original contract is bound to perform does not amount to a material alteration and the arbitration clause does not cease to operate in such a case (e) See Pollock and Mulla's Indian Contract Act notes to s 28

Stay refused —Where an arbitration clause does not cover all the matters in respect of which the suit is brought the Court will not as a rule split the suit into two parts one to be tried by the arbitrator and the other to be tried in Court the Court will in such a case try the whole suit (f) Where fraud is charged the Court will in general refuse to refer the dispute to arbitration if the party charged with the fraud desires a public inquiry (g)

Presidency Small Cause Court —The Presidency Small Cause Court Bombay has power to stay a suit under this para, by virtue of rules framed under the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act 1882 by the High Court of Bombay (h)

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order staying or refusing to stay a suit when there is an agreement to refer to arbitration see s 104 sub-s (1) cl (e)

19 [S 524] The foregoing provisions, so far as they are consistent with any agreement filed under paragraph 17, shall be applicable to all proceedings under the order of reference made by the Court under that paragraph, and to the award and to the decree following thereon

Provisions applicable to proceedings under paragraph 17

Does not apply —This paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies See notes to s 89

So far as they are consistent with any agreement filed under paragraph 17 —This paragraph provides that where an order of reference is made under paragraph 17 the provisions of paras 3 to 16 shall apply to all proceedings under the order only so far as they are consistent with the agreement filed under paragraph 17 Thus under paragraph 8 the Court has the power to extend the period for the making of the award. But if the agreement filed under paragraph 17 provides that the arbitrators shall make their award within a fixed period and that they shall have no power to enlarge the time for making the award, the stipulation in the agreement will prevail to the exclusion of the provision in paragraph 8 But the words so far as they are consistent with any agreement filed under paragraph 17 would not preclude the Court from setting aside an award for misconduct of the arbitrators though there may be a clause in the agreement that the award should be accepted as final (i) Nor do they preclude the Court from appointing a new arbitrator under paragraph 5 in place of one who refuses to act provided there is no clause in the submission expressly excluding the power of the Court to make such an appointment (j) If the new arbitrator refuses to act the Court may make an order superseding arbitration and such order is not appealable (k)

over the subject matter of the award that the award be filed in Court

(2) The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants

(3) The Court shall direct notice to be given to the parties to the arbitration, other than the applicant requiring them to show cause, within a time specified, why the award should not be filed

Old section —This paragraph corresponds to s 525 of the Code of 1882 except that in cl (1) the word any Court having jurisdiction over the subject matter of the award have been substituted for the words Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction over the matter to which the award relates See notes below Court to which application should be made under this paragraph

Does not apply —This paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies see note to s 89

Pending suit —See notes to para 17 above under the head Agreement to refer to arbitration matters in a pending suit See also notes to O 23 r 3 above Adjustment submission and award

Scope of this and subsequent paragraph —The present paragraph and paragraph 21 refer to cases where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration itself takes place without the intervention of the Court and the assistance of the Court is only sought in order to give effect to the award (l)

This paragraph is no bar to a regular suit to enforce an award —Under the corresponding section 525 of the Code of 1882 it was held that a party interested in an award may at his option avail himself of the summary remedy provided by that section to enforce the award or he may bring a regular suit to enforce the award (m) There is nothing in the present Code to preclude such a suit Rather such a suit is saved by s 89 as appears from the words save in so far as is otherwise provided by any other law for the time being in force (n) See notes to para 21 below Res judicata

A valid award constitutes a bar to a suit on the original demand —An award duly passed in accordance with the submission of the parties is equivalent to final judgment Hence if an award is made for a partition of joint property no party to the reference can sue for partition. The award is an answer to the suit though no decree may have been passed on the award (o)

Court to which application should be made under this paragraph —It is the subject matter of the award and not the subject matter of the reference that determines the jurisdiction of the Court under the present paragraph. Under the old section the application to file the award had to be made to the Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction over the matter to which the award relates and these words were held by the High Court of Calcutta to mean the Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction over the subject matter of the reference (p) The words subject matter of the award have been substituted in this paragraph for the words matter to which the award relates to make it clear that an application under this paragraph may be made to any Court having jurisdiction over the subject matter of the award. So when the subject matter of an award was the management and control of three temples in the district of Berar and the question of the application of the revenue was between members of the founder s family not resident in Berar the Privy Council held that the District Judge of Berar has no jurisdiction to entertain an application to file it (q)

Limitation —The application under this paragraph should be made within 6 months from the date of the award Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 1 8 (r). The date of the award means not the date the award bears but the date on which it was given to the parties (s) i e the date of publication (t) The application is not a suit and therefore the applicant cannot claim the benefit of section 6 of the Limitation Act ( ) See notes to para 17 above Numbered and registered as a suit

Where an award is delivered in parts —If the agreement to refer provides that the matter in dispute may be taken up and dealt with seriatim and that the award may be delivered bit by bit each portion decided may be dealt with as a distinct award under this paragraph (u)

Lost award —When an award has been lost the procedure of this rule cannot be resorted to and the parties must be referred to a regular suit (w)

Where any matter has been referred to arbitration —Do the words any matter refer only to a matter in respect of which a suit can be entertained by a Court under s 9 of the Code ?—This paragraph provides that when any matter has been referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court and an award has been made thereon any person interested in the award may apply that the award be filed in Court. Paragraph 21 provides for the passing of a decree on the award But what if the matter referred to arbitration is one as to which a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit under s 9 of the Code e g disputes about man pan and an award is made thereon Has the Court jurisdiction to file such an award and pass a decree thereon under paragraph 21 ? It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that it has and that it is not against the policy of the law to give effect to such awards (x) The result is that rights which are not at all civil rights may be the subject matter of an arbitration and award and of the decree of a Civil Court It would be interesting to know how the decree if disobeyed would be enforced However this may be it is clear that if a matter is such that on grounds of public policy it can be disposed of only by a Court it cannot be the subject of a reference and if such a matter is referred and an award is made the Courts should refuse to pass a decree thereon. Thus the right to succeed to the trusteeship of a public charitable trust is not a right which can be settled by arbitration A Court therefore has no jurisdiction to entertain an application to file an award in such a matter under this paragraph (y)

Numbered and registered as a suit —See notes to para 17 under the same head The Bombay High Court has held that the application when numbered and registered as a suit becomes a suit for the purpose of O 38 and the Court has jurisdiction to direct attachment before judgment ( )

Arbit Sch par

21 [s 526] (1) Where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon, and where no ground such as is mentioned or referred to in paragraph 14 or paragraph 15 is proved the Court shall order the award to be filed and shall proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award

Filing and enforcement of such award

(2) Upon the judgment so pronounced a decree shall follow and no appeal shall lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award

Points of distinction between s 256 of the Code of 1882 and this paragraph —

1 The words where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon have been added into cl (1) to negative the view held by the High Court of Bombay under the old section that the Court had no power to determine questions relating to the factum and validity of the agreement to refer and of the award and to give effect to the view held by the other High Courts See notes below Where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration &c

The word proved has been substituted for the word shown In fact it was held under the old section that the word shown meant proved (a) See notes below under the head Proved

Does not apply —This paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies See notes to s 89

When the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon —These words are new In the absence of these words in the corresponding section of the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Court of Bombay that if an application was made under that section to file an award and the other party raised objections to the factum or validity of the submission and award the Court has no jurisdiction to inquire whether the parties had or had not referred the matters in dispute to arbitration and should therefore reject the application and refer the applicant to a regular suit to enforce the award (b) On the other hand the High Courts of Allahabad (c) Calcutta (d) and Madras (e) held that the Court had the power under that section to determine all questions relating to the existence and validity of the alleged agreement to refer and of the award and that the applicant must not be referred to a separate suit The present paragraph supersedes the Bombay decisions and gives effect to the decisions of the other High Courts

Proved —It is not sufficient to allege grounds of objections under paras. 14 and 15 It is necessary that the grounds of objection should be proved See notes above under the head Points of distinction etc

Arbitration

Sch II, para 21

Grounds of objection under paras 14 and 15—Where a matter has been referred to arbitration under an order of the Court the Court has power in the cases mentioned in para 14 to remit the award to the reconsideration of the arbitrator Thus if an award determines any matter not referred to arbitration the Court may remit the award under para 14 and if such matter can be separated without affecting the determination of the matters referred the Court may amend the award by striking out that portion of the award which is in excess of the reference and enforce the award as to the rest of it In the case however of an arbitration without the intervention of the Court [paras 20 21] the High Courts have held in a series of cases that if the award determines matters outside the scope of the reference the Court must refuse to file the award even when the matter not referred can be separated from that which was referred the reason given being that the Court had under this para only two courses open to it, namely to file the award or refuse to file it and that it had no power to remit or amend the award (f) This however is incorrect for para 21 refers to para 14 where the principle of separation is recognised. The point is concluded by the decision of the Privy Council (g) that the part of the award which is good should be filed and the remainder that is bad rejected

An arithmetical error according to the Allahabad High Court does not render the award invalid (h) But the Lahore High Court has held that the Judge has no power to correct an arithmetical mistakes even with the consent of the parties affected the reason given being that a Court acting under this paragraph must either file the award as it is or refuse to file it (i) But this is inconsistent with the Privy Council ruling referred to above

Award made after long delay—Where the agreement to refer was made in 1905 and the award was not made until 1910 and the Court came to the conclusion that it would probably not have been made at all but for one of the parties having brought a criminal complaint against one of the arbitrators the Court refused the application to file the award. The Court presumed from the circumstances of the case that the reference had been abandoned (j)

Award made after revocation of submission—An award made after the agreement to refer has been revoked by one of the parties thereto for good cause cannot be filed under this paragraph (k)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this paragraph filing or refusing to file an award [s 104 sub s (1) cl (f)] even though no express order is made (l) But no appeal lies from the order passed on appeal (m) see s 104 (2) (n) But s. 104 refers to appeals within British India and does not take away the right of appeal to Privy Council given by section 109 (o) Again though an appeal lies from an order made under the paragraph no appeal lies from a decree passed on an award except in so far as the decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award (p) [see sub para (2)] But is the right of appeal lost if the decree on the award is passed before the appeal is preferred from the order? It has been held that it is not and it has been further held that if the appellate Court sets aside the order it is competent also to declare that the decree based on the order is vacated (q) See notes to para 15 above Award made after expiration of period allowed by the Court

The making of a decree is no bar to an application to restore a petition of objection which has been dismissed for default of appearance (r) A applies to file an award under para 20 B objects to the filing of the award on certain grounds On the date fixed for the hearing of the objections B does not appear Thereupon his objections are disallowed and an ex parte decree is passed against B in accordance with the award B thereupon applies under O 9 r 13 to set aside the ex parte decree and to hear his objections to the award The application is rejected B then appeals from the order rejecting the application. Is the order appealable? Yes it is appealable under O 43 r 1 (d) by which it is provided that an appeal lies from an order rejecting an application for an order to set aside an ex parte decree in a case open to appeal The case is one open to appeal for the question between the parties was whether or not the award should be filed as a decree of the Court and any order made upon it would be appealable under s 104 sub s (1) cl (f) (s)

Res judicata—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the refusal of a Court to file a private award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrator does not operate as res judicata in respect of a suit subsequently brought to enforce the award the reason given being that the doctrine of res judicata pre supposes a former suit and a decree in that suit and that the order of refusal is not a decree but merely an order (t) This decision has been followed by the Bombay High Court (u) The Calcutta High Court has held that the bar of res judicata would only apply to grounds of objection referred to in paras. 14 and 15 heard and finally decided (v)

Withdrawal of suit—The fact that an application has been made under para 20 does not preclude the applicant from withdrawing the application under O 23 r 1 at any time prior to the pronouncement of judgment and preparation of the decree

2 [S 325] Where the execution of a decree, not being a decree ordering the sale of immovable property in pursuance of a contract specifically affecting the same but being a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of which the Court has ordered the sale of immovable property, has been so transferred the Collector, if, after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, he has reason to believe that all the liabilities of the judgment debtor can be discharged without a sale of the whole of his available immovable property, may proceed as hereinafter provided

S 107 Court on the ground that the order of the Subordinate Court has proceeded on an error of law or an error of fact (e) A High Court in the exercise of its superintending power will not ordinarily interfere except in cases of grave and otherwise irreparable injustice (f)

The power of revision conferred upon a High Court by s 115 of the Civil Procedure Code is limited to cases in which no appeal lies to the High Court There is no such limitation upon the power of superintendence conferred upon a High Court by the present section (g) All that is necessary is that the Court over which the power of superintendence is sought to be exercised should be subject to its appellate jurisdiction If the Subordinate Court is one from which an appeal lies to the High Court though in certain specified cases only then it is subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court and that is sufficient to attract the power of superintendence conferred by this section and that power may therefore be exercised over the Subordinate Court even in cases where a direct appeal does not lie (h) Under this power a High Court can direct a transfer of an inquiry under sec 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act into the conduct of a pleader (i)

Insolvency proceedings —The Insolvency Judge in the High Court has no power under this section to stay insolvency proceedings in a District Court (j)

Power of superintendence Criminal proceedings —In the exercise of its power of superintendence the High Court will interfere with an order under s 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1898 when the Magistrate has acted without jurisdiction or has exceeded his jurisdiction or where there has been a material irregularity in the proceedings which amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction or to an usurpation of jurisdiction or which has prejudiced a party to the proceedings (k) In case of a difference of opinion the senior Judge s opinion will prevail (l)

The High Court has power under this section to stay the trial of a criminal case by a Magistrate pending the decision of a civil suit between the parties (m) and to set aside an order by a Collector directing a prosecution (n)

Agency Courts —Under rule 14 of the Rules of 1920 framed under the Ganjam and Vizagapatam Agency Courts Act 24 of 1839 and under the present section the High Court has power to transfer to its file cases pending before the Agency Commissioner (o) The High Court has power under this section to transfer a case from the Mewas Agent to the District Court Khandesh (p)

(1) where there is no remedy by revision or appeal (w)

(2) where it is doubtful whether the High Court has the power to revise under s 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure (x)

DESPATCH FROM SECRETARY OF STATE

SIR CHARLES WOOD'S DESPATCH ACCOMPANYING FIRST LETTERS PATENT OR CHARTER

Judicial No 4

INDIA OFFICE
London 14*th May* 1862

To

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

MY LORD

I HEREWITH transmit to you the Letters Patent or Charter (a) under the Royal Sign Manual for the High Court of Judicature to be established in Bengal in accordance with the provisions of the Act 24 and 25 Victoria Chapter 104 for establishing High Court of Judicature in India and request that you will take immediate measure for instituting the Court the first Judges of which including those appointed under the 3rd section of the Act are designated in the second clause of the Charter Those appointed by the Crown will be severally informed by me of their appointments to the Court

2 This Charter will accomplish the great object which has so long been contemplated of substituting for the Supreme and Sudder Courts abolished by the Act of High Court of Judicature possessing the combined powers and authorities of the abolished Courts and exercising jurisdiction both over the Provinces under the Sudder Court and over the Presidency Town which forms the local jurisdiction of the Supreme Court

3 Before I review the provisions in detail it is necessary that I should direct your attention to the general scope and main provisions of the Act in question

4 It abolishes in the first place (as soon as the Charter shall issue) the Supreme Court and the Court of Sudder Dewany Adawlut It vests in the High Court (by the last provision of section 9) the powers and authorities of those Courts respectively except so far as the Crown may by such Charter otherwise direct And by (the first part of the same section) it invests the High Court with such Civil Criminal Admiralty Vice Admiralty Testamentary Intestate and Matrimonial Jurisdiction and all such powers and authority in relation to the administration of justice in the Presidency as the same Charter may confer With respect therefore to the fusion of the Supreme and Sudder Courts it appears obvious that the Act itself speaks and that to assume and effect the same purpose by affirmative declaration in the Charter would be superfluous It has been consequently deemed unnecessary that the Charter should exhibit on the face of it an explicit statement of the powers and jurisdiction to be possessed by the new Court in consequence of the fusion as would have been the proper course if these powers and jurisdiction had been entirely new Recourse has been had in some places in lieu of such explicit statement to reference to statutory provisions and in others to the Charter of the Supreme Court when the object of clearness appeared to require it But wherever the Charter does not otherwise specify the High Court will use powers and administer the jurisprudence appertaining to those Courts respectively to whose authority it now succeeds

(a) The Letters Patent, dated the 14th May 1862 forwarded with this despatch were afterwards revoked by further Letters Patent dated th December 1865 for which see post.

Despatch from Secretary of State

5 But the Charter is intended positively to declare all such Civil Criminal and other jurisdictions above specified as the Crown thinks proper by this Charter to confer on it supplementary or additional to its main purpose namely the fusion of the aforesaid Courts

6 Moreover the words giving authority to confer on the Court such jurisdiction and such powers and authorities for the administration of justice as the Crown may deem fit appear very large and such as in point of fact invest the Crown with extensive legislative powers so far as the administration of justice within the meaning of the sections may require It has been however thought best to use this power very sparingly and simply as ancillary to the real purpose of the Act namely the establishment of new Courts

7 Another reason for the form which the present Letters Patent assume is to be found in the provisions of section 17 of the Act of last Sessions By that section power is given to the Crown to recall the Letters Patent establishing the Court at any time within three years after its establishment and to grant other Letters Patent in their stead This provision was inserted in the Act mainly with the view of enabling Her Majesty's Government to avail themselves of the advice and assistance of the Judges of the Court in framing the more perfect Charter by which the jurisdiction and authority of the Court is to be permanently fixed On this point I request you will put yourselves in communication with the Judges of the Court and at any time previous to the expiration of two years from the date of establishment of the Court furnish me with any suggestions they may make or any amendments they may propose in the Letters Patent now transmitted and I shall be glad if in proposing alteration the Judges will put their recommendations as nearly as possible in the form in which they wish them to appear in the future Letters Patent

8 I proceed to notice in order such of the provisions of the Charter as appear to me to call for special remark

Clause 6

9 By clause 6 power is given to the Chief Justice to appoint the officers of the Court and to fix their salaries subject however in both cases to the approval and confirmation of the Governor General in Council This provision does not refer to the setting of tables of fees where fees are allowed which under section 15 of the Act is required to be done by the Court

10 The Supreme Court exercise an authority entirely independent of the Government in regard to its ministerial officers The Government however has always considered itself at liberty to receive representations from any of the officers of the Subordinate Courts who felt themselves aggrieved by the orders of the Judicial Authorities and to express its opinion on the propriety or otherwise of the proceedings of the Courts in such cases It will be expedient for you to take the question in a very consideration and after communication with the Court to adopt some rule in regard to it which of course must be uniformly applicable to all the officers of the Court Constituted as the High Court will be it will merit all the confidence you can repose in it but as a question of policy the extension of the liberty of application to the Government to those who have not hitherto enjoyed it appears to me preferable to taking it away from those who have heretofore been permitted to avail themselves of it as a mode of obtaining redress against proceedings alleged by the applicants to be unjust and oppressive

Despatch from Secretary of St

11 In regard to the admission of Advocates Vakeels and Attorneys the recommendations of the Law Commissioners have been followed

Clauses 7 10

Under the existing practice the Advocate pleads and the Attorney acts for the suitors of the Supreme Court and the Vakeel both pleads and acts for the suitors of the Sudder Court of which Court the Advocate and Attorney of the Supreme Court are ex officio Vakeels The e terms are employed in the Charter simply to express the functions of these several classes of practitioners The Advocate and Attorney will respectively plead and act in the High Court and the Vakeel will both plead and act in the High Court as he did in the Sudder Court Any per on may apply to be admitted either as an Advocate or Vakeel or Attorney under the rules which the Court is authorised by the Charter to make and there is nothing in the Charter to prevent the admission of Advocates and Attorneys to be also Vakeels of the High Court should the Judges consider such a course to be expedient

12 The provi ions in the Act section 2 clause 4 which declares that Pleader of the Sudder Court who shall have been admitted as Pleaders of the High Court shall be eligible under certain condition to the Bench of the Court implies that a discretionary power may be exerci ed as to the admi sion of the present Pleaders of the Sudder Court to the Bar of the High Court This enactment will account to you for the omission from the Charter of any provision appointing all the present practitioners of the Supreme and Sudder Courts to the High Court I conclude however that unless in any special case there are strong rea ons to the contrary the Court will admit the whole of the practitioners in the aboli hed Courts at the date of their abolition to be the first Advocates Vakeels and Attorneys of the High Court

13 With reference to the concluding sentence of clause 10 it is to be ob erved that the Letters Patent contain no provision re erving to the Attorneys of the present Supreme Court the right of pleading after the issue of this Charter in the Insolvent Court as newly regulated by clau e 17 No such provision however is necessary as the Insolvent Court is a separate tribunal not affected by the Act authorising the Letters Patent and will continue a separate Court though for the future presided over by a Judge of the High Court The Attorneys therefore will as heretofore practise in accordance with the rules of the Insolvent Court itself

14 By the important provisions contained in the clau es of the Charter 11 to 38 inclusive effect is given to the 9th section of the Act respecting the juri dictions and powers to be exercised by the High Court

15 The original civil juri diction now exercised by the Supreme Court within the limits of the Presidency Town will henceforth be exercised under the Charter by the High Court includin ... term (Clau e 36 of the Charter) a Judge or Division ... of the High Court appointed or constituted under the provisions of the 13th ... the Act

Civil Jurisdiction Clause 11

16 As it is very de irable that every suit should be instituted in the Court ... district in which the property forming the subject of dispute is situated or ... cau e of action has its origin or in which the defendant resides or carries ... the juri diction hitherto exercised by the Supreme Court (on the ground of ... inhabitancy or otherwi e) over persons and property beyond the local ... Presidency Town but within the limits of the Presidency or Divi ... authority of the High Court has not been vested in the High Court ...

Despatch from Secretary of State

provision of clause 11 provides that the exercise of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Court shall be confined to the local limits of the Presidency Town, with power however to the Court under clause 13 to call for and try any suit instituted in any Court subject to its superintendence when for reasons to be recorded it shall think proper to do so

Clause 1

17 The terms of clause 12 defining the original jurisdiction of the High Court as to suits are nearly similar to those employed in section 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859) and are intended to include every description of case over which the Mofussil Courts have jurisdiction By the 8th section of the 21st George III C 70 the Supreme Court is precluded from exercising any jurisdiction in any matter concerning the revenue Further a decision * of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council pronounced in April 1856 ruled against the exercise of the Ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in matters matrimonial between others than Christians and even expressed some hesitation as to whether that Court should administer a remedy in such cases on the Civil side It is one object of the present Charter to do away with all such restrictions and limitations as far as this can be done without trenching on the proper province of legislation. It has therefore been sought to invest the High Court in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction with as ample powers in receiving and determining cases of every description and in applying a remedy to every wrong as are exercised by the Courts not established by Royal Charter and thus to place the Courts of first instance in the Presidency Towns and in the interior of the country in this respect as nearly as may be on the same footing

Ardaseer Cursetjee v Perozeboye

18 I shall be glad to be furnished with your opinion after consultation with the Judges of the Courts as to the concluding portion of clause 12 excluding the jurisdiction of the Court in regard to cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court of Calcutta in which the debt or damage or value of the property sued for does not exceed 100 Rupees Hitherto I believe there has been no tendency to bring into the Supreme Court cases cognizable by the Small Cause Court but should it appear that under the new system the time of the High Court is unnecessarily taken up with trying cases which might be instituted in the Small Cause Court it may become a question for consideration whether the sum excluding the jurisdiction of the High Court might not be raised to say 300 or 500 Rupees

19 It has been suggested that the Small Cause Court should be placed on the same footing as a Zillah Court in its subjection to the High Court as a Court of appeal and general superintendence But I do not consider that it was the purpose of the Act of Parliament of last Session that the Crown in framing a Charter under it for the High Court should interfere with the present position and jurisdiction of other and independent Courts This subject if desirable is properly to be attained by legislation. Should you be of opinion that the Small Cause Court ought to be placed in the same relation to the High Court as any other Court subject to its appellate jurisdiction and general control the measure can be carried into effect by an Act of the Governor General in Council

20. As already observed the effect of clause 12 will be to confine the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court within narrower limits than the civil jurisdiction exercised by the Supreme Court By Clause 13 however the High Court is empowered

* Reported in 6 Moo I.A 348

to call for and to try as a Court of first instance any suit which the law requires to be instituted before some other tribunal By the exercise of the power thus conferred on it the High Court will be enabled to obviate all reasonable ground of complaint when it shall deem that any hardship or injustice is likely to result from the compulsory institution in a Zillah Court of a suit which but for the change in the system might have been instituted in the Supreme Court

21 The introduction of the words whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William in this and in several other clauses may appear to require explanation The Court about to be established is called in section 2 of the Act 24 and 25 Victoria C 104 a Court for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William That title is of course preserved in the Charter By sec 8 the Supreme and Sudder Courts are abolished and by section 9 all their jurisdiction power and authority except when otherwise provided are vested in the High Court But the Supreme Court has various original jurisdiction extending over the whole of the Presidency of Fort William and also over some of the Non Regulation Provinces under the Government of India and the Sudder Court has various appellate jurisdictions extending over the Bengal Division of the Presidency and also over the Province of Assam and others which are not properly parts of the Presidency The result is that the High Court for the Bengal Division succeeding to the powers of both the Supreme and the Sudder Courts has in several respects jurisdictions in territories not within the Bengal Division As this is the result of the Act it might not have been necessary to notice it in the Charter But for the sake of clearness and in order to show distinctly that the Charter is meant to apply to these extra local jurisdiction as well as to the strictly local jurisdiction within the Bengal Division it has been deemed advisable to introduce these words

22 Clauses 14 and 15 give effect to the recommendation of the law Commissioners that the High Court shall have all the appellate jurisdiction which is now exercised by the Sudder Dewany Adawlut and a new appellate jurisdiction and civil cases from the Courts of original jurisdiction constituted by one or more of its own Judges except that in the case of a decision which has been passed by a majority of the full number of the judges of the Court the appeal shall lie to Her Majesty in Council

Clauses 14 and 15

23 It will appear from a subsequent clause of the Letters Patent that the proceedings in the High Court in civil cases are to be regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure enacted by the Legislature of India of which Act XXIII of 1861 forms a part By section 23 of the last mentioned Indian Act provision has been made for a difference of opinion on the hearing of an appeal A difficulty however may occur when two Judges constituting a Division Court for the trial of cases in the exercise of original jurisdiction, differ as to the judgment to be given For such a case the Code of Civil Procedure which is adapted to Courts of first instance presided over by single Judges only contain no provision. To call in a third Judge and to re try the case with a view to a judgment from which there may be an appeal to the High Court under clause 14 would be productive of unnecessary delay and expense to the parties and I am of opinion that the Court should make provision for such a contingency by a rule made under the 13th section of the Act of Parliament providing either that the judgment shall be in accordance with the opinion of the senior of the Judges constituting the Division Court or that the final judgment shall be entered pro forma according to such opinion such judgment being a judgment for the purpose of an appeal against the same but not for any other purpose

Despatch from Secretary of State

Clauses 18 19 and 20

24 The substantive civil law to be administered by the High Court in the jurisdiction of the Supreme and Sudder Court respectively will until otherwise provided continue as at present. This, as I have said, it was no part of the purpose of the Act of Parliament or Charter to effect. And the clauses on which I am now commenting are perhaps superfluous. But they have been introduced to obviate any apprehension which might have been entertained that in fusing the two Courts together it was intended to fuse also the law which they have respectively hitherto administered and thus to make a substantial innovation not only in the tribunals for administration of the law but of the law itself. I trust however that measures may be taken ere long for effecting great improvements in this respect by enacting for the British possessions in India a body of substantive law by which all classes shall be governed and all transactions shall be regulated except in cases to which our Judicatures are required to apply the personal laws of any classes of our Indian subjects

Clauses 1 ? and 38

25 Under clauses 21 22 and 38 no change will be effected by the Charter in the administration of criminal justice in the Presidency Town or in respect of persons subject to its criminal jurisdiction residing in the interior of the country. It appears however to Her Majesty's Government that some modification of the existing practice both at the capital and in the provinces is necessary and on these points I shall address you in a separate despatch

Clause 23

26 The Sudder Court exercises no original jurisdiction but by clause 23 original criminal jurisdiction throughout the territories subject to its authority has been given to the High Court, the principal object being to enable the Judges to hold trials for offences committed out of the Presidency Town at which from their importance or for other specific cause it may be expedient that a Judge or Judges of the High Court should preside

Clauses 24 ?8

27 The remaining clauses of the Letters Patent on the subject of the criminal jurisdiction of the High Court do not call for any particular notice. They contain no special provisions respecting the transfer to that Court of the criminal jurisdiction exercised by the Supreme Court over inhabitants of such parts of India as are not comprised within the local limits of the Letters Patent that having been fully provided for by section 10 of the Act under the authority of which the High Court is established

28 As in the case of the Small Cause Court you will consult the Judges in regard to the relation in which the High Court is to stand to the Magistrates of Calcutta

Clause 30

29 Clause 30 respecting the exercise of the jurisdiction by the High Court elsewhere than at its ordinary place of sitting is a very important provision and one which I have no doubt if judiciously carried into effect will materially tend to the greater efficiency of all the judicatories subject to the superintendence and authority of the High Court. Circumstances may frequently arise when the deputation of a Judge or Judges of the High Court would be a measure of the highest expediency. ... the clause under consideration will enable the Government to provide by deputing one or more Judges from the High Court who would avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded them of making a searching inquiry into the manner in which the local Courts were performing their duties

Despatch from Secretary

30 With reference to this clause it has been considered whether the precedence of section 14 of the Act of Parliament should not be followed and the authority to make the nece sary arrangement for exercise of the Court s juri diction out of the usual place of sitting vested in the Chief Justice On the whole it wa thought that acts partaking so much of an administrative character might be more perfectly performed by the Governor General in Council But it is scarcely for me to add that Her Majesty s Government entertain full confidence that the Chief Justice will be the authority habitually consulted in the matter

Clauses 31 and 3

31 The Supreme Court exercises at pre ent Admiralty Jurisdiction under its Charter The Chief Justice has Vice Admiralty Jurisdiction under the commission of the 19th July 1822 and all or any of the Judges of the Supreme Court may be appointed Commissioners under the provisions of 39 and 40 George III C 9 section 25 for the trial and adjudication of prize causes and other maritime questions arising in India By the present Charter the whole of the e jurisdictions and power will be vested in the High Court and as in the A t above cited by the expression other maritime que tions in general mention is made of all the juri dictions conferred as above mentioned in the clau es of the Charter providing both for the civil and criminal maritime jurisdiction of the High Court

Clauses 33 and 34

32 The clauses respecting te tamentary and intestate juri diction do not call for any remark

Clause 3

33 Her Majesty s Government are desirous of placing the Christian subjects of the Crown within the Presidency in the same position under the High Court as to matters matrimonial in general as they now are under the Supreme Court and this they believe to be effected by clause 35 of the Charter But they consider it expedient that the High Court should pos ess in addition the power of decreeing divorce which the Supreme Court does not possess in other words that the High Court should have the same juri diction as the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England established in virtue of 20 and 21 Vic C 85 and in regard to which further provisions were made by 22 and 23 Vic C 61 and 23 and 24 Vic C 144 The Act of Parliament for establishing the High Court however does not purport to give to the Crown the power of importing into the Charter all the provisions of the Divorce Court Act and some of them the Crown clearly could not so import such for instance as tho e which prescribe the period of re-marriage or tho e which exempt from punishment clergymen refusing to re marry adulterers All these are in truth matters for Indian legislation and I request that you will immediately take the subject into your con ideration and introduce into your Council a Bill for conferring upon the High Court the jurisdiction and powers of the Divorce Court in England one of the provisions of which should be to give an appeal to the Privy Council in those ca es in which the Divorce Court Act gives an appeal to the House of Lords.

34 The object of the proviso at the end of clause 35 is to obviate any doubt that may po sibly arise as to whether by vesting the High Court with the powers of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England it was intended to take away from the Courts within the divi ions of the Presidency not established by Royal Charter any jurisdiction which they might have in matters Matrimonial as for instance in a suit for alimony between Armenians or Native Christians With any such jurisdiction it is not intended to interfere

35 Clause 36 refers to the powers of single Judges and Division Courts appointed or constituted under the provisions of the 13th section of the Act By section 14 of the Act the power of determining from time to time what Judge in each case shall sit alone and what Judges shall constitute Division Courts is placed in the hands of the Chief Justice It will be observed that the law does not require that a Judge selected from the Bar shall necessarily form a part of every Division Court and it will be for the Chief Justice to consider whether in cases exclusively between natives it will not be desirable to follow as far as possible the course which has already been resolved upon in regard to the cases under appeal to the Sudder Court at the time of its abolition and to constitute the Division Court of Judges trained in the country whose knowledge of the Native language will obviate the expense and delay of translating the proceedings

Clause 36

36 Clause 37 is a very important one and there is little doubt will prove a very salutary provision. It has therefore been inserted, although the change introduced is somewhat greater and more substantial than is generally aimed at in this Charter It extends to the High Court the Code of Civil Procedure enacted by the Legislature of India for the Court not established by Royal Charter and thus accomplishes the object so far contemplated of substituting one simple Code of Procedure for the various systems (corresponding to its common law equity and admiralty jurisdiction) which have been in operation in the Supreme Court since the date of its establishment

37 In regard to the rules respecting appeals to the Privy Council the object has been to avoid unnecessary innovation where so much of change with its necessary inconvenience is unavoidable The existing rules which regulate these appeals are therefore left in force with one or two additions only which experience in the Court of the Judicial Committee has found advisable. For instance clause 40 is introduced, as it had been commonly introduced of late years in the appeal rules of other dependencies of Great Britain in order to remove all doubts as to the power of the High Court to allow an appeal to the Council from interlocutory judgments

38 It will however be obvious to you that the rules as now framed will be liable to the reproach of confusion and perhaps of uncertainty They will be compounded of those contained in the Charter and those already in force which will necessitate reference to several documents You will agree with me that a simple and intelligible Code of Rules to regulate appeals to the Privy Council from the new High Courts or rather from the High Courts in general which may be constituted under the Act of Parliament would be of great advantage to the suitors and the public I should wish therefore that one of the first objects of the Judges as soon as the amount of labour thrown on them by their new position may allow it might be to prepare suggestions for such a Code of Rules which might then be reduced into a complete shape by the authority of the Privy Council at Home

39 In forwarding the Letters Patent to the Judges of the High Court you are requested to furnish them with a copy of this despatch. I trust that the Letters Patent taken in connection with the Act for establishing the Court will be found to contain everything requisite for enabling the Court to proceed at once to the discharge of its important duties. It is possible that omissions may be discovered by the local authorities in India which may impede the proper action of the Courts and should the Judges represent to you that such is the case you will take immediate steps for supplying what is wanting by such legislative measures as you may consider most expedient for remedying the defects brought under your consideration.

Despatch from Secretary of 40 I cannot conclude this despatch without expressing the deep interest felt by Her Majesty s Government in the success of this important measure The Crown by its Letters Patent has sanctioned the establishment of a tribunal as the Chief Court of Justice in India which in the trained learning of the Judges selected from the Bar and in the knowledge of the language feelings and habits of the Natives of that country possessed by the other members of the Court combines the most material elements of success And Her Majesty s Government look with confidence to the zealous exertions and cordial co operation of the Judges to place the administration of Justice in India under the controlling authority of the Court in such a state of efficiency as will render it in every respect adequate to its ends and satisfactory to the people and to the Government

I have the honour to be

My Lord

Your Lordship s most obedient humble Servant

(December 28, 1865)

Bar Councils Act —The powers of a High Court under clauses 9 and 10 of the Letters Patent are subject to the provisions of the Indian Bar Councils Act See s 19 (2) of Act 38 of 1926 A complaint of misconduct by an advocate must first be referred for inquiry to the Bar Council (c)

Power to remove or suspend on reasonable cause —The words on reasonable cause are not confined to purely professional misconduct but embrace all causes which may afford reasonable ground for suspension or removal (d) As to what is reasonable cause see the undermentioned cases (e) The Madras High Court has held that negligence is not professional misconduct (f)

An attorney is an officer of the Court and any person aggrieved by the misconduct of an Attorney has the right to invoke the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Court (g)

Proceedings in the disciplinary jurisdiction are not of a criminal nature and the rules of Criminal Procedure such as filing a written statement by the accused do not apply (h)

Professional etiquette affecting counsel —It is unprofessional for counsel to cross examine a witness as to facts about which he has no instructions but are within his personal knowledge When counsel during the hearing of a case calls for the production of a book which is produced and handed to him by his opponent with certain pages marked as those only to which he may refer in respect of the subject matter of his cross examination it is improper for counsel who calls for the book to inspect any of the other pages There is nothing unprofessional in counsel giving evidence in a case in which he appears as counsel though as a general practice it is undesirable (i) Where

Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court

Local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court

11. And We hereby ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have and exercise ordinary original civil jurisdiction within such local limits as may, from time to time, be declared and prescribed by any law made by competent legislative authority for India and until some local limits shall be so declared and prescribed within the limit declared and prescribed by the proclamation fixing the limits of Calcutta issued by the Governor-General in Council, on the 10th day of September, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and ninety four and the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the said High Court shall not extend beyond the limits for the time being declared and prescribed as the local limits of such jurisdiction (k)

Local limits —Power is given by s 109 of the Government of India Act to the Governor General in Council to alter the local limits of the jurisdiction of High Courts

Issue of warrant.—The High Court has no power in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction to issue a warrant against the person of a judgment debtor and appoint a special bailiff to execute it against the judgment-debtor wherever he might be found in the Presidency (l) Such an order however may be made for the arrest of a defendant who has been guilty of a contempt of Court (m) The reason is that an order for attachment for contempt is not an order made in exercise of the High Court s civil jurisdiction (n)

Original jurisdiction as to suits

12 And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction shall be empowered to receive try, and determine suits of every description, if, in the case of suits for land or other immoveable property, such land or property shall be situated, or, in all other cases, if the cause of action shall have arisen either wholly, or, in case the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained, in part, within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the said High Court or if the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit shall dwell or carry on business, or personally work for gain, within such limits, except that the said High Court shall not have such original jurisdiction in cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta in which the debt or damage, or value of the property sued for does not exceed one hundred rupees Cl 1[illegible]

Scope of the clause—Barring certain suits specified at the end of this clause the High Courts of Calcutta Madras and Bombay are empowered to try the following suits in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction namely—

I Suits for land or other immovable property—

(a) if the land or property is situated wholly within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the said High Courts or

(b) where the land or property is situated in part only within the said limits if the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained (o) See notes below Suit for land of which a part is within jurisdiction

II Suits other than those for land—

(a) if the cause of action has arisen wholly within the said limits or

(b) where the cause of action has arisen in part only within the said limits if the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained or

(c) if the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit dwells or carries on business or personally works for gain within such limits

Suits for land or other immovable property—The High Court of Calcutta has held that a suit for land within the meaning of this clause is a suit substantially for land that is for the purpose of acquiring title to or possession of land (p) or for declaring an interest in land (q) A agrees in Calcutta to sell to B land situated outside the original jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court If A fails to perform his contract and B sues A for specific performance the suit is one for land and it will not be entertained by the Court the land being situated outside its jurisdiction. But if B fails to perform his contract and A sues B for specific performance the suit is not one for land, and hence the suit will lie in the Calcutta Court (r) Similarly a suit by a mortgagee for specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage of land is a suit for land and it will not be entertained by the Calcutta Court if the land is situated beyond the original jurisdiction of the Court (s) And it has been laid down by the same High Court that

Cl 12 suits for redemption or foreclosure or for sale of mortgage property are all suits for land, and they will not be entertained by that Court if the land is situated beyond its or jurisdiction (t) also that a suit by a lessee for a declaration that a lease was a subsisting lease and for rents and profits is a suit for land, and it will not be entertained if the land is situated beyond its jurisdiction (u) A suit fo a share in the sale pr ceeds of land without jurisdiction is not a suit for land (v) Page J in the case last cited said that the term suits for land or other immovable property means suits in which having regard to the issues raised in the pleadings the decree or order will affect directly the proprietary or possessory title to land or other immovable property The learned Judge observed that this construction conformed to the rule that que tions relatin to title or ownership of land should be determined not only by the lex situs but also in the forum situs In short the Calcutta High Court would appear to hold that suits of the kind mentioned in cls (a) to (e) of s 16 of the Code are all suits for land (w) The same view was taken until recently by the Madras High Court (x) In Vellappa Chettiar v Govinda Dass (y) a Full Bench of the Madras High Court held that a suit by a purchaser of land situate outside Madras for specific performance of a contract to sell made in Madras against the vendor who resides in Madras is not a suit for land and is cognisable by the High Court of Madras In the view taken by Coutts Trotter C J a suit in which the plaintiff asks for a decree which if passed, would compel the defendant to do or abstain from doing something which the Court orders him to do would not be a suit for land but a suit in which a plaintiff asks for a decree which, if passed would bring about proprio vigore an immediate change in the ownership of property would be a suit for land (z) Thus a suit for maintenance in which the plaintiff prays that the amount may be charged on specific land is a suit for land for if a charge is created by the decree it can be enforced by a sale of the land (a)

The High Court of Bombay gives a very restricted meaning to the expression suit for land Sir Charles Sargent in Hollar v Dadabhai (b) held that the Court had jurisdiction to try a suit for specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage made in Bombay of land situate outside the original jurisdiction. The ratio decidendi was that the expression suit for land was intended to exclude from the Court's jurisdiction only such suits relating to land as if brought in England, the Courts would refuse to entertain on the ground that the land was situate abroad. This case was followed, though sometimes with evident reluctance for many years Farren C. J in an unreported case (c) passed a foreclosure decree on a mortgage of land outside jurisdiction, and this was followed by Strachey J in Sorabji v Ruttonji (d) In Hunsraj v Runchordas (e) a purchaser s suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell land situate beyond the local limits of jurisdiction was entertained although the prayer was that the defendant be ordered upon making out a marketable title to execute a conveyance thereof to the plaintiff In Venkatrao v Khimji (f) a suit for sale was decreed on a mortgage of land outside jurisdiction and Scott C J said that such a suit was not a suit for land as it was not a suit to obtain land or to obtain a declaration of title to land or to obtain damages for interference with land. This case was followed ...

much hesitation by Shah J and Jasraj v Akubai (g) which was also a suit for sale by a mortgagee On the other hand Jenkins C J in Vaghoji v Camaji (h) correctly summarised the principles on which the Courts in England exercise jurisdiction in suits relating to land abroad and refused to make a declaration of title to land outside jurisdiction This was followed in Pranlal v Goculdas (i) where Pratt J held that the Court had no jurisdiction to make a declaration as to which of two mortgages of land outside jurisdiction had priority In Yeshwadabai v Janardhan (j) Fawcett J held that a suit by a wife praying that her maintenance be secured by a charge on her husband's immovable property in Bombay was a suit for land The same learned Judge in Rajah Kolakkal v Malabar Timber Co (k) said that if the land is outside jurisdiction a suit to declare a charge on it is not a suit for land but resiled from this opinion in his judgment in Hatimbhai v Framroz (l)

Now as explained by Jenkins C J in Vaghoji v Camaji (m) the Courts in England do not entertain suits for land outside jurisdiction unless (1) the defendant is in England and (2) there is some privity between the parties on the ground of contract trust or fraud The defendant in Holkar's case did not reside or carry on business in Bombay and this fact appears to have been overlooked in the judgment The case was adversely criticized on this ground in previous editions of this commentary and that criticism was entirely accepted by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court in India Spinning and Weaving Co v Climax Syndicate (n) In that case the plaintiff mortgagee had filed a suit against the defendant mortgagor who resided out of jurisdiction asking for the sale of the mortgaged properties which were also outside jurisdiction The mortgage had been executed in Bombay and though curiously enough the judgment does not refer to this fact that was the circumstance which brought the case within Holkar v Dadabhai Nevertheless the Court overruling Holkar v Dadabhai said the suit was not competent The Court entirely agreed with the Calcutta decisions and quoted with approval the dictum of Jenkins C J in Sudamdih Coal Co v Empire Coal Co (o) that regard must be had to the substance of the suit in deciding whether it was a suit for land.

But the Bombay High Court has again changed its mind and in Hatimbhai v Framroz (p) a Full Bench has held that a suit by a mortgagee to enforce his mortgage by sale of the land mortgaged is not a suit for land and that if the mortgagor lives within jurisdiction the High Court can entertain the suit even though the land is wholly outside the limits of its original civil jurisdiction The judgment does not proceed on the equitable jurisdiction wrongly claimed in Holkar's case but rests on two main grounds (1) that a suit for sale on a mortgage is a suit in personam to recover a debt and (2) that suits for land are suits the primary object of which is to obtain a declaration of title to or possession of land This view is inconsistent with the definition of mortgage in sec 58 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 The same High Court has held (q) following Hatimbhai's case and dissenting from Pranlal v Goculdas (r) that the High Court has jurisdiction in a suit brought by an equitable mortgagee against the mortgagor for lands situate outside Bombay to implead a legal mortgagee residing out of Bombay and alleging a prior legal mortgage in his favour provided the legal mortgage is executed in Bombay

Cl 12 Suits for the partition of land and suits for a declaration of title to land are suits for land and will not be entertained if the land is outside jurisdiction (s) A suit for damages for trespass to land is a suit for land (t) Suits for the recovery of title deeds are according to the Calcutta High Court not suits for land (u) but the Bombay High Court has held that they are if a question of title to land is involved (v) This seems incorrect for as said in India Spinning and Weaving Co v Climax Syndicate (w) it is difficult to see how a suit to recover title deeds can be beyond the jurisdiction of the Court if the defendant is within the jurisdiction

The Bombay High Court has held that an administration suit is not a suit for land although there are immovable properties alleged to belong to the estate of the deceased beyond jurisdiction and the High Court therefore can entertain such a suit and determine the question whether they belonged to the deceased at the time of his death If the suit is otherwise within jurisdiction no leave under cl. 12 is necessary merely because the immovable properties or some of them are situated beyond jurisdiction (x) The High Court of Calcutta has held that a suit for administration, and as incidental to that suit for a declaration that certain leases granted by the executors of the estate cannot stand as against the plaintiff (the beneficiary) is not a suit for land (y). In a Privy Council case where a suit was brought by three out of four executors against the fourth executor for his removal from the office of trustee and executor and for accounts of the assets of the deceased and for administration of his estate it was held that the suit was not one for land, and that the High Court of Madras had jurisdiction to entertain the suit though the property left by the deceased was outside jurisdiction as a part of the cause of action had arisen within the jurisdiction, and the defendant was dwelling in Madras at the time of the institution of the suit (z) In a Calcutta case it was held that the High Court may entertain a suit by an executor for a declaration and injunction (though not for possession) in respect of the estate of the testator consisting of several immovable properties provided one at least of the properties is situated within its original jurisdiction and leave of the Court is obtained it is not necessary that the cause of action should arise within the local limits or be specifically with reference to that property which is situated within those limits (a)

Every suit which has any reference to land is not a suit for land (b) In Land Mortgage Bank v Sudurudeen Ahmed Trevelyan, J said I decline to hold that wherever land has anything to do with a suit it is therefore a suit for land (c) Thus a suit by a trustee against his co trustees to enforce his right under a deed of trust to act jointly with the defendants as shebait and manager of lands dedicated to an idol in which neither the plaintiff nor the defendants has any beneficial interest is not a suit for land, and may be entertained by the High Court though the lands may be situate outside the jurisdiction (d) So a suit for an account and dissolution of partnership is not a suit for lan l l ecause one asset of the partnership happens to be a tea garden situate in the mufassal (e)

All other cases —suits for partition of movable and immovable property the latter being situated wholly outside jurisdiction —The words all other cases in this clause do not include cases of suits for immovable plus movable property They refer to cases in which immovable property is not involved Hence if A sues B for partition of movable and immovable property and the immovable property is situated wholly outside jurisdiction the suit must be dismissed as to such property even if the leave of the Court has been obtained. This is because the immov able property being situated wholly outside jurisdiction the Court has no power to grant leave to sue as regards such property (f) In such a case the plaint may be amended with the leave of the Court by omitting paragraphs which relate to immovable prop rty and the suit may be proceeded with so far as it relates to movable property (g)

Suit for land of which part is within jurisdiction —Where there are several immovable properties then if even one of them is situated within jurisdiction the Court can entertain a suit for a partition of all the properties includin, those situated outside jurisdiction provided the l ave of the Court has been first obtained. Such a case comes within the following words of cl 12 namely the said High Court shall be empowered to d termine suits of every description if in the case of suits for land, such land shall be situated either wholly or in case the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained in part within the local limits (h) But in Hatimbhai v Framro (i) some of the Judges were of opinion that the condition as to leave of the Court did not apply to suits for land where some part of the land was situate outside jurisdiction If some of the properties are situatc l within and some outside juris li tion but no leave is obtain d the Court can proceed only with the suit so far as it relates to the immovable properties situated within jurisdiction (j) Similarly if some of the properties included in a deed of mort gage are within and some outside the jurisdiction the Court has jurisdiction on leave to sue being obtaine l to entertain a suit on the mortgage in respect of all the properties including those situated outside jurisdiction (k) but not if the properties outside juris diction are the subject of a separate mortgage (l) The same rules apply where some of the properties are situated in British India and some outside British India (m) See notes above Scope of the clause

Leave of Court —The leave under this clause is a condition precedent to jurisdiction so that unless the condition is fulfilled by obtaining the necessary leave to sue the Court will have no jurisdiction to entertain the suit (n) Such leave affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction hence it mu t be obtained before the institution of the suit it cannot be granted after the suit has been in tituted. The leave granted is confined to the cau e or causes of action set forth in the pl int at the time when the leave was granted hen e the plaint cannot be amended so as to alter the cau e of action (o) But

Cl 12 if the cause of action is not altered there is no objection to an amendment (p) If a suit is brought in a Chartered High Court with leave of the Court but there is nothing on the face of the plaint to show that any part of the cause of action arose within its jurisdiction, the plaintiff may be allowed to prove by evidence that part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction and if it is necessary to amend the plaint by adding a statement that part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction the amendment may be allowed for such an amendment does not alter or add to the original cause of action (q). Where a defendant who does not reside within the jurisdiction and against whom the cause of action has arisen in part only within the jurisdiction is added after the institution of the suit leave under this clause must be obtained at the time of the application for adding him as a party though leave was obtained when the suit was originally filed (r). The force of an order granting leave to institute a suit is exhausted when the suit is instituted in pursuance of the order Hence if the suit is withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit upon the same cause of action and a fresh suit is brought there is nothing to prevent the Court from granting fresh leave to institute the fresh suit (s)

The leave under this section must be distinctly applied for and obtained. It cannot be implied from the fact that the plaintiff was granted leave to sue as a pauper (t) or from the fact that a defendant is added who does not reside within the jurisdiction (u) Nor can it be presumed from the fact that the Court orders a third party notice to be served on a party resident outside its jurisdiction. The defendant taking out such notice must apply for leave under Clause 12 and the leave must be endorsed on the notice as it is on a plaint (v) The granting of leave under this clause is discretionary (w).

Cause of action—See notes to s 20 of the Code Cause of action, Cause of action in suit on contracts and Cause of action in other suits above

If the cause of action shall have arisen in part.—It has been said in two Bombay cases that the words if the cause of action shall have arisen in part refer to a material part of the cause of action (x) There is nothing it is submitted in the language of this clause to warrant such a construction though the Court may in the exercise of its discretion refuse to grant leave to sue if a material part of the cause of action did not arise within its jurisdiction. The High Court of Madras has held that in dealing with applications for leave to sue under this clause the Court is not precluded from taking the question of convenience into consideration (y)

For other cases see notes to s 20 of the Code Cause of action in suits on contracts, and Cause of action in other suits above

Defendant—The word defendant in this clause means all the defendants where there are two or more defendants to a suit It is not sufficient that one of the defendants dwells or carries on business within the jurisdiction (z)

Jurisdiction over non resident foreigners—See notes to s 20 of the Code Suits against non resident foreigners above

The question whether the fact of carrying on business through an agent within the local limits of jurisdiction would give the Court jurisdiction over a non resident foreigner

Dwell —See notes to s 20 of the Code Dwell within the meaning of clause 12 of Letters Patent

Carries on business —See notes to s 20 of the Code above under the same head

Personally works for gain —See notes to s 20 of the Code

Suits against companies —See notes to s 20 Suits against corporation Explanation II

Suits of every description —This expression has been held to confer upon the Court matrimonial jurisdiction over Jews (c)

Ordinary jurisdiction —The ordinary jurisdiction of the High Court embraces all such as is exercised in the ordinary course of law and without any special occasion or special order being necessary therefor (d)

Appeal —The leave under this clause is granted on an ex parte application If an order is made granting leave the defendant may apply to have the order set aside or he may wait until the hearing or the legality of the order may be called in question as a separate issue for trial at the hearing of the suit (e) If the defendant does not wait until the hearing and applies to have the order granting the leave set aside and if the application is rejected he may appeal from the order rejecting the application (f) Similarly if the plaintiff applies for leave and leave is refused the plaintiff may appeal from the order (g) The appeal would be one under cl 15 of the Letters Patent

The order granting or refusing leave by one Judge cannot be superseded by another Judge except on appeal from the order (h)

Waiver —There are two classes of cases to be considered under this head, namely —

(1) where the plaintiff in his plaint alleges that part of the cause of action arose outside the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction and fails to obtain leave and the case comes on for trial

(2) where the plaintiff in his plaint alleges that the whole cause of action arose within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction but it turns out at the trial that part of the cause of action arose within and part outside the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction.

In case (1) the defendant may by appearing and pleading waive the objection to the jurisdiction Thus it was held by the High Court of Calcutta (i) following Moore v Gamgee (j) in a case where the plaintiff alleged in his plaint that part of the cause of action had arisen within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction but no leave was obtained by the plaintiff under clause 12 and the defendant without raising any objection to the jurisdiction filed his written statement and applied subsequently for a commission to examine witnesses that the defendant had waived his objection to the jurisdiction The e decisions proceeded on the ground that the absence of leave under

Cls 12, 13 this clause did not go to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court They are in accord with the observations of Sir Richard Couch in Hadjee Ismail v Hadjee Mahomed (k), where the learned Judge said that an order granting leave under clause 12 was not a mere formal order or an order merely regulating the procedure in the suit but one that has the effect of giving jurisdiction to the Court which it otherwise would not have and the judgment of Telang J in Rampurtab v Premsukh (l) in which it was said that leave under cl 12 affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction The Rangoon High Court has followed the Calcutta view (m)

As to case (2) it has been held that where the plaintiff sets up a complete jurisdiction in the Court to try the case and it turns out at the trial that the Court had not complete jurisdiction the defendant cannot be held bound by the doctrine of estoppel (n)

As to the application of s 21 of the Code see notes on that section

Suits against Secretary of State —The Secretary of State does not dwell or carry on business or personally work for gain within the meaning of the clause He cannot accordingly be sued in a Chartered High Court unless the whole cause of action has arisen within the jurisdiction of that Court or part of the cause of action has arisen within the jurisdiction and leave of the Court has been obtained (o)

13 And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have power to remove and to try and determine, as a Court of extraordinary original jurisdiction, any suit being or falling within the jurisdiction of any Court, whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, subject to its superintendence, when the said High Court shall think proper to do so, either on the agreement of the parties to that effect or for purposes of justice, the reasons for so doing being recorded on the proceedings of the said High Court

Extraordinary original civil jurisdiction

When the High Court shall think proper to do so —In a suit for immovable property instituted in the Dinagepur Court the defendant applied for its transfer to the Calcutta High Court under this clause the grounds of the application being (1) that questions of difficulty arose in the suit (2) that the defendant's witnesses lived in Calcutta and that it would be impossible for her to go to Dinagepur and take her witnesses there owing to the expenses (3) that the agreement upon which the suit was brought was executed in Calcutta and (4) that even the plaintiff resided and carried on business in Calcutta It was held that the case was a proper one for transfer to the High Court (p)

Subject to its superintendence —Note that the words used in this clause are subject to its superintendence while those used in sec 15 of the Charter Act [s 107 of the Government of India Act 1915] are subject to its appellate jurisdiction

The power of transfer contained in sec. 15 of the Charter Act has nothing to do with the power of removal conferred by the present clause and the Letters Patent make superintendence not appellate jurisdiction the condition of the exercise of the power of removal conferred by this clause. It has accordingly been held that the Court of the Political Resident at Aden being a Court subject to the superintendence of the High Court of Bombay within the meaning of the present clause the High Court of Bombay has power to remove a suit from that Court to itself for trial and determination though the Aden Court is not subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court (q)

Suit.—A contested probate proceeding is a suit and can be transferred under this clause (r)

Transfer of suit from Presidency Small Cause Court to High Court.—The High Court has power to transfer to itself a suit from the Presidency Small Cause Court and the order for such transfer can be made if allowed by the rules of the High Court by a single Judge of that Court (s)

Powers of High Court in dealing with suits transferred under this clause.—The powers of the High Court in dealing with suits transferred under this clause would seem to be confined to the powers which but for the transfer might have been exercised by the Court from which the suit is transferred (t). The Court will consider the balance of convenience (u). See Cl. 20 below

Jurisdiction of High Court to receive plaints in suits cognisable by mofussil courts.—The High Court has no power to receive a plaint which ought to be filed in a Mofussil Court and pass interim orders even if the plaint cannot be filed in that Court owing to its being closed for the summer recess (v)

Transfer of petition from Provincial Insolvency Court.—The High Court has no power under this clause to transfer to its Original Side an insolvency petition pending in a Provincial Insolvency Court (w). Further the Original Side of the High Court has no jurisdiction to transfer an Insolvency case pending in one Provincial Insolvency Court to another such Court (x)

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order under this clause (y)

Joinder of several causes of action.

14 And We do further ordain that, where plaintiff has several causes of action against a defendant, such causes of action not being for land or other immoveable property, and the said High Court shall have original jurisdiction in respect of one of such causes of action it shall be lawful for the said High Court to call on the defendant to show cause why the several causes of action should not be joined together in one suit and to make such order for trial of the same as to the said High Court shall seem fit

Cls 14, 15 Joinder of several causes of action —The word several means separate. Under this clause it is necessary that one cause of action at least should arise within the original jurisdiction of the High Court ( ) Where a suit is founded upon two causes of action one of which is alleged to have arisen partly within the jurisdiction of the Bombay High Court and the other wholly outside the jurisdiction the High Court has power after granting leave to sue in respect of the former cause of action und[er] clause 12 to allow the plaintiff to join the latter in the same suit There is nothing in the present clause to show that the power of the Court to make such an order under this clause is limited to cases where one of the causes of action has arisen wholly within the jurisdiction (a) The jurisdiction of the High Court to pass an order under this clause in regard to joinder of cause of action is not taken away by the plea of want of jurisdiction which the defendant may raise in respect of a cause of action so joined (b)

Such causes of action not being for land —This expression means exclu[din]g any cause of action which is for land (c)

15 And We do further ordain that an appeal shall lie to the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal from the judgment (not being a judgment passed in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction in respect of a decree or order made in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by a Court subject to the superintendence of the said High Court, and not being an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction, and not being a sentence or order passed or made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under the provisions of section 107 of the Government of India Act, or in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction) of one Judge of the said High Court or one Judge of any Division Court, pursuant to section 108 of the Government of India Act, and that notwithstanding anything hereinbefore provided an appeal shall lie to the said High Court from a judgment of one Judge of the said High Court or one Judge of any Division Court, pursuant to section 10[8] of the Government of India Act, made [on or after the first day of February, 1929] in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction in respect of a decree or order made in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by a Court subject to the superintendence of the said High Court, where the Judge who passed the judgment declares that the case is a fit one for appeal, but that the right of appeal from other judgments of Judges of the said High Court or of such Division Court shall

Amendment —The above clause except the words enclosed in rectangular brackets is clause 15 as amended by the Letters Patent of 1928 which came into force on the date of publication in Calcutta on the 11th January 1928 in Bombay on the 27th January 1928 and in Madras on the 13th January 1928 Clause 10 of the Allahabad Letters Patent clause 13 of the Rangoon Letters Patent clause 10 of the Lahore Letters Patent and clause 10 of the Patna Letters Patent have been similarly amended and they came into force respectively on the 28th January 1928 2nd February 1928 8th February 1928 and 30th January 1928 The previous Letters Patent were as follows —

And We do further ordain that an appeal shall lie to the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal from the judgment (not being an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction and not being a sentence or order passed or made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under the provisions of section 107 of the Government of India Act 1915 or in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction) of one Judge of the said High Court or one Judge of any Division Court pursuant to section 13 of the said recited Act and that an appeal shall also lie to the said High Court from the judgment (not being a sentence or order as aforesaid) of two or more Judges of the said High Court or of such Division Court whenever such Judges are equally divided in opinion and do not amount in number to a majority of the whole of the Judges of the said High Court at the time being but that the right of appeal from other judgments of the Judges of the said High Court or of such Division Court shall be to Us Our heirs or successors in Our or Their Privy Council as hereinafter provided

The effect of the amendments made in 1928 is—

(1) the exclusion of a right of appeal from a judgment passed by a single Judge sitting in second appeal unless the Judge who passed the judgment grants a certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal There is no question of grant of certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal in the case of two Judges composing a Division Bench differing in opinion (d)

(2) the exclusion of a right of appeal when the Judges of a Division Bench are equally divided in opinion This case is provided for by the amendment of clause 36

There is as before an unqualified right of appeal from the judgment of a single Judge on the original side

As to amendment no (1) it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that it had no retrospective effect and that it could not apply to suits filed before the amended Letters Patent came into force (e) The clause was therefore again amended by adding the words in rectangular brackets namely on or after the first day of February 1929 The result is that there is no right of appeal from the judgment of a single Judge sitting in second appeal in cases where the judgment is pronounced after the 1st February 1929 whatever may be the date when the suit was filed unless a certificate is granted declaring that the case is a fit one for appeal (f)

Cl 15

Meaning of "judgment" as used in this clause —

1 Calcutta High Court—The leading case on the subject is that of The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v. The Oriental Gas Co (g) decided by the High Court of Calcutta so far back as 1872 In that case Couch, C J said "We think judgment in cl 15 means a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties by determining some right or liability It may be either final or preliminary or interlocutory, the difference between them being that a final judgment determines the whole cause or suit, and a preliminary or interlocutory judgment determines only a part of it, leaving other matters to be determined. This definition is now of some antiquity and is rapidly becoming, if it has not already become, almost classical (h) The point actually decided in The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v. The Oriental Gas Co was that no appeal lies under this clause from an order directing the issue of a mandamus to the Justices of the Peace for Calcutta to compel them to refer to arbitration a question of compensation The above decision was followed by a decision of the same Court in Hadjee Ismail v. Hadjee Mahomed (i) where it was held that an appeal lies under this clause from an order refusing to set aside an order granting leave to sue to the plaintiff under cl 12 of the Letters Patent Referring to the said order Couch, C J said "It is not a mere formal order or an order merely regulating the procedure in the suit but one that has the effect of giving a jurisdiction to the Court which it otherwise would not have And it may fairly be said to determine some right between them, viz the right to sue in a particular Court and to compel the defendants who are not within its jurisdiction to come and defend the suit, or if they do not, to make them liable to have a decree passed against them in their absence In a later case Garth, C.J said "I think that the word 'judgment' means a judgment or decree which decides the case one way or the other in its entirety, and that it does not mean a decision or order of an interlocutory character which merely decides some isolated point not affecting the merits or the result of the entire suit (j) In a recent case Rankin, C J said "The mere circumstance that an order puts in peril the finality of a decision given in the respondent's favour does not of itself make that order a judgment (k)

The definition of 'judgment' in the case of Justices of the Peace for Calcutta was adopted by a majority of the same High Court in a later case where it was held that an appeal lies under this clause from an order made by a single Judge of that Court under O 45, r 15 refusing to transmit for execution an Order of His Majesty in Council (m) The decision was affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council (n) Referring to the judgment of the majority their Lordships said "These learned Judges held (and their Lordships think rightly) that whether the transmission of an order under r 15 [now O 45, r 15] would or would not be a merely ministerial proceeding, Mr Justice Pontifex [whose order was appealed from] had in fact exercised a judicial discretion and had come to a decision of great importance which, if it remained, would conclude any rights of Kalisunders for an execution in this suit They held, therefore, that it was a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 In a later case [illegible] C J said that the definition of 'judgment' given by Couch C J had never been regarded as absolutely exhaustive and that in every case where the Court was called upon to decide whether the decision under appeal was or was not a judgment' regard must be had to the nature of the order (o)

2 Bombay High Court—The definition of judgment as given in the two Calcutta cases cited above has been adopted by the High Court of Bombay In Miya Mahomed v Zorabi (p) Scott C J referring to the above Calcutta cases said For a considerable number of years in this Court those two decisions (q) have to my knowledge been regarded as the leading decisions to be followed on the question whether an order in any particular case is a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent The leading Bombay case is Sonbai v Ahmedbhai decided in the year 1872 (r)

3 Madras High Court—Turning now to the Madras decisions the earlier leading case on the subject was De Souza v Coles (s) decided in the year 1868 The modern leading case is that of Tuljaram v Alagappa (t) decided by a Full Bench of that Court in 1910 In the former case Bittlestone J said The word judgment cannot be limited to the final judgment in the suit but must be held to have the more general meaning of any decision or determination affecting the rights or the interest of any suitor or applicant When the language giving the appeal is so general in its terms as that contained in the 15th clause of the Charter it is we think impossible to prescribe any limits to the right of appeal founded upon the nature of the order or decree appealed from This definition has now been rejected as too wide and instead thereof we have another definition of the term judgment laid down in Tuljaram's case In that case White C J said as follows —

The test seems to me to be not what is the form of the adjudication but what is its effect in the suit or proceeding in which it is made If its effect whatever its form may be and whatever be the nature of the application on which it is made is to put an end to the suit or proceeding so far as the Court before which the suit or proceeding is pending is concerned or if its effect if it is not complied with is to put an end to the suit or proceedings I think the adjudication is a judgment within the meaning of the clause An adjudication on an application which is nothing more than a step towards obtaining a final adjudication in the suit is not in my opinion a judgment within the meaning of the Letters Patent I think too an order on an independent proceeding which is ancillary to the suit (not instituted as a step towards judgment but with a view to rendering the judgment effective if obtained)—e g an order on an application for an interim injunction or for the appointment of a receiver is a judgment within the meaning of the clause

It will be seen that the definition of judgment as stated by White C J is wider than that in Justice of the Peace for Calcutta and narrower than the one in De Souza v Coles Referring to the former case White C J said that he was not prepared to say as was said in that case that judgment within the meaning of this clause must be a decision which affects the merits by determining some right or liability The learned Chief Justice added I think the decision may be a judgment for the purposes of the clause though

Cl 15 it does not affect the merits of the suit or proceeding and does not determine any question of right raised in the suit or proceeding The result is that some orders which have been held not to be appealable by the Calcutta High Court have been held to be appealable by the Madras High Court e g an order under cl 13 of the Letters Patent transferring a suit from a subordinate Court to the High Court (u) Such an order of transfer is appealable in Madras as it puts an end to the suit as it stood in the Court from which it was transferred while an order refusing a transfer is not appealable as the proceedings are allowed to go on (v) Referring to the definition of judgment in De Souza v Coles the learned Chief Justice said that it was too wide

4 Allahabad High Court—L P cl (10)—In Allahabad it has been generally held that no order which is appealable under s 104 and O 43 r 1 is appealable under the present clause (w) And further no appellate order from which a second appeal is excluded under section 104 can be appealed from under this clause (x) Conversely an order from which an appeal is allowed under s 104 and O 43 r 1 to the High Court from a subordinate Court is an order from which an appeal will lie under this clause (y) The only definition hitherto given by that Court of the word judgment is that it must be such a judgment on the part of all the learned and honourable Judges who may constitute a Bench as disposes of the suit or the appeal before it (z) See notes to s 104 Letters Patent appeal

5 Lahore High Court—L P cl (10)—The High Court of Lahore has adopted the definition of judgment as given by White C J in Tuljaram's case referred to above under the head Madras High Court (a) In a recent case it was held that the expression judgment in this clause is not synonymous with the word decree as defined in sec 2 of the Code (b)

6 Rangoon High Court—L P cl (13)—In a recent Full Bench case (c) the High Court of Rangoon held that the word judgment in cl 13 of the Letters Patent is intended to cover an order as well as a decree but the effect of the judgment must be such as to put an end to the suit or proceeding so far as the Court before which the suit or proceeding is pending is concerned or if its effect if it is not complied with is to put an end to the suit or proceeding If it has this effect the adjudication is a judgment otherwise not The decision of an issue which has the effect of allowing a suit to proceed does not affect the merits or result of the whole suit in that it does not decide the case one way or another and is therefore not a judgment The decision of a Judge upon a preliminary issue is not binding on his successor and the Judge himself can change his mind on more mature consideration

Interlocutory Order—All the High Courts are now agreed that no appeal lies under this clause from an order merely regulating procedure in a suit or from an order

Whether wrong exercise of discretion may be a ground of appeal—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the fact of a matter being within the discretion of the original Judge is a ground for refusing to entertain the appeal (r). On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Madras that the fact that the making of an order was a matter of discretion is not a ground for refusing to entertain an appeal though it may be a good reason for declining to interfere with that discretion in appeal (s)

Orders in proceedings other than suits and appeals—A judgment within the meaning of this clause need not be an adjudication in a suit or appeal as technically understood. An adjudication which terminates what may be called an original petition like an application for the custody of a minor may be a judgment so as to be appealable under this clause The following is a list of such adjudications —

1 Habeas corpus—An appeal lies under this clause from an order deciding the claim of relatives to the custody of a minor on a writ of habeas corpus (t).

2 Leave to sue under cl 12 of the charter —An appeal lies from an order refusing to set aside an order granting leave to sue under cl 12 of the Letters Patent and also from an order refusing to grant leave to sue See notes to cl 12 above Appeal

3 Administrator General's Act 3 of 1913 —An appeal lies from an order allowing to the Administrator General commission at a certain rate (u).

4 Probate and Administration Act 1881 s 90 [now Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 s 307] —An appeal lies from an order purporting to be made under s 90 of the Probate and Administration Act at the instance of a beneficiary in a case in which there is no restriction imposed by the will on the power of the executor to sell immovable property forming part of the estate of the deceased. Such an order is really one made without jurisdiction (v) An appeal also lies from an order granting probate (w)

5 Limitation Act s 5 —It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that no appeal lies from an order refusing to excuse the delay in filing an appeal or application (x) The High Court of Bombay has held that an appeal does lie from such an order (y)

6 Mandamus —It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the leading case of The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v The Oriental Gas Co (z) that no appeal lies from an order which directs a mandamus to issue to a public body to compel them to refer a question of compensation to arbitration, the reason given being that such an order does not determine any question whatever between the parties but only initiates proceedings by which the liability of the public body to make compensation is to be ascertained and determined. This decision was dissented from by White C J in the Madras case of Tuljaram v Alagappa (a)

7 Contempt —An appeal lies from an order of committal for contempt (b) as well as from an order refusing an application to commit for contempt of Court (c)

8 Vice Admiralty jurisdiction —An appeal lies from the decision of a single Judge of a Chartered High Court exercising Admiralty or Vice Admiralty jurisdiction (d)

9 Arbitration Act 9 of 1899 —An appeal lies under this clause from an order refusing to enlarge time for the submission of an award remitted to the umpire (e) or to set aside an award made and filed under the Arbitration Act (f) There is a conflict of opinion whether an order refusing to stay proceedings under sec 17 of the Arbitration Act is a judgment it being held in some cases that it is (g) while in some that it is not (h) An order returning an award under the Arbitration Act for notice of filing to be given to the parties is not a judgment (i)

10 Land Acquisition Act 1 of 1894 —See notes below Land acquisition appeal

11 Indian Companies Act 6 of 188? —No appeal lies from an order refusing an application under s 169 of the Indian Companies Act for extension of time for serving notice of an appeal under that Act (j) An order depriving a creditor of his right to establish his claim in winding up proceedings is appealable (k)

12 Income Tax Act 1922 —No appeal lies from the decision of a single Judge in a Reference under s 66 of the Income Tax Act (l)

Orders made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction —The words not being an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction were added into this clause by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1919 The addition of these words makes it clear that no appeal lies under this clause from orders made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction (m) An interlocutory order on a civil revision petition is made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction and is not appealable (n) See notes to s 115 Appeal

Orders made in the exercise of the power of superintendence —The words not being a sentence or order passed or made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under the provisions of section one hundred and seven of the Government of India Act 1915 were added into this clause by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1919 The addition of these words makes it clear that no appeal lies under this clause from orders made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s 107 of the Government of India Act 1915

Declares that the case is a fit one for appeal —The requisition of a certificate of fitness for appeal only applies in the case of a judgment of a single Judge in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction (o) The Bombay High Court has held that this provision is retrospective (p) On the other hand the Allahabad High Court considers that no certificate is necessary if the judgment appealed from was delivered before publication of the amending Letters Patent (q) The Calcutta High Court in a Full Bench has held that it only applies to suits filed on or after the date of publication of the amendment (r) and the Madras High Court has taken the same view (s)

Points on which appeal may be heard —It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (t) Patna (u) and Lahore (v) that an appellant is not entitled in an appeal under this clause to be heard on points which have not been raised before the Judge from whose judgment the appeal is preferred (w)

Necessaries supplied to a ship—It was settled to be the law in England that prior to the passing of 3 and 4 Vict c 65 the Court of Admiralty had no jurisdiction in the case of necessaries supplied to a ship though perhaps it occasionally purported to exercise the jurisdiction where not prohibited (m) The same view has obtained in India (n) but there is a difference of opinion as to whether the extended powers under 3 and 4 Vict c 65 and 24 Vict c 10 became vested in the Indian High Court by virtue of the several Letters Patent (o) Assuming that the High Court in its Admiralty jurisdiction had no jurisdiction over claims for maritime necessaries under any previous enactment such jurisdiction would now rest on the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act 1890 which vests in it the power described in sec 5 of the Admiralty Act 1861 [24 Vict c 10]. The effect of the two Acts is to invest the Indian High Courts with jurisdiction over claims for necessaries supplied to a ship elsewhere than in the port to which the ship belongs unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the Court that at the time of the institution of the suit the owner is domiciled in British India or Burma (p)

33 And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have and exercise criminal jurisdiction as may now be exercised by the said High Court as a Court of Admiralty or of Vice Admiralty, or otherwise in connection with maritime matters or matters of prize

Matrimonial Jurisdiction

Our subjects professing the Christian religion —The High Court has no jurisdiction under this clause to grant a decree for restitution unless both parties are Christians It has therefore no jurisdiction under this clause to grant such a decree when the petitioner is a Christian but the respondent is a Parsi Nor is any such jurisdiction conferred upon it in suits for restitution of conjugal rights by the Indian Divorce Act 1869 (r) See Indian Divorce Act s 4

Respondent not within the Presidency—The High Court has no jurisdiction to grant a decree for restitution against a respondent who was absent from the Presidency at the time the suit was instituted and remains absent But residence at date of suit of both spouses whatever the domicile is sufficient to give jurisdiction in suits of this nature (s)

Appeal When an application is made to the High Court under s 195 clause (6) Cls of the Criminal Procedure Code to revoke a sanction granted by lower Court or to give a sanction refused by it and the Judges composing the bench hearing the application are equally divided in opinion the case is governed by the present clause and not by s 42 or s 439 of that Code (x)

A Full Bench of the Madras High Court (y) has recently held that in the case of an equal division of opinion between the Judges of the High Court in an appeal preferred to it under the Code of Civil Procedure the procedure to be adopted by the High Court is governed by cl 36 of the Code of Civil Procedure and not by sec 98 of the Code of Civil Procedure See notes to sec 98 above Letters Patent Appeal.

Civil Procedure

Regulation of proceedings—civil cases

37 And We do further ordain that it shall be lawful for the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, from time to time, to make rules and orders for the purpose of regulating all proceedings in civil cases which may be brought before the said High Court, including proceedings in its Admiralty, Vice Admiralty, Testamentary, Intestate and Matrimonial Jurisdiction, respectively Provided always that the said High Court shall be guided in making such rules and orders as far as possible by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure being an Act passed by the Governor General in Council, and being Act No VIII of 1859, and the provisions of any law which has been made, amending or altering the same, by competent legislative authority for India

Appeals to Privy Council

Power to appeal

39 And We do further ordain that any person or persons may appeal to Us, Our heirs and successors in Our or Their Privy Council in any matter not being of criminal jurisdiction from a final judgment, decree or order of the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal made on appeal and from any final judgment, decree, or order made in the exercise of original jurisdiction by Judges of the said High Court or of any Division Court, from which an appeal shall not lie to the said High Court under the provisions contained in the last clause of these presents Provided, in either case, that the sum or matter at issue is of the amount or value of not less than Rupees 10,000, or that such judgment, decree, or order shall involve, directly or indirectly, some claim, demand or question to or respecting property amounting to or of the value of not less than Rupees 10,000, or from any other final judgment, decree or order made either on appeal or otherwise aforesaid, when the said High Court shall declare that the case is a fit one for appeal to Us, Our heirs or successors in Our or Their Privy Council Subject always to such rules and orders as are now in force, or may, from time to time, be made respecting appeals to Ourselves in Council from the Courts of the said Presidency, except so far as the said existing rules and orders respectively are hereby varied, and subject also to such further rules and orders as We may, with the advice of Our Privy Council, hereafter make in that behalf

Decisions appealable to the Privy Council—No appeal lies to His Majesty in Council under this clause unless—

(i) the decision from which an appeal is sought to be preferred is a judgment decree or order

(ii) the decision is a final one and

(iii) the decision is passed on appeal or in the exercise of original ...

The decision must amount to a judgment decree or order —A decree of a High Court in a testamentary matter is appealable to His Majesty in Council if the case is one which if it were an ordinary civil case would fulfill the conditions of sections 109 and 110 of the Civil Procedure Code ( ) But no appeal lies to the Privy Council from an award made by a High Court on appeal from a District Court under s 54 of the Land Acquisition Act 1894 Such an award is not a judgment decree or order within the meaning of this clause (a) Similarly no appeal lies from a decision of the High Court upon a case referred by the Chief Revenue Authority under s 1 of the Income Tax Act 1918 The judgment given on such a reference is merely advisory ( )

The judgment decree or order must be final —See notes to s 109 of the Code under the head Final s 288 above

The final judgment decree or order must be one made on appeal or in the exercise of original jurisdiction —Cl 10 of the Charter empowers the High Court to deal with professional misconduct by suspension or removal An order made under that clause is not in the exercise either of the original or appellate jurisdiction of the High Court and is not therefore appealable to His Majesty in Council ( ) But an order made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s 15 of the High Courts Act (d) [now s 107 of the Government of India Act 1915] or in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction under section 115 of the Code (e) is appealable to the Privy Council. It may here be stated that cl 15 of the Letters Patent was amended by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1919 by adding into the clause certain words which make it clear that no appeal lies to the High Court under that clause from an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction or from an order made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s 107 of the Government of India Act 1915 But if the order in revision is made by a single Judge section 111 of the Code bars an appeal to the Privy Council (f)

"Made on appeal" —An order made by the High Court rejecting an application to amend a decree passed by that Court on appeal is not an order made on appeal within the meaning of this clause (g) nor is an order made by the High Court rejecting an application to review a judgment passed on appeal (h) Such an order is not an order made on appeal against the judgment sought to be reviewed it is an order in the appeal in which the judgment sought to be reviewed was given ( )

Powers of the Indian Legislature preserved

44 And We do further ordain and declare that all the provisions of these Our Letters Patent are subject to the legislative powers of the Governor General in Legislative Council and also of the Governor General in Council under section seventy one of the Government of India Act, 1915, and also of the Governor General in cases of emergency under section seventy two of that Act and may be in all respects amended and altered thereby

Alterations in this clause—This clause was substituted for the [illegible] clause 44 by the Amending Letters Patent of 11th March 1919 The material alteration consists in substituting the words powers of the Governor General in Legislative Council and also of the Governor General in Council for the words powers of the Governor General in Council

Legislative powers of the Governor General in Council.—The powers of the Governor General in Council to make laws are derived from the Indian Councils Act of 1861 (24 and 25 Vict c 67) By sec 22 of that Act the Governor General in Council is given power to make laws in the manner provided including power to repeal or amend existing laws and including the making of laws for all Courts of justice and for all persons whatever British or Native foreigners or others But a proviso to that section enacts that there is to be no power to repeal or in any way affect any Act passed in the same session of Parliament with the Indian Councils Act. The High Courts Act of 1861 (24 and 25 Vict c 104) is such an Act and the Governor General in Council therefore has no power to alter its provisions unless such power is expressly given by the Act Thus the Governor General in Council has no power to affect the provisions of that Act as to the qualifications of the judges of the High Courts (see [illegible] or the provisions of sec 15 thereof giving the High Courts superintendence over the Courts which are subject to its appellate jurisdiction (p) But the Governor General in Council has power to remove any place or territory from the jurisdiction of a High Court the reason being that such power is distinctly recognized by sec 9 of the said Act and is also consistent with the Letters Patent (cl 44) as required by the said sec 9 (q)

Further there is a proviso to sec 22 of the Indian Councils Act which enacts that there is to be no power to repeal or in any way affect any provision of the Government of India Act of 1858 Sec 65 of the latter Act provides that all persons shall have and take the same suits remedies and proceedings against the Secretary of State for India in Council as they could have done against the East India Company [illegible] Government of India Act 1858 a British subject could sue the East India Company [illegible] his claim to any right over land. The Governor General in Council has [illegible] power under the Indian Councils Act to pass an Act taking away the right of a [illegible]

An order made in revision by a single Judge is final since the amendment of cl 15 and would therefore be appealable to Privy Council under cl 39 but as Letters Patent are subject to Imperial Legislation that appeal is taken away by Section 111 of the Code (s)

Provisions of former Letters Patent inconsistent with these Letters Patent to be void

45 And it is Our further will and pleasure that these Letters Patent shall be published by the Governor General in Council, and shall come into operation from and after the date of such publication, and that from and after the date on which effect shall have been given to them, so much of the aforesaid Letters Patent granted by His Majesty, King George The Third, as was not revoked or determined by the said Letters Patent of the fourteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty two, and is inconsistent with these Letters Patent, shall cease, determine and be utterly void, to all intents and purposes whatsoever

In Witness thereof We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent Witness Ourself at Westminster, the twenty-eighth day of December, in the twenty ninth year of Our reign
